Important Note

This is Volume 5 of a large family history project, consisting of seven separate volumes. The contents of this volume are source documents for Volume 1. You can't understand these documents without already having information from Volume 1. In fact, reading only this volume would be like reading only the footnotes in a book. Please start your journey through the project by going to Volume 1 and reading the one-page introduction near the beginning, entitled "Read This First."

To access Volume 1, go to archive.org in your search engine (for example, Google). Then enter the following title in the search field at the Internet Archive website (copy it here and paste it there): The Family History Research of David E. Witheridge and Elizabeth P. Witheridge: Their Pre-Internet Search for British and German Ancestors, with a Comprehensive Ancestor Chart and an Extensively Annotated Index of the Documents. Volume 1.

This folder contains various documents from DEW and EPW's research on her Plumb ancestors, as well as some items that found their way into the Plumb files for other reasons (for example, random news articles on people named Plumb).

The documents are mainly from the mid-1960s to the late 1970s.

Death notice for Jefferson C. Plumb.

One of Jackson's Early Educators Called Home.

Prof. Jefferson C. Plumb died at his home in Leoni Saturday, aged 76 years.

Mr. Plumb was born in Sunbury, Delaware county, O., January 31, 1818. He received a partial education in the common schools and afterwards attended Shaw's academy at Euclid, O., two terms. During this time he was studying medicine. In 1841 he came to Ypsilanti, where he practiced medicine and taught school. For ten years he was professor of natural sciences and higher mathematics in Ypsilanti seminary. In 1866 he came to Jackson and took a position in the schools here, but after a time returned to Ypsilanti, where during a chemical experiment he met with an accident which caused the loss of an eye. When he had partially recovered his sight he again came to Jackson and took charge of a select school which had been established for him by his former patrons. In 1868 he purchased a farm in Leoni, where he has since resided. Mr. Plumb was twice married, his first wife being Miss Laura M. Knapp, with whom he was united in 1843 at Ypsilanti. Six children were born to them; only one, Frank O. Plumb of Saginaw, is now living. His second marriage occurred in 1872, to Miss Gertrude B. Sager. One son was born to them, Chas. G. Plumb, who is still living at home.

The funeral will be held at the home Monday at 2 p. m.

The Jackson correspondent of the Detroit News tells of the death on Sunday at his home near that city of Professor J. C. Plumb, father of Frank G. Plumb, of Saginaw. Deceased was 76 years old, and was a veteran school teacher, of Ypsilanti. In 1866 he was principal of the Jackson public schools. In 1868 he purchased the farm on which he afterwards resided.

The funeral of Mrs. Charles B. Stever took place Saturday afternoon from the residence, 1222 South Washington avenue, Rev. William Knight officiating. The pallbearers were A. P. Brewer, T. F. Thompson, Frank Plumb, George C. Warner, J. C. Mercer and Henry Turner.

MRS. C. A. HYDE.

Death of This Estimable Lady in Cleveland Last Night.

The daily press is often called upon to chronicle news whose sadness carries sorrow to hundreds of people outside of the intimacy of relationship with the subject, but the sudden death of Mrs. C. A. Hyde at Cleveland, Ohio, last night at 10 o'clock is one of the saddest that THE NEWS has been called upon to mention for some time. The announcement will come as a shock to a large number of people in Saginaw where Mrs. Hyde's unselfish and devoted labors in the various benevolent branches of church work is well known.

Harriet Isabella Betts was born in Elyria, Ohio, June 12, 1855. She was married at Cleveland Nov. 23, 1881, to Gustavus Adolphus Hyde. Most of her married life was spent in Saginaw where Mr. Hyde was connected with the East Saginaw Gas Light company in an important capacity. Mr. Hyde died June 12, 1891, and the subject of this sketch leaves three children, the eldest but 11 years old, bereft of both father and mother. One of the children is now in this city with friends. The deceased has been afflicted for some time with diabetes and while her condition was critical no immediate apprehension was felt by her friends here, as a letter was received in Saginaw yesterday, written by the lady herself. The death therefore came suddenly, and was due probably to heart failure.

Mrs. Hyde was one of the most active members of the First Congregational church of this city. She was an untiring worker in Sunday school and mission work, and inspired zeal in all who labored with her. Last March she removed to Cleveland, much to the regret of a large circle of friends in Saginaw. The funeral will be held in Cleveland tomorrow.

TEMPORARY INSANITY.

The Result of the Coroner's Inquest on the Death of John W. Button--The Funeral to Take Place This Afternoon.

The funeral of John W. Button will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the residence, 427 South Washington avenue.

The coroner's inquest was held yesterday morning, the facts brought out in relation to the sad death of Mr. Button being as stated in THE COURIER-HERALD. The verdict of the jury in effect was that the act was committed while temporarily insane as a result of business depression and ill health.

The late Charles W. Wells had $67,000 life insurance, and two accident policies of $10,000 each.

Obituary of Frank Plumb (b. 1852). The newspaper may have been The Saginaw News. The date would have been Oct., 1934.

RETIRED MERCHANT FRANK PLUMB DIES

Former Supervisor and Member of Parks-Cemeteries Board.

Frank Plumb, retired Saginaw business man who for a number of years was engaged in the wholesale grocery business here and later in the dairy business, died Tuesday at his home, 1446 Genesee avenue. He was 82 years old and had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Plumb came to Saginaw 65 years ago from Ypsilanti and became a member of the Plumb & McCausland wholesale grocery firm. For a number of years he maintained the Plumb dairy.

Deeply interested in public parks, he was a member of the parks and cemeteries commission in 1905 and at one time served as a supervisor. He was a life member of Saginaw lodge, F. & A. M.

Born in Novi, Mich., July 17, 1852, he came to Saginaw in 1869. He was married here to Josephine Penney, who died in January, 1929.

Surviving Mr. Plumb are a daughter, Miss Alberta Plumb, principal of Crary Lincoln school, and two granddaughters, Elizabeth Helen Plumb and Catherine Plumb.

Funeral services will take place at 2 p. m. Thursday at the residence, 1446 Genesee avenue. Rev. Forrest L. Fraser will officiate and burial will be in Forest Lawn cemetery.

Obituary of Frank V. Plumb, Jr. (b. 1882). The newspaper may have been The Saginaw News; the date would have been ca. 1934. Note the erroneous mention of EPW.

FORMER SAGINAWIAN, FRANK V. PLUMB DIES

Frank V. Plumb, 52, a former Saginaw resident, died Sunday at his home, 600 Henry street, Bay City, after a long illness.

Mr. Plumb, who was a freight agent for the Southern Michigan Transportation company, was born in Saginaw March 13, 1882, and lived in Saginaw all his life until he moved to Bay City 12 years ago. He was a member of First Congregational church and of Masonic and Shrine orders. Mr. Plumb was married to Miss Ethel Hill, who survives him with his father, Frank Plumb; two sisters, Misses Alberta and Elizabeth Plumb; and one niece, Miss Catherine Plumb, all of Saginaw.

The funeral will be at 3:30 p. m., Tuesday at the Frazee funeral home. Burial will be in Forest Lawn.

← Elizabeth (EPW) was actually his niece.

Dear Sir:

According to information we have, my wife's great grandfather, Jefferson C. Plumb, was born in Sunbury, Ohio, on January 31, 1818.

We do not have any information about his parents, and we hope your records will give this.

Please send us a birth certificate for Mr. Plumb, including whatever you have about his father and mother.

I am not sure what the fee is, but I am enclosing a check for $1.00.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Dear Sir:

My wife's great grandfather was Jefferson C. Plumb. According to our information, he lived in Ypsilanti between 1841 and 1867. He was both a physician and a school teacher. From 1856 to 1867 he was Professor of Natural Sciences and Higher Mathematics at Ypsilanti Seminary. He married Laura Vail Knapp in Ypsilanti in 1845.

Is there a history of Ypsilanti, either in book form or in magazine articles? If you have a copy, would it be possible to have it sent to the Minneapolis Public Library on an inter-library loan?

Do you have any information about the Ypsilanti Seminary? Did it go out of existence, or did it combine with some other school? Where do you suppose the early records or archives are?

Was there a newspaper in or near Ypsilanti in those early days? If so, where would there apt to be a file or microfilm copies?

Any information you can give me on these matters will be greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sir:

My wife's great grandfather was Jefferson C. Plumb, who died in Leoni in 1894, but we do not have the exact date.

Is there a cemetery in or near Leoni, in which he is apt to be buried? If so, would you please pass this on to the person in charge of the cemetery records?

If there is a burial record, I should like to have a complete copy. Of course, I shall pay the required fee as soon as I receive a bill.

Mr. Plumb married Gertrude B. Sager in 1872. They had a son, Charles G. Plumb, who was still living at home in 1894. Perhaps the wife and son are also buried there. If so, I should like the information.

I shall appreciate any help you can give me.

Dear Mr. Yoss:

Your name was given to us by the reference librarian at the Jackson Public Library as one who might know something about the history and archives of the Jackson Public Schools.

My wife's great-grandfather was Jefferson C. Plumb, who about 1860 was "in charge of the Jackson schools" for a short time. Then after a brief stay in Ypsilanti, he returned to Jackson, where he was in charge of a "select school" for about two years before retiring to a farm in Leoni.

We are wondering whether there is any further information about Mr. Plumb in the archives of the Jackson schools or in any historical documents about the schools. If so, we should like very much to have photostatic or typewritten copies of such references. Of course, we'd be willing to pay for them.

What do you suppose was meant by the term "select school"? Do your records show any reference to such a school in Jackson about 1860?

I understand that you may be leaving soon for a trip to Europe. I hope you may have time for at least a brief reply before you leave.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schelfent:

Your name was given to us by the reference librarian at the Jackson Public Library as the one in charge of the old cemetery near Leoni. I'll tell you what we are trying to track down.

My wife's great-grandfather was Jefferson C. Plumb, who lived in Jackson about 1866 and died in Leoni on December 28, 1893. We are trying to secure additional information about him and his family.

First of all, is Mr. Plumb buried in the Leoni cemetery? If so, is there a burial record of which I could have a complete copy? Of course, I would pay any fee required as soon as I got a bill.

Mr. Plumb owned and lived on a farm in or near Leoni from 1866 to the time of his death. He married Gertrude B. Seger in 1872 and had a son, Charles G. Plumb, who was living at home in 1893. Are his wife and somer other relatives also buried in the Leoni cemetery? If so, we'd also like their burial records.

We have no knowledge of whether Charles G. Plumb ever married or had children. Would you by any chance have any information on this? As far as you know, is there anyone in the area who has any interest in the Leoni cemetery lot, assuming that Jefferson C. Plumb is buried there?

We do not know if Gertrude Seger was from that part of the state, but are there any Segers buried in the Leoni cemetery?

Any help you can give in our search will be greatly appreciated. We are going to be visiting in Michigan during the coming week, and we plan to stop briefly at Jackson and Leoni to see what we can find. We'll be there on Tuesday morning, August 18, and will try to get in touch with you. In the meantime, if you have any information, you could write me in care of Miss Grace E. Dear Mr. Plumb:

My wife's great-grandfather was Jefferson C. Plumb, who about 1860 was "in charge of the Jackson schools" for a short time. Then after a brief stay in Ypsilenti, where he had taught earlier, he returned to Jackson and took charge of a "select school" for about two years. He then bought a farm in Leoni, where he lived until his death on Dec. 29, 1883.

Mr. Plumb married Gertrude B. Sager (his second wife) in 1872, and they had a son, Charles G. Plumb, who was born Feb. 17, 1873, and was still living at home in 1883.

We do not know whether or not Charles G. Plumb was ever married or had any children. He asked the reference librarian at the Jackson Public Library if there were any Plumbs living in the Jackson area, and she gave us your name. Is there any chance that you are related to or a descendant of Jefferson C. Plumb?

During the coming week we are going to be visiting in Michigan. On Tuesday morning, August 11, we'll be in Jackson, especially to check at the cemetery in Leoni. If you have any knowledge of or connection with the family of Jefferson C. Plumb, we'd be very happy to talk to you.

Dear Rev. Witheridge,

I received your letter of August 9th concerning Jefferson C. Plumb.

Mr. Plumb was my great-grand-father. It would give me great pleasure to talk to you of him and other relatives. Although I work mornings, I will try to get a few hours off to see you. My older brother Lloyd will be home Tuesday morning and would be happy to see you also. In case I can't make arrangements to be here his address is 5315 Seymour, his phone 764-1740. My phone is 764-0779.

The cemetery you are looking for is the Mason. All of our relatives are buried there. It is a beautiful small country cemetery not to be confused with a larger one on Seymour before you get to ours.

My home is two houses from the cemetery. We are in the country so if you have any trouble finding us please call one of the numbers above.

It was very nice hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

Jefferson C. Plumb was 6'-4"

Jim Plumb his brother, had a farm in Mingo, Iowa, and was a minister (Bapt. or Meth.) He had 2 sons — one was a prof. heavyweight boxer — the other a prof. gambler. Jim visited in Jackson + met Lloyd's father. An inmate could make watch chain but one could break — But Jim did —

A Plumb in engineering an electrical contractor is also among starting — Thinks he could be related.

Some fellow told story for Prof. Plumb when he was a boy because of injured leg. Taught him how to make button holes + make clothes. Educated self. He + Jim were separated early because of death of parents (?)

Dear Alberta:

It was so nice to hear from you - about yourself and Helen's Elizabeth and her family. As i have just looked at the pictures of Helen and your Mother for the last time I can hardly believe that it was so far back as 1895 that we both graduated from S.E.S.H.S. The photos go to you under another cover. I know I cannot expect to be around many more years and am so glad I wrote you about the instead of leaving them for some one else to dipose of. I think the photos are very good - just as I remember your Mother and Hele.

When I sold my own home and came to live with Katherine I had to cut down on my keepsakes, letters etc. but here are five letters from Helen, which show what a dear unselfish girl she was and how tenderly she loved her young daughter.

I'm glad Elizabeth is so happily situated. This would have made her Mother very happy. Since Elizabeth is so far away it is especially nice that you have some one dear to you near by.

I wonder if such a walker as I have would be of any help to you. Since I broke my left hip the second time I have not been able to walk without assistence and find this much better and safer than crutches. It is made of aluminum tubing, is light but very strong. When I walk it takes a considerable part of my weight off my legs. There is a shop here that carries these walkers and the price is about ten dollars. I'm not much of an artist but will give you a little idea of the construction.

I, too, enjoy the radio very much but do not see TV very much as that is down stairs in the recreation room and I stay pretty much on the main floor of the house. Am anxious for the spring to come so that I can get out of doors a little more.

I'm glad Elizabeth is so happily situated. This would have made her Mother very happy. Since Elizabeth is so far away it is especially nice that you have some one dear to you near by.

I wonder if such a walker as I have would be of any help to you. Since I broke my left hip the second time I have not been able to walk without assistance And find this much better and safer than crutches. It is made of aluminum tubing, is light but very strong. When I walk it takes a considerable part of my weight off my legs. There is a shop here that carries these walkers and the price is about ten dollars. I'm not much of an artist but will give you a little idea of the construction.

I, too, enjoy the radio very much but do not see TV very much as that is down stairs in the recreation room and I stay pretty much on the main floor of the house. Am anxious for the spring to come so that I can get out of doors a little more.

Would love to hear from you at any time,

Very sincerely,

(Mrs) Lena B. Kent

THE DEATH OF REV. EARL PLUMB, ASSISTANT PASTOR OF FIRST METHODIST CHURCH saddened the community. Rev. Plumb, who had also served the Woodside Avenue Methodist Church, was well known and respected in our community. His death on Friday, November 6, brought to a close a ministry of many years. Rev. and Mrs. Plumb had been privileged to observe their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Sept. 20. We would join with the many others in expressing our Christian sympathy to the Plumb family.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICES HELD IN BAY CITY - Woodside Avenue Methodist Church, with Rev. W. L. Daniel, pastor of the Second Baptist Church preaching; West Baptist Church, with Rev. Martin Ringstrom, pastor of Messiah Lutheran Church preaching; and Memorial Presbyterian Church, with Rev. Donald Crumm, pastor of Fremont Avenue Methodist Church preaching were the locales of Union Thanksgiving Services in November. The offerings from these services were for CROP. From these services, and other local Thanksgiving Services, a total of $408.24 was sent to the Michigan CROP headquarters to be used in providing food for the needy throughout the world.

Dear Mr. Yoss:

Your name was given to us by the reference librarian at the Jackson Public Library as one who might know something about the history and archives of the Jackson Public Schools.

My wife's great-grandfather was Jefferson C. Plumb, who about 1860 was "in charge of the Jackson schools" for a short time. Then after a brief stay in Ypsilanti, he returned to Jackson, where he was in charge of a "select school" for about two years before retiring to a farm in Leoni.

We are wondering whether there is any further information about Mr. Plumb in the archives of the Jackson schools or in any historical documents about the schools. If so, we should like very much to have photostatic or typewritten copies of such references. Of course, we'd be willing to pay for them.

What do you suppose was meant by the term "select school"? Do your records show any reference to such a school in Jackson about 1868?

I understand that you may be leaving soon for a trip to Europe. I hope you may have time for at least a brief reply before you leave.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Sir:

Your letter of August 9 missed us by a few days---we left for Europe on the 7th. We returned last week and found your letter in which you enquire about Mr. Plumb.

The reason my name was given to you was because I wrote a history of our school systems as a Master's thesis. But that was 22 years ago. I looked through the history but could find no reference to a Mr. Plumb. There were many gaps in the list of school personnel.

Much of my data was from the archives in the state capital annex in Lansing. Since that time practically all the records in that building were destroyed by fire. However, as I recall my search, there was very little from the 1860's. Most of the records were slovenly kept, especially those pertaining to personnell

The newspapers of those days took very little interested in school affairs, so little could be found there. School events which would rate banner headlines today, were buried in small items among other "unimportant" news.

My thesis has been useful on a number of occasions but I am sorry to say it has been of no help to you.

Sincerely,

Fred Yoss

Plumb Family History

OUR research staff has completed a manuscript history of the name and family of PLUMB which should prove highly interesting to you.

¶ This manuscript is a genealogical and historical study of the family from earliest times. It records the origin and growth of the family in Europe; its place among the gentry there; its part in the early settlement and subsequent history of America, including service in the Revolutionary War; and its achievements and leading representatives in this country. The derivation and meaning of the name are traced; recurrent family traits are brought out; and genealogical data are set forth. A valuable bibliography is included, as well as the authoritative description of a PLUMB coat of arms.

¶ The manuscript has been compiled from the most authentic sources. Reproduced on fine paper and bound in a handsome black cover stamped in silver ink, it is suitably designed for filing among your family records or other documents.

¶ With your manuscript we will send The Romance of Coats of Arms, an illustrated, informative publication prepared by the Bureau.

¶ This card, with $2.00 (no other charge), will bring you the manuscript by return mail. If you are not delighted with it in every respect, return it within a week and your money will be refunded immediately.

¶ If your order arrives promptly we will include, at no extra cost, our specially designed Ancestry Chart (regularly 35 cents each). It measures 17 by 22 inches and contains spaces in which to record the names of your ancestors in all lines for eight generations.

If you should not be interested personally in this unusual offer, please give this card to a member of your family.

This may be Alberta E. Plumb with her father, Frank. Unfortunately, it was not labeled — but it was with various items involving her, including her obituary.

This marriage announcement (newspaper unknown), with the date "Nov. 29, '61" written by EPW, was located in a group of documents involving Albert E. Plumb. It is unknown if Mr. De Plonty was the first husband of Alberta's adopted daughter, Catherine; they had a son, Michael De Plonty.

Married Saturday

Larraine Kerr Becomes Bride

Duane Earl DePlonty, 957 Homedale, and his bride, the former Miss Larraine Sue Kerr, 572 Shattuck, are honeymooning in Acapulco, Mexico. The couple were married Saturday evening by Rev. Joseph Ablett, pastor of Kochville Methodist Church, in State Street Methodist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Kerr of Durand and Mrs. Ruth Ritchie, 2632 Genesee, and the late Earl E. DePlonty.

The bride chose a Chantilly lace over powder blue taffeta gown fashioned with a fitted bodice, Sabrina neckline and chapel train. A shell hat held her illusion veil. She carried a crescent of yellow roses and white gardenias.

Mrs. Jack Lovegrove of Perry, her sister's matron of honor, and Mrs. Delmar Fineout and Mrs. Norman Walker, bridesmaids, wore blue silk organza over taffeta dresses styled with crushed cummerbunds. They carried semi-crescents of yellow roses and white carnations.

Richard B. DePlonty was best man. Robert Shupack and Mr. Walker ushered.

The couple's wedding dinner was served at Johnnie Ryan's.

MRS. DUANE E. DePLONTY and her husband will make their home at 957 Homedale.

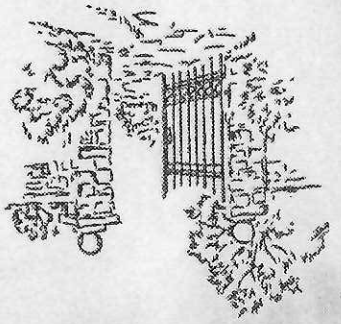
Friends may call at the funeral home from 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday. Those, who so desire, may give memorials to the Sheridan Avenue Methodist Church.

In Remembrance



The Twenty Third Psalm

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

Fixing a Comma to the Redcoats . . . . . By James Nelson Goodsell

Private Yankee Doodle, by Joseph Plumb Martin. Edited by George F. Scheer. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. 305 pp. $6.50.

As a Connecticut farm lad of 15, Joseph Plumb Martin enlisted for six months as a private in a regiment of state troops in 1776. The war shifted from New England and he took part in battles at Brooklyn, New York, Harlem, and White Plains. And when his enlistment was up, he took his discharge.

But "the ease of a winter spent at home caused me to alter my mind" and Martin reenlisted for the duration of the Revolutionary War. In all, he spent nearly seven years in uniform and rose to the rank of sergeant.

All of this and the myriad details of a soldier's life were recorded by Martin years after his service in a book called "Narrative of Some of the Adventures, Dangers and Sufferings of a Revolutionary Soldier, Interspersed with Anecdotes of Incidents That Occurred Within His Own Observation." Only six copies of that volume are thought to exist. Indeed, until now, the work has been little known.

But Martin was a good observer of his times and his fellows. He wrote one of the few accounts of a private soldier in Revolutionary times. Diaries and journals of the period are to be found in profusion, but first-person accounts of a soldier's life are more rare.

Thus it is rewarding to have this reissue of Martin's narrative in its new and attractive format under the title "Private Yankee Doodle."

The difficulties of the common soldier—his problems in obtaining food and shelter—run through these pages, as do the simple pleasures in a soldier's life, the horseplay in the field camp and the good dinner at a private home.

Martin is a perceptive observer of the times, and he makes today's reader laugh with him as, for example, in his recounting of how General Washington arrived late at Yorktown. With great ceremony, he struck a few blows with an ax, Martin observes, in order that future writers would write that "George Washington with his own hands first broke ground at the siege of Yorktown."

All this is good copy—and a delightful reminder that the common soldier has many of the same feelings throughout all time.

"I never learned the rules of punctuation any farther than just to assist in fixing a comma to the British depredations in the state of New York; a semicolon in New Jersey; a colon in Pennsylvania . . . a note of interrogation, why we were made to suffer so much in so good and just a cause; and a note of admiration to all the world, that an army voluntarily engaged to serve their country, when starved and naked, and suffering everything short of death (and thousands even that), should be able to perserve through an eight years war, and come off conquerors at last!"

Perhaps the reason the Revolutionary Army did so well was because there were many like Private Martin—the "Private Yankee Doodle" of the title, given by George F. Scheer, who rescued the narrative from dusty archives and, as editor, has served it up in good format for the modern reader.

Perspective

J. H. Plumb

For every history book that is reviewed in the national press there must be twenty more that are never mentioned, and for these twenty there are hundreds of articles in local historical journals, in addition to an endless proliferation in learned journals. Indeed, the fabulous extent of historical activity as well as some of its more immediate pleasures cannot be appreciated unless one turns to local history or to the work of small regiments of scholars dedicated to Dr. Johnson, Edmund Burke, Tom Paine, Benjamin Franklin, etc., etc., etc., who regale each other with tidbits in the form of newsletters. Without a newsletter or a journal neither a university nor a liberal arts college can really hold up its head. I suspect that throughout America there are more men and women concerned with history than with any other intellectual activity.

Take Nebraska. After all, Nebraska has not been a state for very long; in fact, it was not admitted to the Union until 1867, but like most other Midwestern states it was historically conscious from the start and established its State Historical and Library Association in the same year that it entered the Union. Now, a hundred years later, the association has 4,500 members, a splendid building, massive archives, a flourishing journal, a healthy balance of more than $100,000; further, it discharges a public service of growing magnitude. In one year 2,500 researchers used the association's 9,812 microfilm reels of local newspapers—the Stromsburg Headlight, Hickman Enterprise, Cherry County News, and the rest. Nor is a passion for local history peculiar to Nebraskans; down in Tennessee or up in Wyoming it is just as furiously active. And in New England, of course, local history is a powerful industry: the publications of the long-established Massachusetts Historical Society fill shelf after shelf with immensely valuable record material. But today Massachusetts possesses no superiority: every state has local history and historians in abundance. Probably even Alaska has; their journal has just not come my way.

What does it all add up to? The obvious educational benefits for schoolchildren and their projects need no argument. The local historical society provides in this case a necessary and admirable public service. But the matter goes deeper than that, both socially and intellectually. The founding fathers of Nebraska knew that they were part of a remarkable historical process, and they wanted it recorded down to the last detail. They knew that Nebraska was history. Those who followed them needed roots, a feeling of belonging to a continuing society, and nothing provides this more quickly than a sense of one's past. Undoubtedly local history helps to create social identity and perhaps adds its mite to social stability. But besides social purpose, local history contains, as few other subjects do, an intellectual delight of the most varied kind for the amateur as well as the professional.

Perhaps the greatest pleasure of local history is its immediacy. It brings one face to face with ordinary men and women who once walked the streets that we walk and are now dead and almost forgotten. The bundles of letters which are so frequently the core of an article in a journal of local history have a poignancy that is rarely matched. They express hopes and fears, affection, love, want, despair; in them our common humanity is bared. Written without a thought for posterity, they reveal human character as sharply as any novel.

Even account books and bills are given human warmth by time as are the inventories of houses. These unadorned records offer insight into the frugality of our ancestors, the utter simplicity of their personal lives: they speak of the stoicism with which they faced the harsh realities of prairie, desert, or mountain. Similarly the early newspaper files tell us how the first tiny communities began so very quickly to tame the frontier; the advertisements for schools and academies, music and dancing masters, remind us that the frontier was not all saloons, gunmen, and Indians. As one turns over the passages of Nebraska History or the Tennessee Historical Quarterly, or the official publications of any of the Western states the men and women long since dead spring into a new life.

Already tens of thousands realize the joys that local history can bring. They are taking an active part in surveying archeological sites, rebuilding forts, marking historic places, sifting the huge mounds of records that flow into the archive departments, strengthening their bonds with their environment, tying themselves into the fabric of their society. I cannot imagine that anyone with curiosity, imagination, and compassion could fail to be a subscriber to one or two of these excellent journals, which are usually edited, printed, and produced with professional skill.

Almost all the great history of the twentieth century, particularly the history of Europe, has been grounded in local history: Maitland, Marc Bloch, Tawney, Trevelyan rooted their research in particular places. Between them they must have walked thousands of miles; they rarely wrote about any place without seeing it with their own eyes. Every landscape was for them a book. And they read their history in local journals, knowing that there was no other way of getting the immediacy of history and realizing that their generalizations about society had to be based on hundreds of particular examples. No professional historian can read too much local history; without this vast amateur contribution he would be lost. In local history there is something for everyone.

And the same is true of both learned journals and the new little periodicals devoted either to a great historic figure or to some facet of history whether it be satire or railway transport. Almost every aspect of history now has a journal, and soon nearly every historic figure will likewise be honored. It may seem a trifle eccentric to suggest to an average reader that he should browse in the Transactions of the American Philosophical Society. Yet it contains treasures, and not merely for the specialist. Take the Transactions, Volume 57, Part 7 (American Philosophical Society, $2). This is an exceptionally scholarly paper by Paul Kaufman entitled "The Community Library: A Chapter in English Social History," which should fascinate anyone who is interested in books and the role that they have played in social life. During the seventeenth century, when they started, libraries were earnest, moral places, normally possessing a strong puritan bias tinged with political liberalism. By the end of the eighteenth century, however, they, like our own, were flooded with cheap quasi-pornographic fiction, about which Mr. Kaufman writes with great wisdom. The whole article is full of fresh information—the borrowings of Coleridge and Southey from Bristol Public Library, the deep preoccupation of the new middle class with the slave trade in the late eighteenth century, the fascination with India, the renewed interest in radical philosophy sparked by the American Revolution—all of which come vividly alive.

Mr. Kaufman's article is only one of many that lie buried in learned journals, locked away from the general public. Indeed, as one reads journal after journal the impression grows of a vast literary world that the national press scarcely ever glances at and of scores of books that never get reviewed except in their own specialist publications. What, however, is more remarkable is the boundless enthusiasm that exists for scholarly pursuits, the delight that it must bring not merely to academics but to hundreds of thousands of ordinary men and women. A sociologist could produce a fascinating study on this neglected aspect of our cultural life.

HE should start with the little journals. I have two favorites. One is the breathless Johnson News Letter (Philosophy Hall, Columbia University), which covers the astonishing cult of Dr. Samuel Johnson. He appears to be venerated throughout the world; there is even an active Johnson Society in Nasser's Egypt! But the fun of this journal is its intellectual juggling feat of mentioning with pertinent comment anything up to thirty books in a single tiny page, every one of which is pervaded by a sense of intellectual joy. My second favorite journal is the Transactions of the Irish Georgian Society (Desmond Guinness, Leixlip Castle, Dublin). These booklets are as attractive as they are ebullient. Who could resist articles written by a gentleman called "The Knight of Glin"? About this society there is a sparkling love of beauty combined with ruthless dedication of purpose.

These small journals, which arrive unexpectedly at the breakfast table, are incredibly cheap, but in time, they become exceedingly valuable. Collections of little magazines, runs of learned journals have appreciated in value almost as much as pictures by French Impressionists. Anyone who loves books should subscribe to one learned journal and two little ones—for pleasure and for profit. I assure you a new world will open up: a fresh dimension of intellectual delight.

We Bombed in New Haven, by Joseph Heller (Knopf. 196 pp. $4.50), is an anti-war play by the author of "Catch-22." Tom F. Driver has written a book about the French dramatist Jean Genet.

By TOM F. DRIVER

WHEN JOSEPH HELLER'S We Bombed in New Haven bombed in New Haven last winter, one thought that might be the last of it. It's hard to keep a good man down, however, even with the weight of a bomb on his shoulders. Above the sea of criticism Heller now emerges with the play in two new garbs, waiting for the next approaching waves. Knopf publishes the reading version, and Jason Robards, Jr., and Diana Sands are set to appear in the Broadway production come October. So we shall see Robards in the role that requires him to play himself as well as Starkey, the Air Force captain who sends people on missions of death and who marries Ruth, the Red Cross worker, and fathers a child whom he will have to send on missions of death, and all this played out in a spirit of Pirandellan jeu de théâtre and Grand Guignol.

I have some advice for Heller. I could just as well call him up and give it to him on the telephone, but as it may have some wider interest, I give it to him here and let him call me up on the telephone. "For the love of Mike, get off the radio," I'd say. "For the love of Ivy, you're up against the wall," I'd say. "For the love of God, remember it's dangerous in New Haven, and either write another novel, even if it's only half as good as Catch-22, or give us a play of witty prose, but do not under any circumstances imagine that you belong to the theatrical avant garde." And then, if he were still on the line, which is most unlikely, I'd have to explain why there should be such a tirade from someone who thinks Heller is great and Catch-22 the greatest and We Bombed in New Haven a dud of the first magnitude.

I know he would rather not hear anything more about the virtues of that famous novel, the renown of which he bears like a cross. But the fact is that when he wrote it he was himself, and when he wrote We Bombed he was somebody else, and it's time for the real Joseph Heller to stand up.

The problem is substance. By which I don't mean moral content or weighty thought or anything like that. We Bombed is a very moral sort of a play, and probably no one is going to think that Heller is not serious about it or that a message against killing is out of place in our day. "It's about time," as Heller says twice in the play. The play is about time: the time that we are the servers of until the time we become victims, or until the time when the victims are our own sons. "They are all my sons," as I think a certain playwright said some years ago.

Here indeed is moral substance, but not the substance I'm concerned about first. No author's moral substance is entertaining or convincing without the presence of another kind, which is that of his métier. If an artist, craftsman, or doodler of any kind does not make us feel that he has the stuff of his métier grasped in hand so that we can hear it, feel it, taste it, see it, smell it, then nothing else he does matters. It remains abstract, while we go to art for the concrete feel of emotion and thinking.

Catch-22 was a success because, whatever else one might care to say about it, its language was substantial, in my second meaning of the term. However whimsical was that language, you could hear, feel, taste, see, and smell it. It would run with bases loaded, trip, roll like a ball, and get up to dust itself off at home plate. Change the figure: Heller would pull a sentence like taffy, turn it by magic into a rubber strand, and let it snap in your face. Then for some reason you could see better than

The past is disappearing

By J. H. PLUMB
Professor of history, Christ's College, Cambridge
In The Center magazine

Until very recent times, all human beings have been educated by the past. The curriculum of the 18th and 19th centuries was always backward looking. In England in those centuries, even though we were involved in an industrial revolution of considerable magnitude, education was based firmly on the classics.

England's greatest educational innovator of the 19th century, Thomas Arnold of Rugby, said that all a Christian gentleman needed was knowledge of the classics and of the Bible and he would then be fit to rule and to carry out his imperial destiny. Science, Arnold thought, was interesting but of less importance.

Today the decline in classical education has been like an avalanche. Cambridge and Oxford, conservative institutions that they are, have carried on a long rearguard fight to preserve the study of Latin and Greek as a central part of their disciplines.

Until the early 1950s, we even insisted that any scientist coming to the university should pass an examination in Latin. But by then that had become a farce and in the end it was abolished. Today, the classical discipline has only a handful of people, sometimes as few as 30 or 40, registering in any one year. This represents a complete breakdown of the past in the classical sense.

In the schools, moreover, the old traditional subjects are being more and more firmly pushed to one side, with less and less time allowed to them. Social studies are replacing historical studies. Science and its disciplines are occupying far more hours of individual teaching. In some of the sciences, the teaching methods of the past were quasi-historical. For example, in mathematics one started with Euclid and gradually worked through the history of mathematics. Now that, too, is gone with the introduction of the new math.

The past has also played an important part in destiny. There is a long history of using the past to try to interpret the future. In earliest times, if one studied the conjunction of omens and events, perhaps later on when a similar situation arose one would be able to interpret what was likely to happen.

If we look at any interpretation of the past, from 1500 onwards, we find the sense that the past, properly interpreted, implies a destiny for a given society or for the human race as a whole.

The interpretation of the history of England for the last 400 years shows that the British have a peculiar destiny as guardians of liberty, that by their very nature they are destined to rule, that implicit in their history is the habit of authority. And Britain had no monopoly in this kind of interpretation of history.

Most nationalist pasts written over the last 200 or 300 years contain the same thing. American history of the 19th century is no freer from that sense of special destiny than was English history. Wasn't it Washington Irving who said that the whole world will be judged in the light of America's history because it was going to be the history of freedom and liberty?

In the more generalized histories of the modern period one finds the same thing. Historians who interpret human history as the development of progress imply that that progress will continue. With social Darwinism, one gets the same thing — that, while there might be combat between peoples and nations, this does lead to the success of the fittest.

If we look at Marxism, we find the same thing, an interpretation of history that will give one a key to the future. The Marxist interpretation of the past shows that there is a conflict of classes that cannot be stopped. There will be a final collapse into social revolution from which will emerge a dictatorship of the proletar-

If we look at Marxism, we find the same thing, an interpretation of history that will give one a key to the future. The Marxist interpretation of the past shows that there is a conflict of classes that cannot be stopped. There will be a final collapse into social revolution from which will emerge a dictatorship of the proletariat and the classless society. Destiny is implicit in the Marxist interpretation of history. So in Marxism the past is still a living force.

But the interpretation of the past as implying a destiny for a given society or collection of societies is weakening in the West. Few of us now think that an interpretation of Britain's history is likely to indicate where we are going over the next 50 to 100 years. Few would be willing to speculate on America's past as implying any sort of immediate future.

That sense of manifest destiny, implicit in national histories, has greatly weakened. It is not dead, but there are signs of breakdown — not, of course, in the East among Communist peoples, and perhaps not among groups who are still hoping for a social revolution and who need the past to bolster up their hopes.

A belief in the past as destiny is the result of man's hope as much as anything. One has got to reek with hope if one is going in for revolutionary activity. One must also spread hope. So in Marxist societies the past as destiny is still a living force.

Today, the desire and need of the blacks to develop a viable black history, a black past, is obvious. In England there was a great deal of rather superior laughter when the Ghanian historians, after their independence, began to claim the invention of the alphabet and even the steam engine. But that did not seem to be any more absurd than the claim by societies which had never really permitted liberty for much of their population that they invented liberty.

THE RULES OF CHAOS, by Stephen Vizenczey (McCall, $6.95): Essays on the unpredictability of life.

THE DEATH OF THE PAST, by J. H. Plumb, (Houghton Mifflin, $5): A case for useful study of history.

Reviewed by JAMES NAIDEN

To be able to identify with the present is desirable, although admittedly difficult during these heavy days — when the immediate past is rampant with cruelty and morbid stupidity. And the future?

Well, what can one really say about that, except to insist on groping within the confines of the present until "tomorrow" comes, until — perhaps — the situation in which we find ourselves gets better?

Such generalized concepts are all that we really have to go by, because "now" is so constantly elusive.

The French novelist and essayist, Arthur Clavis, has aptly described the problem: "The preoccupation with the past is just as dangerous as fantasizing about the future: We do not have the inner resources necessary to confront the present on its own terms.

"Reality is ever-changing — like a woman — just when one thinks he has the situation in hand, something new has been added or taken away. The dilemma is always there, but it is never the same."

The recent publication of two books, Stephen Vizinczey's "The Rules of Chaos" and J. H. Plumb's "The Death of the Past," is a hopeful sign that perhaps now we will be get-ber of subjects to illustrate his thesis: an "interview" with Napoleon in the Fontainebleau gardens; a long, absorbing essay on the current significance of the novels of the 19th-century French writer, Stendhal; a critique of the controversial novel by William Styron, "The Confessions of Nat Turner"; a discussion of the McCarthy presidential campaign of 1968 and how the absence of "President McCarthy" is a noticeable factor today; and many personal referrals — to Vizinczey's own situation, his family and his experiences since leaving Hungary after the unsuccessful uprising in Budapest against the Soviets in 1956.

Occasionally, Vizinczey borders on the truistic and even tends to indulge in cliches in order to make his point. Yet, he comes across in fine style and with uncommon perception into those aspects of history and life in general that we thought we knew so well before.

While the approach is radically different than in Vizinczey's book, Plumb's "The Death of the Past" makes for an excellent companion volume. Plumb, an English historian, is perhaps best known to American readers for his prolific and widely published magazine articles.

Like so many short books of its kind, "The Death of the Past" is an outgrowth of a series of lectures. Yet it is a cohesive book, embodying the wisdom and originality of insight that most historians, not to say most writers, could only hope to achieve.

It is Plumb's contention that the past is essentially man's destiny in that, as man lives, he creates a past. But the study of this past must be on a relevant, instructive basis — through the didactic, useful discipline of history:

"The death of the past does not deny a future for history. Each one of us is an historical being, held in a pattern created by time, and to be unconscious of our historical selves is fraught with dangers. History, however, is not the past. The past is always a created ideology with a purpose, designed to control individuals, or motivate societies, or inspire classes.

"Nothing has been so corruptly used as concepts of the past. The future of history and historians is to cleanse the story of mankind from those deceiving visions of a purposeful past. The death of the past can only do good as long as history flourishes . . . The past served only the few; perhaps history may serve the multitude."

As we move on into the uncertain '70s, such sober and thoughtful analysis is refreshing, not to say encouraging. Plumb offers a penetrating discussion of the ficklesness and undependability of the fluid present, as it becomes the past, as it consumes the future.

Plumb and Vizinczey have made inestimable contributions by presenting their respective insights for anyone who understands the English language, within the quite readable pages of these two books.

The recent publication of two books, Stephen Vizinczey's "The Rules of Chaos" and J. H. Plumb's "The Death of the Past," is a hopeful sign that perhaps now we will be getting some illuminating discourse on this subject — for each of these volumes is a different treatment of this same social and intellectual malaise.

Vizinczey's previous book, a novel entitled "In Praise of Older Women," was widely acclaimed several years ago. Vizinczey has turned to non-fiction for this new book, although one can readily see the makings of some intriguing fiction within the pages of "The Rules of Chaos."

Vizinczey's principal contention is that the element of chance presents the most crucial argument against counting on anything in the future. Although we can state clearly what we would like the future to be — as many Americans did when they supported Sen. Eugene McCarthy for the presidency in 1968 — the unpredictable vicissitudes of this life can throw anything and everything awry.

Vizinczey uses a number of well-published magazine articles.

Dinner at the Zimbelmans': One by one, the children move away

Frank's orchestra mixes oldies with polkas. Country and Western is out, despite what the Easterner may think: "I'm a hick but I can't stand that stuff and no one else I know can either," says Don Krien, a young St. Francis farmer.

A big affair in the last few weeks, sandwiched in between the annual Cheyenne County Fair and the St. Francis Fall Golf Tournament, was the unveiling at the Farmer's Co-op of the newest John Deere tractor—$14,000, including air-conditioned cab, radio and stereo tape deck.

There's a remoteness to St. Francis that is not wholly geographical. The network evening news programs come on at 5:30 when most men are in the fields, playing golf, or at the office, and wives are fixing supper. Practically no one here saw the Democratic convention because July is wheat-harvest time, with eighteen-hour days for the entire family. But the people are not as unsophisticated as the Easterner's stereotype might have it. A well-stocked and used city library in the basement of the courthouse subscribes to more than 50 magazines, ranging from Successful Farming and Irrigation Age to Opera News, Saturday Review and Ebony (despite the absence of blacks). There's a constant flurry of concerts, lectures and programs at women's clubs, schools and churches, and a university extension course in Elements of Art was heavily subscribed this year.

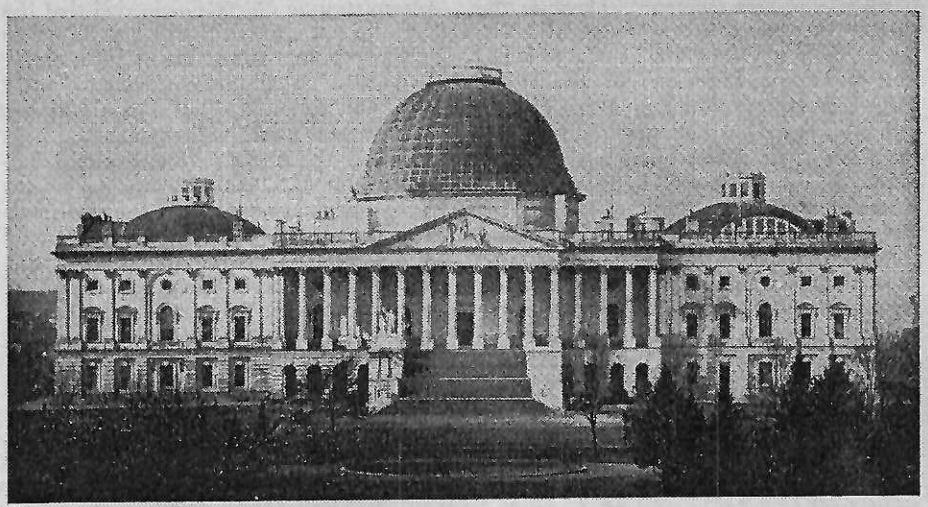
Adversity: For all their good life, St. Francis people have a gnawing apprehension that the town as it is now is dying. Farmers who have known drought, dust storms, hail, floods and ever-fluctuating prices are facing a new adversity, and it is ominously different. "We are exporting our only resource, our children," says Carl Sperry, superintendent of St. Francis's two schools and an educator here for 25 years. "There is nothing to come back to, jobs or farming." Cheyenne County's population has declined from 7,200 in the Dust Bowl 1930s to 4,200 today—a result of the small farmer being squeezed out, farms getting bigger and no new jobs opening in the town.

Raymond Zimbelman is typical of the St. Francis and Midwestern farmer. He and his wife Dorine were both born on farms in St. Francis. He attended high school here ("no one thought of college in those days, you went to the farm"), then went to work on his father's spread, which he bought in 1951. His oldest daughter, 24, is a registered nurse in nearby Yuma, Colo. Another daughter, 18, left last week for Fort Hays State College ("I'm just glad to get out of here, it's so dull living in a small town," she said on returning from seeing the town movie for the second time last week). The only son, 16, is a junior in high school, a center on the varsity football team and a calf-raising 4-H member who has helped farm since he was 10. He plans to go to college and has made it pretty clear that he doesn't want to farm. "That's just as well," says Zimbelman. "I don't know what we'd do if he wanted to."

"What we're seeing," says Zimbelman, who at 50 is considered one of the "young farmers" in town, "is the first generation of farmers who aren't turning their land over to their sons. Some boys don't want to farm. But we both can't afford to live off the one place anyway, and my son won't be able to afford starting out on his own. He'll go off to college, I'll retire and that will be the end of the farm my father homesteaded."

St. Francis did attract one new enterprise last year. Consolidated Freight Trucklines of Chicago moved twenty drivers from Chicago to St. Francis as a way station between the Denver and Kansas City route. Ironically, the twenty drivers have been moving into the farm homes abandoned by the farmers and have taken to country living with gusto: they buy horses, their children join 4-H and enter exhibits at the county fair, their wives bake bread and raise their own vegetables. The truck drivers wear nothing but cowboy boots, hats and clothes. "You'd think they were cowboys," says one native, "only the Chicago accent gives them away."

And the town has had a few urban expatriates. Arthur Kruger, 42, moved his family from Denver in 1971 and bought out the local clothing store. "Things were just getting worse and worse," Kruger now says of his old life, "—taxes, forced busing of my kids, and we just wanted the opportunity for better life we knew existed in a small town." Kruger now takes his two young sons out golfing at Riverside two or three afternoons a week, and he and his wife are active in the Lutheran Church. "We didn't know what living was till we got here," he says.



THE OLD GLORY: The earliest known daguerrotype of the Capitol was among six small silver photographic plates of historic Washington buildings discovered in a San Francisco flea market and bought recently by the Library of Congress for $12,000. Attributed to John Plumbe Jr., a well-known photographic pioneer, and dated about 1846, the daguerrotype shows the Capitol Building with its gently rounded Bulfinch dome, which was replaced by a more monumental dome in 1863.

Adjustment takes faith, ex-POW says

EDITOR'S NOTE: Star reporter Terry Wolkerstorfer, who was a wire-service correspondent in South Vietnam, and former Vietnam POW Charlie Plumb have been friends for more than a decade. Plumb was in Minneapolis this weekend for several public appearances, and stopped to reflect on the process of adjustment for returning POWs.

By TERRY WOLKERSTORFER
Minneapolis Star Staff Writer

When Charlie Plumb walked out of the Hanoi Hilton last February after 2,103 days of captivity, he found some things he hadn't expected: long hair for men, short skirts for women, wide ties, Afro hairstyles, more sex in movies and magazines—and a wife who had filed for divorce.

But in 288 days of freedom since then, Plumb thinks he has adjusted well to his new life and thinks most other POWs have too.

A dozen of Plumb's prison acquaintances quit the military to fly for commercial airlines—and now find themselves laid off because of the fuel shortage; some are still in hospitals; one is attending law school, another medical school; one is running for governor in New Mexico, and another may challenge George McGovern for his Senate seat. But most have returned to their military duties.

"Most of the guys I've talked to are finding it pretty easy to get back into society," Plumb said in an interview yesterday. "When we were in prison, one of our biggest frustrations was that nagging instinct to fit into a niche someplace, to be needed and respected.

"I think a lot of ex-POWs stayed in the military not just because of financial security, but because it gave them that niche. They've settled down to the 8-to-5 job, the brew and the easy chair, the pipe and slippers. And I think most of them are happy," Plumb said.

Plumb has taken a different tack than most of his comrades. Since his release from prison, he has spent much of his time working on a recently published book, "i' no hero," a reflection on the POW experience in North Vietnam.

He has devoted the rest of his time to a frenetic schedule of public appearances — 285 in 288 days — from a high school in the Philippines to Jerusalem for Israel's 25th birthday.

He has resigned his commission as a Navy lieutenant commander to face an uncertain future.

How does he view his own adjustment?

"I'm finding out that things really haven't changed as much as I thought at first. I was worried about drug problems, the rising crime rate, apparent permissiveness, the lack of personal discipline.

"I was frustrated to find so many Americans discontent with a lifestyle that I had longed for. And I saw people wasting and taking for granted things I had yearned for. Just simple things like food. People were throwing away pencil stubs that would have been worth $1,000 in prison.

"But I think that initial reaction was influenced by the fact that I'd had so few freedoms and such meager material possessions for so long.

"Now, as I readapt to society, I find the average American probably as conservative as ever before."

Plumb believes the inner confidence that enabled him to survive nearly six years of captivity has made it possible to deal with his divorce and the uncertainties of the future.

"That self-confidence is based on faith in God and country, hope, pride and discipline. It gives me a sense of security. I found that I could endure prison life, and very few things in life can be tougher."

But he admits to occasional moments of doubt: "I'm deliberately trying to keep active. I've disciplined myself to avoid bitterness. I know that all those public appearances give me the feeling of being accepted, of being respected, of being needed — and they help fill the void left by my wife. Sometimes I do wonder whether I'm going to make it. And sometimes I wonder whether prison was the ultimate pressure a man can face.

"But almost everybody has doubts and fears and anxieties, and I think the important thing that many of us learned from our prison experience is that with a little faith we can cope with these things.

"I guess that's the lesson I really want to share with people."

Charlie Plumb knows a little something about torture. A decade ago he was in a prison camp in Hanoi, North Vietnam, where he was interned 2,103 days.

"That's more time than the American hostages were held in Iran," he said without malice when he spoke Tuesday at the Minneapolis Woman's Club.

Asked what he thought about the jubilant homecoming for the 52 released hostages, he replied, "I think it is fine. They deserve it all."

But he wasn't so optimistic about the news media. "The media would like to get me to talk. They (reporters) would like me to complain about the inequities of the welcome home the POWs received."

Later Plumb switched to the subject of stress and ways to reduce it.

"I'm not a doctor, a psychologist or psychiatrist, but I have some authenticity to speak about stress from six years spent in a test tube in Vietnam."

Plumb, 38, is one of the more articulate members of the POW fraternity. He spends about half his time speaking around the country, shedding light on everyday problems.

Most of his talks carry the same theme: surviving in the world today. He stresses commitment, personal pride, faith, discipline, goals. He believes in developing a positive attitude.

He said stress comes in two parts: distress, the kind singers, actors and runners undergo before they perform, and u-stress, the kind most of us go through daily.

"If we want stress to be a positive force, we have to use it constructively. Stress can be very helpful if you turn it around. You have to believe that every stressful situation is a seed of opportunity. I am living proof of that.

Charlie Plumb

"I believe that no matter how big the pressures, there is a way to turn them around for good."

New Symphony Ball date

The Women's Association of the Minnesota Orchestra (WAMSO) announced that it has changed the date of its 1981 Symphony Ball to July 18.

"We are terribly excited about having a summer ball," said President Kathy Cunningham. "We can get Tommy Dorsey's band and also the Minnesota Orchestra. We can't have a ball without our own orchestra. Actually it will be a little kickoff for the Sommerfest (the orchestra's summer season)."

The event had been set for May 30. It will be held in the new Pillsbury-First National Bank building, which is still under construction.

Cunningham announced the change of date at the joint rehearsal meeting with the Friends of the Institute at Orchestra Hall, which drew close to 500. She added a plug for the Junior WAMSO Valentine Ball Feb. 14 at the AAUW Clubhouse. Tickets are available at $50 a couple through the WAMSO office.

"Eileen Gray"—a remarkable exhibition at New York's Museum of Modern Art, February 7 through April 1—documents one of the most brilliant and least known design talents of the modern movement. Born in Ireland in 1879, Miss Gray, far right, flourished creatively in Paris between the wars, first producing lacquer objects, then designing some of the most avant-garde interiors in Paris. She designed her own house at Roquebrune on the Riviera (admired by Le Corbusier) and furnishings (living room, right). Her dashing sense of style was exceeded only by her inventiveness, anticipating design "firsts" that came later such as creating a chair's legs, arms, backrest from a single steel tube, chromed and bent.

"Our store has 'ready-to-wear' food. Now we want 'couture' food as well," said Pamela Krausmann, creative director of Bloomingdale's Food Division, NYC. Among Pam's innovations is a newsletter, "Gourmet Gravure" (logo, above) telling about new food products from both famous and obscure epicurean masters. For special foods, Pam is working with top French cooks: Three-star chef Alain Chapel of Lyon will fill one hundred jars with limited-edition jams of pêche de vigne, mirabelle plum, apricot, strawberry; $12 each. Famed restaurateurs Jean and Pierre Troisgros have had their favorite cooking oils—walnut, hazelnut, grape seed, sunflower—pressed and bottled for the store, plus two mustards, a vinegar.

Dear Mrs. Main:

Thank you for sending the photocopies of pages from The Plumb Family. We cannot tell you how much we appreciate your assistance in helping us clarify the Prisman-Parysmandus mystery. Now that we have made this much progress, our appetites are whetted for more.

We were intrigued with the information you found in the Cuyahoga County Marriage Records showing Abigail Plum and Abraham Mattox, both of Euclid, Ohio, married Feb. 27, 1834, by John W. Hill. We would appreciate it if you would continue to hunt for further records of Plumbs in Euclid. It is highly possible that Parysmandus lived and died there before 1834 and that Abigail was his widow. Of course, she could also have been his daughter. Perhaps there is a cemetery in Euclid where some of the family are buried.

I would also be interested in pursuing Abraham Mattox in later years, possibly locating his death record and that of his wife Abigail, which might lead us to their obituaries.

In the book of Delaware County cemetery records (what is the exact title and author's name?) there was an entry on page 70 showing Smith Slawson (b. June 13, 1796; d. Apr. 3, 1879) and Marietta H. Slawson (b. Mar. 30, 1796; d. July 12, 1880) buried in Old Eden Cemetery in Brown Township. We wonder if Smith Slawson was a brother of Abigail Slawson, who married Parysmandus Plumb. Would there be an obituary of Smith Slawson in some paper in April, 1879? Or his will?

Enclosed is a check for $2.00 to take care of the 80¢ I owe you for the photocopies you sent, plus $1.20 toward anything new you can discover for us. Thanks a million!

Yours sincerely,

After a search of some two years in England, we have found the parish register of the family of John Plume, who was afterward the emigrant to Wethersfield, Connecticut. The register was found at Ridgewell parish. He resided in and probably owned Ridgewell Hall, by the gift of his father at the time of his marriage, and he was living there in 1634, as reported by the King's Heralds at the Visitation of Essex Co., in 1634. All his children were born there except Dorcas, who must have been born in Wethersfield as her name was not on the register.

It is well known that John Plum was among the first settlers and proprietors of Wethersfield, Conn., in 1635, and now it seems altogether likely that he sold his little property in Ridgewell, Co. Essex, Eng., early in 1635 and bought, if he had not previously owned, a ship and immigrated to Wethersfield in his own vessel, as he was from the first a ship owner there, and traded up and down the river with the Indians. It is also probable that it was his ship that was used in 1637 to carry the 77 men down the river and around to Narragansett Bay from which the march was made to Pequot Hill —now in Groton—to surprise the Indians. The ship returned after landing the men at Narragansett, to the mouth of the Connecticut river in full view of the Pequots. The Pequots supposed the men had given up the war and gone home, and so they themselves had a drunken spree that night and were taken by surprise by the English attack in the morning just at day-break. The Pequots were totally defeated and the remnant driven west and either killed or captured in the Fairfield Swamp. This pursuit of the Indians showed the land to the whites and 1639 Milford was settled and Robert Plume, who proves to be the eldest instead of the second son, was one of the settlers, and there he married, lived and died.

John, the second son, I have not found, but I seemed to have glimpses or indications of him in various directions and was ready to assert there was such a son, but now the register shows him.

Samuel, the 5th child, was found in Branford, Conn., when the father died, married and lived there till 1667-8, but his wife's name remains unknown.

Dorcas Plum was married in Branford to John Lyman.

Children of Dorcas.

10 Caleb, born Sept. 2, 1678, in Northampton, Mass.

Nothing is known of any of the other children of John Plume and Dorothy ———.

The State Penitentiary now stands on the spot where the dwelling house of John Plume stood in 1644, in Wethersfield, Conn. He owned another house in Wethersfield. At the first town meeting in Totoket, (Branford, Conn.,) he was elected town clerk and held the office till his death. The first town meeting was Dec. 15, 1645.

Mrs. Banbury's or Bainbridge's will reads:

"The last will of Justice Banbury. First I commit my soul to the Lord Jesus Christ, my Redeemer; for that little that I have for dispose of, I give to my daughter Plumbe my feather-bed; to Elizabeth Plumbe my silk cap; to my daughter Butlar my cloath gowne and my wattered———; and to Hannah Butlar my silk whood; and fower payer of shoes, two payer to my daughter Plumbe, and two payers to my daughter Butlar's children, and each of them a payer of stockings, and to Deborah Green my bed-sted and all that be'ongs to it excepting my bed, and my trunk and my box and all that is in them, my warming pan, a chamber pot and an iron skillet and my stuff gowne and my chaire, my smoothing iron, my tongs and fire shovel and the —— candlistick, and for the five pounds that Joseph Green gave me I give twenty shil ings of it to Mr. John Whiting, and the rest of it shall be to pay for my honorable burial." I think it is not unlikely that John, senior, gave his ship to John, jr., when he removed to Branford, and John, jr., being a mariner is not found settled anywhere.

Nothing is known to a certainty of "John Plum, Jr.," but it may be well to say that he, from the indications, probably married somewhere and had children. A John Plum had a lot in Newark, in 1667, or before, (as the land was bought of the Indians in 1666) as in 1667, John Plum is mentioned in a distribution of lots in the town, as having owned a lot—"the seventh to John Plum, now William Camp's." He was not afterwards known there, and what became of him is not known. I think this John Plum, Jr., is the son-in-law of Mrs. Justice Banbury, widow of Guy Banbury.

History of Delaware County and Ohio,
O. L. Baskin & Co., Chicago, 1880

p. 690 Horace Plumb, retired farmer; P.O. Berkshire; is a son of Jedediah and Catherine (Hinsdale) Plumb; his father was born in Conn., and was a member of the Scioto Company; came to Ohio in 1807, settling in Berkshire Township, then a wilderness; he was a wagon-maker and farmer and died in 1847. They had eleven children, but five survive. The subject of these notes was born on a farm near Worthington, Ohio; in his younger days, he attended school as much as convenient and worked with his father; at 17, he began learning the blacksmith's trade at Mt. Vernon, with his uncle Patrick; for two years he was under his instruction; he then settled at Berkshire, where he has since resided. Was married Dec. 19, 1833, to Eliza Cables, a daughter of Isaac Cables of Conn.; she was born and raised in the same State. He and his wife are members of the M. E. Church. His grandfather was a chaplain in the war of 1812.

Hist of Delaware Co. 1880

Present townships of Harlan, Trenton, and Porter, with the east half of the townships of Kingston, Berkshire, and Delaware, were included in this [Berkshire] Township, besides the townships of Bennington, Harmony, Berlin and Liberty, now in Morrow County. This geographical "what not" was called Sunbury and has succeeded in handing down its title to the thriving village of that name, in Berkshire Township. — In 1821 it only included the east half of Berkshire and Trenton Township.

Scioto colony, which went out from New Haven County to Worthington in 1803. A little previous to the time of which we write, Messrs. Plumb and Lamb had sold out their property in Worthington, and, on horseback, had made a tour of inspection through the country toward the Wabash River. On their return journey they passed through Alabama and, attracted by the place, they decided to locate there. Soon after their return to Worthington, some member of Col. Bayless' family falling sick, Dr. Lamb was summoned.

Mr. Bayless, finding in this interview, that the doctor had not bought land elsewhere, set about securing so valuable a member for his colony at the corners. — The colonel — won him over to the Bayless project. Nevertheless, he had given his word to join Maj. Plumb, and he did not feel disposed to break his pledge to his friend, but he set about bringing Maj. Plumb over to the new plan.

When these two old friends met, and Dr. Lamb broached the subject, there was a warm discussion which lasted nearly all day. The result was that they both moved into the settlement, with the understanding that when the county of Delaware should be formed, the county seat should be located at the corners.

p. 430 The pioneer of Berkshire was Col. Moses Byxbe of Lenox, Berkshire Co., Mass. - - - -

In June, 1804, he fitted out a four-horse team, in charge of Orlando Barber, a three-horse team, with Willis Stewart as driver, and a single-horse wagon, driven by Solomon Smith, - - - - -

He persuaded Asahel Root, a surveyor and resident of Pittsfield, Mass., to accompany him, - - - he also brought his nephew, Edward Potter, then a boy of thirteen - - -

Taking up their line of march, the little colony started on their journey in the track of the former colony, which had gone out the year before. - - -

p. 431 In 1807, Setabel Blunt, with his family, and Dr. Reuben Lamb, with his wife and child, came to Berkshire Corners. Some years before, Dr. Lamb, then an unmarried man, had started for the Mississippi Valley; but, meeting Col. Byxbe at Pittsburgh, was persuaded to come to Berkshire. He was disappointed with the place, however, and thinking that Worthington promised to be a prosperous place, he left Berkshire after remaining a few months and settled in the former place. There he married his wife and became intimate with Mr. Blunt who was one of the original members of the p. 447 The family of Col. Bayless was of the Presbyterian creed, that of Maj. Brown belonged to the Episcopal Church, together with the Primes, Plumbs, and Curtises.

p. 448 The next church organization in point of time was the Protestant Episcopal. The first sermon was preached in Maj. Brown's house, at Berkshire Corners, in 1818, by Bishop Chase, the first Bishop of the diocese. On Easter Monday, at the house of David Prime, March 23, 1818, those of Episcopalian belief met and organized a church by the following election of officers: Clerk, Carlos Curtis; Wardens, Zebulon Plumb and Joseph Prime, etc.

Held services in private houses with Rev. Mr. Adam and others as Rectors.

The leading church of this denomination is at Delaware, which was organized in 1870 by Rev. John Ely, with 8 or 10 members. This has a number of members from Berkshire Corners, and now numbers 30 persons.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Plumb
12 Ashlong Grove
Halstead, Essex
England

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Plumb:

I am writing to you because I think Mr. Plumb might be a very distant relative of my wife Elizabeth. Her mother's maiden name was Plumb, and we have traced her Plumb ancestry back to Great Yeldham and Ridgewell in Essex in the late 1500's and early 1600's. We believe there may still be some Plumbs or Plumb descendants living in Essex who are related to Elizabeth.

Last summer we spent two months in Britain and had a very enjoyable time visiting friends and relatives and driving about 4,200 miles on a trip through England, Scotland, and Wales in a hired car. One of the high points was the time we spent in Essex. It was our second trip, as we had also been there in 1976.

On Sunday we attended the parish church of St. Andrews in Great Yeldham where Elizabeth's forebears had worshipped nearly four centuries ago. We had a brief visit with the rector, Rev. John Ryall (on his farewell Sunday there). We asked him about the Plumb names and addresses we had copied from the telephone directory, and he thought that your family would be one that had lived in that part of Essex for a considerable length of time, and that is why I am writing to you.

Elizabeth's ancestor who came to America was John Plumb (1594-1648), who was born in Great Yeldham. He left England in 1635. His parents were Robert Plumb (about 1558-1628) and Grace Crackbone. His grandparents were Robert Plumb (about 1523-1613) and Elizabeth Furcas. His great grandparents were John Plumb (about 1510-1586) and Elizabeth ----------.

We have found that not many people in England have taken a great deal of interest in genealogy, so very few can trace their families back much further than their grandparents. However, unless you know definitely that your Plumb ancestors came from another part of England, we would guess that they lived in Essex for many generations, and were therefore descendents of the same Plumb family as Elizabeth's ancestors. In any case, we would be very happy to hear from you.

I am a Baptist minister, though I have not been in charge of a congregation for many years. About a year ago I retired after serving the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches as executive director for 28 years. Elizabeth was a kindergarten teacher before our marriage, and more recently she has been the author of seven books for children and young people. We have two sons: James, 34, and Thomas, 33.

As you can see, I have enclosed a sheet containing a few questions that I hope you will answer and return in the self-addressed envelope. In case airmail postage to the United States has been increased recently, I am also enclosing an extra stamp. We shall look forward to your early reply.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

As far as you know, does your Plumb ancestry go back for a long period of time in Essex?

How far back do have a record of your Plumb ancestors (names, dates, and places)?

Please list the names and addresses of any other persons who could give me information about the Plumb family in Essex:

THE BRIDGE ON THE WEPAWAUG

MORRIS W. ABBOTT

FOREWORD

Descendants of the early settlers in Milford continue to come to the old town to see and photograph the bridge which since the 250th anniversary of the founding has memorialized their ancestors.

It was dedicated the 28 of August 1889 and stands today much as it was then, though the surroundings have changed greatly. Additional stones were placed later, the wrought iron lantern and the original door knocker have disappeared from the tower, and a constant battle is waged with the pigeons which favor the tower as a home. The whole span was widened in 1928, the better to accommodate modern traffic.

Nathan G. Pond, Milford's historian, wrote and published in 1889 a twenty-page booklet entitled "Ye Story of ye Memorial," with a great deal of information about the bridge, the early settlers and their descendants. Much of what follows is taken from his work, which, however, mentioned only thirty-six of the fifty-odd stones which now bear names of the early residents of the town.

The following has, therefore, been compiled for the benefit of those who wish to know something of the memorial, and has the advantage of reproducing photographs not available when Pond's account was prepared.

THE BRIDGE ON THE WEPAWAUG

A MEMORIAL BRIDGE may not be a rarity, but the one in Milford probably attracts more people from afar than any other in the country.

When the Town of Milford prepared to observe its 250th anniversary, the townspeople wanted a memorial both beautiful and useful. The annual town meeting (that great New England institution) held the first day of October 1888 appointed a committee of five prominent citizens— Charles A. Tomlinson, Phineas S. Bristol, Nathan G. Pond, William Cecil Durand and Henry C. Miles. These men were to act with a committee to be appointed by the First (Congregational) Church.

These committees wisely concluded that a bridge would be an appropriate monument to be dedicated to the memory of the original and other early settlers, since their gravestones, if any, had long since disappeared. Even the area of their burial is known only vaguely, as interments until about 1661 were made in the pastor's garden, probably on the present Prospect (formerly East Town) Street.

A special town meeting held on the 15 of March 1889 authorized the committee to erect "a Stone Arch Bridge over the Wepawaug River near Fowler's Mills."

The names of those responsible for the bridge appear on this stone.

semi-octagonal shafts with plain bases and moulded bell-capitals, much restored.

The Nave (42 ft. by 21 ft. at the E. end, and 19½ ft. at the W. end) has an early 14th-century N. arcade of three bays, with two-centred arches of two chamfered orders; the columns are octagonal, and the responds have attached half-columns, all with plain bases and moulded capitals. In the S. wall are two early 16th-century windows, slightly restored, and each of three cinquefoiled ogee lights, with a transom also cinquefoiled, and vertical tracery in a two-centred head; the jambs and label are moulded. Further W. is the early 14th-century S. doorway with jambs and two-centred arch of two moulded orders; the label is moulded.

The North Aisle (8½ ft. wide) has, in the E. wall, one window, in the N. wall, two windows, in the W. wall one window, each of the 15th century, and of three cinquefoiled lights with tracery in a segmental-pointed head; the window in the E. wall, the eastern in the N. wall, and that in the W. wall, are externally almost entirely modern; the western window in the N. wall has modern mullions. W. of the windows in the N. wall is the early 14th-century N. doorway, now blocked; it has chamfered jambs and two-centred arch; above it, externally, is a line indicating the former existence of a small porch. At the S.E. angle is a 15th-century rood stair-turret, with a plain doorway which has a four-centred head.

The West Tower (10½ ft. by 9¼ ft.) is of the 15th century, and of two stages with an embattled parapet and a plinth of flint and stone checker-work. In the E. wall of the ground stage is an early 14th-century doorway, converted into an archway when the tower was added; it has chamfered jambs and two-centred arch, and the rear arch faces the nave. In the S. wall is a modern window. The W. window, now in the second storey of the ground stage, is of two rectangular lights, probably of the 17th century. The lower storey of the second stage has, in the W. wall, a plain loop. The bell-chamber has, in each of the E., N. and S. walls, a 15th-century window of two cinquefoiled lights with a quatrefoil in a two-centred head; the label is moulded. In the S. wall is a similar window, but with uncusped lights and varied tracery; it is almost entirely covered with modern cement.

The Roof of the chancel is of early 16th-century date, and of six bays with moulded timbers; the trusses have collar-beams with curved braces below them forming a pointed arch, with traceried spandrels and a carved pendant at the apex; at the feet of the braces are figures of angels surmounted by moulded canopies and holding shields, or instruments of the Passion; the N. wall-plate is carved with running foliage, but that on the S. is plain.

Fittings—Bells: four; 2nd by Henry Pleasant, 1707. Font: (see Plate, p. xxix.) octagonal, bowl with embattled rim and moulded and carved lower edge, four sides with angels holding plain shields, one side cusped with a shield—a bend impaling a border engrailed, other sides with foliage, a face, etc., panelled stem and moulded base, 15th-century. Glass: In chancel—in spandrel of eastern window in N. wall, shield of Waldegrave differenced with a border gules, probably 14th-century; in western window in S. wall—two shields, (a) checky or and azure a fesse ermine, much restored, (b) or a sleeve gules, 14th-century, in spandrel, a rose, 16th-century. Monuments and Floor-slabs. Floor-slab: In porch—to Mary, wife of William Brage, 1700, Frances, 1698, and Elizabeth, 1697, their daughters, with shield of arms. Painting: On N. respond of chancel-arch—remains of red paint. Piscinae: In chancel—in range with sedilia, double, with cinque-foiled heads, Purbeck marble shaft having moulded capital and base between each bay of range, early 14th-century, sill modern; in N. wall, outside, originally in former vestry, with chamfered jambs and two-centred head, probably 14th-century. Pulpit: hexagonal, on carved central post, sides with raised panels, one having the inlaid initials I.H.S., etc. probably early 18th-century. Sedilia: in range and uniform with piscina, labels and horizontal outer label moulded, 14th-century. Miscellanea: In chancel—on internal jambs of E. window, two incised Consecration Crosses surrounded by circles. In nave—in E. wall, N. of chancel-arch, moulded stone Corbel, probably for former rood-beam, probably 13th-century, re-used.

Condition—Fairly good, but some cracks in walls of chancel.

HOMESTEAD MOATS.

[a] (2). At Smeetham Hall, about ¾ m. N. of the church; the S.W. side has been destroyed.

[b] (3). At Clapp's Farm, Bulmer Tye, ¾ m. S.S.E. of the church.

[c] (4) BUTLER'S HALL, about ¾ m. S.S.W. of the church. The house is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are covered with tiles and slate. It was built in the second half of the 16th century, on a modified H-shaped plan with the cross-wings on the E. and W. On the E. side is a 17th-century addition of one storey. There are two chimney-stacks; that on the W. is original and has grouped diagonal shafts; that on the E. is of the 17th century and of L-shaped plan.

Interior—On the ground floor the middle room has original moulded ceiling-beams, wall-plates and chamfered joists. In the W. wing, the S. room has chamfered ceiling-beams and wall-posts and in the W. wall is an old blocked window; the N. room, now divided, has moulded ceiling-beams and chamfered wall-posts. In the E. wing is a passage with moulded ceiling-beams, and at the N. end is a window with old lead-glazing and remains of a strap-hinge. In the 17th-century addition is a heavy chamfered beam from which the braces have been removed; the timber-framing and joists are also exposed. On the first floor, the middle room has moulded ceiling-beams and shaped wall-posts; on the E. wall is some original panelling with a carved frieze, and the panelled door is original. In the E. wing, the S. room has a panelled door, and some panelling similar to that in the middle room, with a carved frieze of different design; on the E. side of the wing are two blocked windows with diamond-shaped mullions.

Condition—Fairly good.

[b] (5). The Laurels, house, 320 yards N.N.E. of the church, is a late 18th-century structure built round a 16th-century chimney-stack. The original chimney-stack has six attached octagonal shafts, covered with cement.

Condition—Good, rebuilt.

Monuments (6–10).

The following monuments, unless otherwise described, are of the 17th century, and of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled or thatched. Some of the buildings have original chimney-stacks, wide fireplaces and exposed ceiling-beams.

Condition—Good, or fairly good, unless noted.

[b] (6). Cottage, 240 yards N.W. of the church, on the N. side of the road, has modern outbuildings at the back.

[b] (7). Grigg's Farm, house and barn, $\frac{1}{4}$ m. W. of the church. The House was built early in the 17th century on a rectangular plan; later in the same century a wing was added extending N.W. from the S.W. end, making the plan L-shaped. There are modern additions on the N.W. side of the original building. The original roof is half-hipped at each end.

The Barn, N.E. of the house, is of six bays.

Condition—Poor.

[b] (9). Tyecorner Farm, house, 1 m. S. of the church, has an early 18th-century wing at the W. end of the S. side. The original central chimney-stack has grouped diagonal shafts.

Condition—Bad, plaster defective, and some floors rotten; ivy on front of house.

[b] (10). Jenkins Farm, house, at Bulmer Tye, nearly 1 m. S. of the church, was built probably in the third quarter of the 16th century, but has, at the back, an 18th-century wing and a modern addition. On the E. front the upper storey projects and is supported by curved brackets, and, at the S.E. angle, by a post with a moulded top; the timber-framing is exposed and has modern brick nogging. At the N. end the timber-framing and nogging are modern. The original chimney-stack has six octagonal shafts on a rectangular base.

Condition—Much ivy on the walls.

16. CASTLE HEDINGHAM. (E.b.)

(O.S. 6 in. ix. S.E.)

Castle Hedingham is a village and parish about $3\frac{3}{4}$ m. N.N.W. of Halstead, in the Colne Valley. The principal monuments are the Church and the Castle (see Plate, p. 60).

Ecclesiastical:—

(1). Parish Church of St. Nicholas (see Plate, p. 47) stands in the middle of the village. The walls generally are of flint rubble with stone dressings; the tower, porch and parapets are of red brick. The roofs are covered with lead and slate. Foundations of an early 12th-century apsidal chancel are said to have been found within the present chancel. The Chancel, Nave and North and South Aisles were built c. 1180. In the 14th century the wall on each side of the first bay of the nave was pierced by an arch. In the 15th century the North Vestry was added. The South Porch was added, and the parapets of the nave and aisles were rebuilt early in the 16th century. Early in the 17th century the nave was shortened by one bay at the W. end, and the West Tower was built. The church was restored in the 19th century, and the Organ-chamber is modern.

The church is of great interest; the wheel-window in the chancel and the nave-arcades, both of the 12th century, the 17th-century brickwork of the tower, porch, and parapets, and the early 16th-century roof of the nave are especially noteworthy; among the fittings the 12th-century doors, the 15th-century stall-work and the Vere monument of 1539 are remarkable.

FINCHINGFIELD; SPAINS HALL; late 16th-century.

South-West Front.

Marshall, 1685, with shield of arms; (2) to Lucy, wife of Sir John Marshall, 1699, with shield of arms. Piscina: In chancel—with chamfered jambs and cinquefoiled head, fluted drain, 15th-century. Royal Arms: In nave—on W. wall, framed and painted on canvas, Stuart arms, late 17th-century. Screens: Under chancel arch, of oak, with double entrance bay and two bays on each side; entrance bay with two-centred arch and traceried head, side bays with ogee arch and traceried heads all cusped and sub-cusped, with crockets carved as foliage or grotesques; between the bays, buttresses and springers of vault to former loft; traceried middle rail and close lower panels; early 15th-century. In S. chapel, at W. end, of three main bays, middle of bay two lights, side bays of three lights, all with cinquefoiled ogee heads and flowing tracery; between lights in middle and S. bay, circular shafts with moulded bases and carved capitals; in N. bay, inserted doorway with cusped and sub-cusped head and embattled cornice; main cornice moulded and enriched with small carvings, close lower panels, c. 1350, head of doorway, 15th-century. Miscellanea: In S. aisle—on ledge of second window in S. wall, scratched diagram of 'nine-men's morris.' Loose in chancel and in second and third stages of tower—architectural fragments, 14th and 15th-century. In churchyard—S. of tower, fragments of former S. porch including tracery, capital of respond, etc., late 14th-century.

Condition—Good generally, but there are cracks in E. wall of nave; the N. arcade of chancel is out of the perpendicular, and part of the window tracery is badly decayed.

Secular:—

[b] (2). Homestead Moat at Howe Hall, ¾ m. N.E. of the church.

[b] (3). Spain's Hall, house, outbuilding, mill-ponds and moat, nearly 1 m. N.W. of the church. The House is of two storeys with attics; the walls are of brick and the roofs are tiled. It was built c. 1570 on an irregular T-shaped plan with the main or cross-wing at the S.W. end. Early in the 17th century the N.E. wing was widened towards the N.W., making the plan L-shaped. The original part of the N.E. wing was burnt down and rebuilt c. 1768, and there are modern additions on the N. and W. sides.

The house is an interesting example of Elizabethan brickwork, with carved woodwork on the gables of the N.W. elevation, and contemporary rain-water-heads of lead.

The S.W. Front (see Plate, p. 91) has a moulded plinth of brick; the storeys are divided by moulded string-courses, also of brick, continued round the S.E. end. There are seven original gables, two large and five small, all with curvilinear copings. The porch is carried up the full height of the house, and is finished with one of the smaller gables; the outer entrance has moulded and plastered jambs and a four-centred arch under a square head and label. The windows are of plastered brick with square heads, mullions and moulded labels; six of them are original, but the large window lighting the hall is modern. In the side walls of the porch there are two original windows, now blocked. Five rain-water pipes and heads are of 1637, the heads have the arms or initials of Robert and Elizabeth Kempe; the pipes have elaborate straps ornamented with leopards, cherub-heads, etc.

The N.W. Elevation has a moulded plinth to the early 17th-century additions, and two projecting gables of plastered timber-framing; the bressumers and barge-boards are moulded and carved with guilloche and conventional ornament, and, at the apices are carved and moulded pendants. Three of the lower windows are original and similar to those on the S.W. front; under one gable is an oriel window, with moulded mullions and transom of oak, partly restored.

The N.E. Elevation of the main block has two small gables with moulded copings, and a larger gable at the end of the drawing-room wing. Two rain-water heads and pipes have the Kempe initials and arms, and are both dated 1637. At the N.E. end of the early 17th-century addition is an oriel window of the same date, similar to that on the N.W. elevation. Five original chimney-stacks have octagonal shafts and moulded bases; the original caps have been destroyed.

Interior—The Hall (37 ft. by 21½ ft.) has moulded wall-plates and ceiling-beams; the beams have carved soffits, and on two of them are carved and painted a shield of arms and a crest; the doorways from the porch and to the S. staircase are both original, and have double chamfered jambs and four-centred heads; the two doors, also original, are of richly moulded battens with iron handles; the fireplace is modern except the back, which is of original brickwork; round the walls is a dado of late 16th or early 17th-century panelling, re-used. The Drawing-room has original moulded ceiling-beams, and a fireplace with a richly panelled overmantel of c. 1640, flanked by Ionic pilasters; the walls are covered with panelling of the same date as the overmantel. The Library has original moulded ceiling-beams, one of them having foliated stops; the panelled overmantel with Ionic pilasters, and the panelling on the walls are of late 16th or early 17th-century date. The modern Kitchen has a dado of late 16th or early 17th-century panelling, re-used. In the Offices some modern partitions have old panelling, re-used, and there are two old panelled or battened doors. Under the S. staircase is a similar door. The early 17th-century S. Staircase has turned balusters, moulded handrails, and square newels with turned finials and acorn tops. On the first floor a room in the early 17th-century addition has chamfered ceiling-beams, and a fireplace with chamfered brick jambs and a four-centred arch; the richly carved and panelled overmantel and the panelling on the walls are both of early 17th-century date. There are several old doors of moulded battens, some with drop-handles; two of the doors have moulded frames planted on.

The Garden has some late 16th or early 17th-century walls of brick; one wall has a large brick coping.

The Moat, which formerly surrounded the house, has been obliterated, except on the N.W. side.

The Outbuilding, formerly a cottage, N. of the house, is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roof is tiled. It is probably of the 17th century, and has some old casement windows and original chimney-stacks. Inside the building are some original doors of moulded battens.

S.E. of the house were a succession of eight rectangular basins or ponds, formerly feeding a Mill; the existing lake represents two of these ponds and there are traces of most of the others.

Condition—Of house and outbuilding, good; of moat, poor.

[a] (4). CORNISH HALL, farmhouse and moat, about $1\frac{3}{4}$ m. N. of the church. The House is of two storeys with attics; the walls are timber-framed and covered with plaster; the roofs are tiled. It was built late in the 16th or early in the 17th century on a roughly rectangular plan, but c. 1700 a wing was added on the S., making the plan L-shaped, with the wings extending towards the E. and S. There is a small modern addition on the N. side. The gable at the W. end of the main block has original barge-boards, carved with guilloche pattern, now much worn. At the W. end of the N. or back elevation is a gable with plain original barge-boards, and the back door is original, with mouldings planted on. The S. wing has a wooden eaves-cornice of c. 1700. The original central chimney-stack has four octagonal shafts with moulded bases, and a moulded capping to the stack. Inside the building, on the ground floor, two rooms have chamfered ceiling-beams, and there are several panelled or battened doors of c. 1600; one door has an ornamental hinge. On the first floor of the S. wing one room has deal panelling of c. 1700, with a moulded architrave and panelled overmantel to the fireplace. At the head of the staircase are four turned balusters. There are two panelled cupboards also on the first floor.

The Moat has been partly obliterated.

Condition—Of house, good.

[a] (5). Brockhold's Farm, house and moat, about 2¼ m. N.N.E. of the church. The House is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built probably early in the 17th century; at the S. end the upper storey projects.

The Moat is of irregular shape; a stream forms the N. arm.

Condition—Of house, poor, now unoccupied; of moat, fairly good.

[b] (6). Boyton Hall, farmhouse, malt-house and moat, 1½ m. E.N.E. of the church. The House is of two storeys with attics and cellar; the walls are timber-framed and plastered, and the roofs are tiled. It was built probably late in the 16th or early in the 17th century, on an L-shaped plan with the wings extending towards the W. and S. The N. front has, at the E. end, a gable with original barge-boards carved with guilloche ornament. The original chimney-stack has six octagonal shafts with moulded bases restored at the top. Inside the building the chamfered ceiling-beams and shaped wall-posts are exposed; the wide fireplaces are partly blocked. On the first floor is an original fireplace with stop-chamfered jambs and four-centred head. The early 17th-century staircase has moulded rails, turned newels and flat balusters with vertical mouldings.

The Malt-house, N. of the house, is timber-framed and weather-boarded; the roof is thatched. It was built in the 17th century and is now used as a stable.

The Moat is of irregular form, the N. side has been filled in recently.

Condition—Of house, good.

[b] (7). Sculpin's Farm, house and moat, 1½ m. E.N.E. of the church. The house is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built in the 17th century, on an L-shaped plan with the wings extending towards the N.E. and N.W. The N.E. wing has been shortened. On the S.E. front is a small gable. The central chimney-stack is original. Inside the building is an old door of moulded battens.

The S.E. arm of the Moat has been destroyed.

Condition—Of house, good.

[b] (8). Petches, farmhouse and moat, 1 m. S.E. of the church. The House is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built probably early in the 16th century, and has a S.E. wing of later date. The N.E. and S.W. elevations have each two gables, and the original chimney-stack has two spirally fluted shafts. Inside the building, the Hall and a bedroom have panelling of c. 1600. The roof under the E. gable has a central purlin and king-post with two-way struts.

The Moat has been obliterated except at the W. angle.

Condition—Of house, fairly good.

[b] (9). Outhouse at Nortofts, barn and moat, 1⅓ m. S.E. of the church. The Outhouse is now of two storeys with attics; the walls are of brick, and the roof is tiled. It was built late in the 16th century, possibly as a Banqueting House. At the E. and W. ends are curvilinear gables; the windows, many of which are now blocked, have brick jambs and mullions and moulded labels. On the N. side are three gabled dormer windows, all now blocked; the doorway is modern, but has an old door of nail-studded battens with a drop handle and old hinges; there is no trace of the original doorway. Inside the building, the staircase is of solid oak.

The Barn, W. of the house, is timber-framed and plastered; the roof is tiled. It is probably of late 16th-century date, and is of five bays with aisles.

The Moat has been obliterated, except on the E. side.

Condition—Of outhouse and barn, fairly good.

[b] (10). Great Winsey, farmhouse and moat, about 1 m. S.W. of the church. The House is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs

Secular:—

[a] (2). YELDHAM HALL, 100 yards S.W. of the church, is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. The plan is L-shaped, with the wings extending towards the S.W. and N.W. The N.W. wing was built c. 1500. Probably in the 17th century the S.W. wing was added, with a small staircase wing in the angle between it and the N.W. wing. There is a modern addition on the N.W. side of the 17th-century wing. Two of the chimney-stacks are of old brickwork. Inside the building, some of the rooms have chamfered ceiling-beams and shaped wall-posts. In the N.W. wing a room is lined with panelling of c. 1600, and over the fireplace are a few pieces of 16th-century linen-fold panelling. On the first floor is a 17th-century panelled door. Of the two staircases, one has late 16th or early 17th-century flat pierced balusters and newels with turned terminals; the other staircase has twisted balusters and a moulded handrail of c. 1700. The roof of the N.W. wing has a rough original king-post truss.

Condition—Good, much altered.

[b] (3). SPAYNES HALL, about 600 yards S.E. of the church, is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. The House was built early in the 17th century, probably on an L-shaped plan, with the wings extending towards the N. and W. Probably late in the same century a second wing was added on the W., making the plan half-H-shaped. There are 18th-century or modern additions on the W. On the E. front the upper storey projects and rests on original shaped and carved brackets, it is gabled at the N. and S. ends, and has a projecting gable in the middle. There are two gabled projections on the S. elevation; the western gable has original barge-boards carved with arabesque ornament. Two of the chimney-stacks are original and have attached diagonal shafts.

Interior:—The middle room of the main block has an open timber ceiling, and the walls are wainscoted with early 17th-century panelling; the carved and panelled overmantel has carved pilasters, and has been partly restored. The S. room is lined with linen-fold, traceried, and moulded panelling, probably brought from elsewhere; the fireplace has an early 17th-century carved and panelled overmantel with carved pilasters. Other rooms have chamfered ceiling-beams, and there is an original door of moulded battens.

Condition—Good.

[a] (4). THE OLD RECTORY, 50 yards S.W. of the church, is of two storeys with cellar and attics; the walls are timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built, probably late in the 15th century, on an H-shaped plan, with the cross-wings at the N. and S. ends. There is a modern addition at the S. end. On the E. front the upper storey projects. The cellar under the W. wing has an original doorway with a four-centred head, and a door of studded battens.

Interior:—The former Hall, in the main block, has original moulded ceiling-beams and joists. A room in the S. wing has an original moulded and carved ceiling-beam. The S.W. wing has, on the first floor, an elaborate roof (see Plate, p. xxxiv) of two bays with moulded timbers; the middle truss has curved braces forming a four-centred arch, and the spandrels are carved with foliage and shields bearing the following badges—a water bouget and fetter-lock, the Bouchier knot, a merchant's mark, fleur de lis, rose, crown, chequer-board and the sacred monogram.

Condition—Good.

[a] (5). GUNCES FARM, house, about 1 m. W. of the church, is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built late in the 15th century on a half-H-shaped plan, with the wings extending towards the W. Probably late in the 16th century the Hall was divided into two storeys, and a chimney-stack was inserted. The S.W. wing was further extended, probably in the 17th century, and there is a modern addition between the wings. On the E. front the upper storey projects and there are three gables. Inside the building, the lower storey of the former Hall has moulded ceiling-beams and two moulded brackets of the 16th century. Other rooms have chamfered ceiling-beams. The roof of the S.W. wing has two original king-post trusses, with chamfered king-posts which have two-way struts.

Condition—Good.

MONUMENTS (6–23).

The following monuments, unless otherwise described, are of the 17th century and of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled or thatched. Some of the buildings have original chimney-stacks, wide fireplaces and exposed ceiling-beams.

Condition—Good or fairly good, without exception.

[a] (6). Weybridge Farm, house, nearly 1½ m. W.N.W. of the church.

[a] (7). Borley's Farm, house, now three tenements, 200 yards E. of (6), with an 18th-century addition on the N. side. The original central chimney-stack has three attached diagonal shafts.

[a] (8). Man's Cross Farm, house, 700 yards W.N.W. of the church, is of T-shaped plan, with the cross-wing at the E. end. There are 18th-

Under chancel-arch—four close lower panels remain, two on each side of entrance, each panel divided by a twisted shaft, and having an elaborate traceried head, with foliated spandrels, and a band of carved quatrefoils at the foot; tracery of northernmost and southernmost panels enriched with colour decoration in red and gold; posts between bays with attached buttresses, moulded and foliated rail, 15th-century (see Plate, p. xxxiii.). Sedilia: In chancel—sill of S.E. window carried down to form seats. Stalls: In chancel—on S. side, three, plain, c. 1500, much restored. Stoup: In nave—E. of S. doorway, with chamfered jambs and pointed head, 15th-century. Tiles: In nave—on platform of font, possibly old, much worn. Miscellanea: In tower—oak bier with octagonal legs, and braces with small capitals, telescopic handles, 15th-century (see Plate, p. xxxiii.).

Condition—Fairly good.

Secular:—

[a] (3). Homestead Moat, 700 yards W. of the church.

[a] (4). Ridgewell Hill Farm, house and moat, 520 yards E.N.E. of the church. The House is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built c. 1589, on a T-shaped plan, with the cross-wing at the E. end.

The original carved barge-boards, bressumers and brackets are noteworthy.

At the W. end of the N. elevation the upper storey projects, and has a carved and moulded bressumer and bracket. There are three projecting gables on the N. side of the W. wing, with carved barge-boards, and a continuous carved and moulded bressumer, with the date and initials, 1589 I M P; it rests on carved brackets. A doorway on the W. side of the cross-wing has two similar brackets supporting a modern hood. The cross-wing has projecting gables at each end, that on the S. having carved barge-boards. A small gable facing E. has similar barge-boards. The two original western chimney-stacks have octagonal shafts, with modern tops and moulded bases, standing on a rectangular base with a moulded and dentilled capping; the N.E. chimney-stack has a plain original base.

Interior:—The rooms on the ground floor of the cross-wing have stop-chamfered ceiling-beams, and the joists are exposed in two of the rooms. The present dining-room has original moulded oak panelling on the W. wall. The staircase has an original moulded hand-rail and flat shaped balusters. The kitchen in the W. wing has moulded ceiling-beams, a wide open fireplace and an original winding staircase.

Three arms of the Moat remain.

Condition—Of house, good.

[b] (5). Moat Farm, house and moat, 630 yards W.S.W. of the church. The House is of two storeys, with attics, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built late in the 17th century, on an L-shaped plan with the wings extending towards the S. and W. There are 18th-century or modern additions on the W. side. The S. wall and parts of the E. and W. walls have been re-faced with modern brick. Inside the building is an original door.

Three arms of the Moat remain; the fourth arm is marked by a shallow depression in the ground.

Condition—Of house, good, much altered.

[b] (6). Essex Hall, house, and moat, over 1 m. S.W. of the church. The House is of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled. It was built in the second half of the 17th century, and has a staircase-wing and an addition on the N. side, both modern. Inside the building, on the ground floor, the middle room has a chamfered ceiling-beam.

Two arms and part of a third arm of the Moat remain.

Condition—Of house, good, much altered.

Monuments (7–15).

The following monuments, unless otherwise described, are of the 17th century, and of two storeys, timber-framed and plastered; the roofs are tiled or thatched. Many of the buildings have original chimney-stacks, wide fireplaces and exposed ceiling-beams.

Condition—Good, or fairly good, unless noted.

Main Street, E. side:—

[a] (7). Cottage, three tenements, 200 yards W. of the church, was built early in the 16th century; the additions at the S. end and on the E. side are modern. The upper storey projects on the northern half of the W. front. Inside the building, the S. room of the original block has original moulded ceiling-beams carved with running foliage, and moulded joists. In the upper storey the shaped and chamfered wall-posts are exposed.

[a] (8). Cottage, two tenements, 40 yards N.W. of (7), has a late 17th-century extension at the N. end, and modern additions at the back and S. end. The original central chimney-stack has two attached octagonal shafts.

Condition—Poor.

[a] (9). Cottage, N.W. of (8), is of two storeys with attics, and has 18th-century or modern additions on the E. side. At the N. end of the W. front the upper storey projects and is gabled. Inside the building are two original doors with strap-hinges.

pany, and the late Senator John S. Dean and his son (afterwards Mayor Charles L. Dean of Malden, Mass.) were associated with Mr. Buck in the carrying on of that business. Soon they opened branch houses in New York and Boston. After about twenty years Mr. Buck retired from the firm and moved to Willimantic, where he became associated with the late Allen Lincoln in the grain business. The firm was called Lincoln, Buck & Durkee, in 1876, when the late Everett M. Durkee of Ashford joined it. It is now Stiles and Harrington. Before leaving Ashford he had been identified with the business interests of Stafford Springs, where he was a director of the Stafford National Bank, and president of the Stafford Savings Bank from 1874 to 1877. He bought the hardware business of Crawford & Banford at Stafford Springs, and put it in charge of his oldest son, George E. Buck, giving it the firm name, E. A. Buck & Co. In 1900 this was sold out. He and his son established in Palmer, a hardware store and oil business which was carried under the name E. A. Buck & Co., also. His younger son, William A. Buck, was a partner with him in flour and grain in Willimantic and still carries on the business under the name of E. A. Buck & Co. Edwin Augustus Buck was also interested extensively in lumber for many years. He died in Willimantic, May 12, 1905. He was a man of sound judgment and good business ability. He held many positions of trust and importance. He was a trustee of the Willimantic Savings Institute; a director in the Willimantic Machine Company; a trustee of the A. G. Turner estate; assignee of the J. Dwight Chaffee property; a trustee of the W. G. and A. R. Morrison estate, all large estates. He acquired much real estate in Willimantic, and much landed property in Willimantic and Ashford. He was active and prominent in politics all his life. When a very young man, he became town constable. When he was twenty-four he was sent to the general assembly from Ashford, although the opposing candidate was Ebenezer Chaffee, a prominent citizen. He was the youngest member of the assembly at the time. In 1862 he was again elected by a coalition of Union Democrats and Republicans. He was of great help to the Union cause during the war, and secured many pensions for soldiers after the war. He was elected to the legislature in 1865 by the Democrats. In 1874 and 1875 he was in the general assembly, and in both sessions was on the judiciary committee. After he removed to Willimantic he was chosen a member of the state senate, and in 1876, state treasurer. The session in which he served in the senate was the last in the old State House. In 1878 he was nominated for re-election as treasurer, but the entire party ticket was defeated in that election. When Willimantic was a borough, he served as a burgess, also as selectman for the town of Windham. He was appointed state bank examiner by Governor Morris. He was not a member of any church, but contributed liberally to the support of all. He helped many men over hard places, and few realize the extent of his benefactions. Children: 1. George E., resides in Palmer, Massachusetts. 2. Lucy M., resides at home. 3. Charlotte E., married Dr. T. R. Parker of Willimantic; member of the Daughters of American Revolution 4. Caroline Laura, married Allen B. Lincoln of Willimantic, now of New Haven (see Lincoln). 5. William A.; member of E. A. Buck & Co.; married Mary J. Phillips of Willimantic. 6. Bertie L., died young. 7. Ella Delia, married Arthur I. Bill of Willimantic.

PLUME

John Plum was a yeoman of Toppesfield, county Essex, England. In the visitation of Essex, in 1634, John Plumer is reported as father of Robert, of Great Yeldham, in Essex, but no other children are mentioned. John in his will mentions Robert, Thomas and the children of son John, deceased, and four daughters. The will is dated September 29, 1586. Then we have the will of Robert, the elder, dated January 9, 1611-12, wherein he gives to his children and his second wife's children, and to sisters Alice Easterford's and Margaret Edgeley's children, naming them, and then "to Thomas Plume my eldest brother's son" and to the children of John Plume, who was his eldest son. It is thought that his eldest brother was named John, and the John that was his eldest son was born before the Toppesfield register begins, 1560, and died before Robert's will, in 1611-12. He married Elizabeth ———, who was buried October 1, 1586. Children: Robert, mentioned below; John, born about 1532; Alice, about 1534; Margaret, about 1536; daughter, about 1538; Thomas, about 1540; daughter, about 1542.

(II) Robert, son of John Plum, was born about 1530, at Toppesfield. He was a yeoman. He lived at Great Yeldham, county Essex. He owned much land in Great Yeldham, Little Yeldham, Toppesfield, Waller Belchamp, Bulmer, Castle Hedingham, Hedingham Sible, and Halsted, in county Essex. He gave Spaynes and Butlers manors and much other land to Robert, his eldest son. Yeldham Manor to Thomas, Hawkdon Hall, in Suffolk, to Edmund, and other land to a married daughter, and bequeathed also to children of his brothers and sisters. He married (first) Elizabeth Purcas, who was buried June 25, 1596; (second) Ethelred Fuller's widow, who died in May, 1615. He was buried May 18, 1613. Children: Margaret, born about 1556; Robert, mentioned below; Elizabeth, baptized December 9, 1560; Thomas, March 12, 1563-64; Mary, baptized October 9, 1566; Anne, baptized May 2, 1569; Edmund, baptized September 2, 1571; infant son, born about 1575; Joseph.

(III) Robert (2), son of Robert (1) Plum, was born about 1558, and settled at Spaynes Hall, Great Yeldham. His son Robert was eldest and the heir; his son John, mentioned below, received only a small estate with Ridgewell Hall, Essex. He was buried at Great Yeldham, August 14, 1628. He married Grace Crackbone, buried July 22, 1615. Children, born at Great Yeldham: Robert, 1587; Martha, baptized March 20, 1592-93; John, mentioned below; Thomas, about 1596; Mary, about 1598; Ethelred, baptized April 1, 1599; Frances, baptized November 1, 1601; Hannah, baptized August 26, 1604.

(IV) John (2), son of Robert (2) Plum, was baptized at Great Yeldham, July 28, 1594. He resided after his marriage at Spaynes Hall, Great Yeldham. He was living there, according to the official visitation, in 1634. He came to Wethersfield, Connecticut, as early as 1635, and died at Branford, Connecticut, in July, 1648. He owned a vessel, in which he probably came to Wethersfield, and in which he made trading voyages on the Connecticut river. It is surmised to have been his vessel which was employed to carry Captain John Mason's little army in the Pequot war around Narragansett Bay to the point of their attack, and that he took part in that fight and received therefor a grant of land. He was the first ship-owner in Wethersfield. He was a juror; representative to the general court in 1637-41-42-43; collector of customs in 1644; nominated as assistant, but was defeated. He sold out at Wethersfield in 1644, and removed to Branford, where, in 1645, he was chosen to keep the town's books. He died August 1, 1645. His will was proved August 1, 1645. His wife Dorothy was living as late as 1669. Children: Robert, baptized at Ridgewell, December 30, 1617; John, baptized May 27, 1619; William, born May 9, 1621; Ann, baptized October 16, 1623; Samuel, mentioned below; Dorothea, baptized January 16, 1626; Elizabeth, born October 9, 1629; Deborah, July 28, 1633.

(V) Samuel, son of John (2) Plum, was baptized at Ridgewell, county Essex, England, January 4, 1625-26. He settled at Branford, Connecticut. He sold out his land at Branford, June 23, 1668, and removed to Newark, New Jersey. The name of his wife is not known. He died January 22, 1703. Children: Elizabeth, born January 18, 1650-51; Mary, April 1, 1653; Samuel, March 22, 1654-55; John, mentioned below; Doratha, March 26, 1655-56; Joshua, August 3, 1662; Joanna, March 11, 1665-66. The name is spelled Plum, but most of the descendants follow the spelling Plume.

(VI) John (3), son of Samuel Plum, was born at Branford, October 28, 1657. He lived in Newark, died there July 12, 1710. He married, in 1677, Hannah, daughter of Azariah Crane. Children, born at Newark: Mary; Sarah; Jane; Hannah; John, mentioned below.

(VII) John (4) Plume, son of John (3) Plum, was born 1696, at Newark. He was the first to use the present spelling, Plume. He married Joanna Crane, who died March 9, 1760. He married (second), Mary ——, who was living in 1784. Children: Isaac, born October 1, 1734; Stephen; Mary; Jane; Phebe; Joanna; Joseph; John (mentioned below).

(VIII) John (5), son of John (4) Plume, who was born about 1743, died about January, 1771. He married Susan Crane. Children, born at Newark: Joseph R., July 30, 1766; Matthias, 1768; David, mentioned below; Robert.

(IX) David, son of John (5) Plume, was born at Newark, 1769, died there August 27, 1835. He was a prosperous farmer. He married Matilda Cook. Children, born at Newark: Margaret, 1795; Robert, mentioned below; Amzi, married Phebe Peach; James C., born 1801, married Anna Maria Ross.

(X) Robert (3), son of David Plume, was born in 1799, at Newark, New Jersey. Early in life he learned the trade of carriage maker, and came to North Haven, Connecticut, to follow his trade. After his marriage he returned to Newark to live. He married Aurelia Hulse, a descendant of the Barnes family, one of the prominent families of North Haven.

(XI) David Scott, son of Robert (3) Plume, was born at New Haven, Connecticut, August 22, 1829. He received his early education in Lovell's Lancastrian School, and after the return of the family to Newark, in 1835, attended a private school in that city. When he was fifteen years old he entered the employ of a manufacturer of brass goods at Newark, to learn the business. He won promotion rapidly, and soon occupied positions of large responsibility. When he was twenty-two years old, in 1852, he embarked in business for himself as a brass manufacturer in Newark, with a store in New York City, Waterbury being the centre of brass manufacturing at that time, and in the course of his business he came to know the manufacturers there. In 1866 he bought an interest in the Thomas Manufacturing Company, at Plymouth Hollow, Connecticut (now Thomaston), and removed to that village to take charge of the plant. In 1869 he was one of the founders of the Plume & Atwood Manufacturing Company, of Waterbury. It was a joint stock company, and his associates were Israel Holmes, John C. Booth, Lewis J. Atwood, Aaron Thomas, George W. Welton and Burr Tucker. The name originally adopted was the Holmes, Booth & Atwood Manufacturing Company, but on January 1, 1871, this was changed to its present form, the Plume & Atwood Manufacturing Company. Israel Holmes was the first president, John C. Booth secretary, and Mr. Plume treasurer. Soon afterward the company bought the Hayden & Griggs Manufacturing Company, and in June following purchased the brass rolling mill of the Thomas Manufacturing Company, at Thomaston. The capital stock was then $400,000. During the same year the erection of the factory on Banks street was begun. This plant and that at Thomaston have both been enlarged from time to time, and the concern has held its place among the foremost brass manufacturers of the country. It manufactures sheet brass, brass wire, lamp burners and trimmings, copper rivets, pins and similar goods. After the death of Mr. Holmes, in July, 1874, Mr. Booth was elected president and Lewis J. Atwood secretary. The company was incorporated by the general assembly in January, 1880. After the death of Mr. Booth, in July, 1886, Burr Tucker was elected president, and Robert H. Swayze, of New York City, secretary. Mr. Plume continued as treasurer of the concern. Mr. Plume was also treasurer of the American Ring Company, another of the great manufacturing concerns of Waterbury. He removed his residence from Thomaston to Waterbury in 1873. In politics he was a Whig until the civil war, and afterward a Republican. He never sought public office, however, though he held a number of places of trust and honor. He represented the town in the general assembly in 1876, and was re-elected in 1878. He ranked easily among the foremost men of the city in business and civil life. He was a director of the New York & New England Railroad Company, formerly the Hartford, Providence & Fishkill railroad, and now a part of the New York, New Haven & Hartford system. Mr. Plume was one of the organizers of the Waterbury Horse Railroad Company, and held the office of president from the time of incorporation until it was merged with the Waterbury Traction Company. The Connecticut Electric Company was the first to furnish electricity for lighting and power in Waterbury, and he was elected its president when it was organized, in 1884. The Waterbury Traction Company came into existence in 1894, of which he was president, and after it was merged with the Connecticut Street Railway and Lighting Company he was a director and vice-president of the corporation. He was also the most active associate of Mr. Young in building the first telephone exchange in Waterbury, and the original company afterward became part of the Southern New England system. When the Colonial Trust Company was incorporated he was made president, which office he held till the time of his death. He was a director of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, and of the Waterbury Hospital. Mr. Plume was a member of the Union League Club, of New York City; also the Waterbury Club and the Home Club, of Waterbury. He was a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He married, October 16, 1855, Abbie Cornelia Richardson, of Newark. Children: Frank Cameron, (q.v.); David N., died September, 1899; Emily Mansfield, married John Gary Evans, formerly governor of South Carolina.

(XII) Frank Cameron, son of David Scott Plume, was born at Waterbury, August 7, 1856. He married, July 7, 1880, Sarah Andrews, born in Waterbury, September 11, 1852, daughter of General Stephen Wright Kellogg (see Kellogg IX). He was educated in the public schools and became associated with his father in business. Children: Stephen Kellogg, born at Waterbury, May 16, 1881, mentioned below; Angus Cameron, born at Thomaston, July 13, 1884, died December 8, 1903.

(XIII) Stephen Kellogg, son of Frank Cameron Plume, was born at Waterbury, May 16, 1881. He attended the Taft School, at Watertown, and the Holbrook Military School. He became associated with his grandfather in the Plume & Atwood Manufacturing Company, and is now general manager of the Thomaston plant. His home is in Waterbury. He is a director of the Thomaston National Bank and of the Plume & Atwood Manufacturing Company. In politics he is an active and influential Republican. He is unmarried.

KELLOGG

(IV) John Kellogg, son of Lieutenant Joseph Kellogg (q. v.), was baptized in Farmington, December 29, 1656, and married, in

Hadley, Massachusetts, December 23, 1680, Sarah, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Deming) Moody. She was born 1660, died in Farmington, September 10, 1689. He married (second) Ruth ———, who survived him, and died after 1732. He lived in Farmington and Hadley, and succeeded to the ferry in the latter town, which had been formerly operated by his father. In 1720 his name appears in a list of those owning the largest estates in Hadley. At that time his estate was valued at one hundred and fourteen pounds sixteen shillings. He lived at one time in the Hopkins school house in Hadley. Children, of first wife, born in Hadley: Sarah, May 2, 1682; John, March 21, 1684, died March, 1691; Joseph, November 6, 1685, mentioned below; Samuel, April 1, 1687; son, born and died September 9, 1689. Children of second wife: Ruth, April 5, 1693, died November 15, 1705; Joanna, June 12, 1694; Esther, February 17, 1696; Abigail, September 26, 1697; John, October 26, 1699; James, July 10, 1701.

(V) Joseph, son of John Kellogg, was born November 6, 1685, in Hadley, married, March 15, 1711, Abigail, daughter of Ebenezer and Abigail (Broughton) Smith, born July 11, 1688. He was a weaver by trade and lived in South Hadley. Several years after his death his son John was appointed administrator of his estate. Children, born in South Hadley: Abgail, December 8, 1711; Sarah, January 8, 1714; Ebenezer, December 26, 1715; Ruth, January 18, 1717; Martha, May 21, 1720; Esther, September 19, 1722; Joseph, December 24, 1724; John, October 13, 1727; Rachel, September 15, 1730; Jabez, February 11, 1734, mentioned below; Eunice, December 4, 1736.

(VI) Jabez, son of Joseph Kellogg, was born February 11, 1734. He was a private in Captain Samuel Smith's company, which marched from South Hadley to the relief of Fort William Henry, August, 1757, served thirteen days, travelled one hundred and eighty miles; also in Captain Elijah Smith's company, Colonel Israel Williams' regiment, in the expedition against Canada at Crown Point, April 26 to December 7, 1759; furnished himself with arms. He served in the revolution, Captain Kendricks' company, Colonel Lovell's regiment, in Charlestown, Massachusetts, 1776, as corporal; Captain Chapin's company, Colonel Porter's regiment, September 24 to October 4, 1777, sergeant; Captain Wait's company, Colonel Woodbridge's regiment, Bennington Alarm, August, 1777, private. In 1875 he removed to Hanover, New Hampshire, and died there, 1791. He married Abigail Catlin, who died in Hanover, 1788. Children born in South Hadley: Phineas, January 6, 1759; Enos, July 28, 1761; Jabez, April 22, 1763; Julian, September 27, 1765, mentioned below; Noadiah, October 26, 1767; Joseph, February 26, 1770; Abigail, March 20, 1772; Erastus, October 27, 1774, died May 12, 1775; Erastus, April 4, 1776; John, November 17, 1778; Rachel, July 23, 1781.

(VII) Julian, son of Jabez Kellogg, was born in South Hadley, September 27, 1765, married, February 14, 1788, Molly, daughter of Lieutenant Jacob and Mary (Kellogg) Pool. She was born February 1, 1771. Her father, Jacob Pool, was an officer in the revolution, and died of smallpox in the early part of the war. Her mother, Mary (Kellogg) Pool, was the daughter of Stephen and Martha (Wells) Kellogg, and was baptized July 30, 1753, in Colchester, Connecticut. Martha Wells was the daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Newton) Wells, of Colchester. Her mother married (second) Captain John Fellows, born 1751, son of Deacon Samuel and Eunice ——— Fellows, of Harvard, Massachusetts. Her grandfather, Stephen Kellogg, was the son of Jonathan, born December 25, 1670, in Hadley; married, January 3, 1711, Ann, daughter of James Newton, of Kingston, Rhode Island, born April 13, 1692, in Colchester, died August 14, 1769. Her great-grandfather, Jonathan Kellogg, was a son of Lieutenant Joseph Kellogg. Julian Kellogg was a blacksmith by trade, and when sixteen years of age, removed to Shelburne, where he learned his trade of Major Nash. He was a representative to the general court in 1808. From the public prints of the day we read: "His character was reputable and his life useful. In his death the church lost a cordial friend, and the town a valuable inhabitant." He died in Shelburne, August 4, 1813; and his wife in Bernardston, Massachusetts, September 7, 1833. Children, born in Shelburne: Abigail, November 12, 1788; Polly, December 10, 1790; Jacob Pool, February 16, 1793; Elam, July 14, 1795; Henry, April 26, 1797; Julia, March 10, 1799; John, December 10, 1800; Rachel, April 14, 1802, died January 22, 1803; Samuel Otway, July 22, 1809, died July 12, 1810; Mary Abigail, August 24, 1811.

(VIII) Jacob Pool, son of Julian Kellogg, was born February 16, 1793, in Shelburne, married, October 20, 1820, Lucy Prescott, daughter of Stephen, born May 24, 1764, and Sarah (Prescott) Wright, born March 31, 1765. She was born August 4, 1795, in Ashby, Massachusetts. He was a farmer by occupation and lived in Shelburne, where both he and his wife died. He died October 6, 1843, his wife, May 25, 1882, aged eighty-seven. Children: Stephen Wright, born April 5, 1822, mentioned below; Ai, February 15, 1824; John, January 6, 1826, served with distinction in Mexican and civil wars, on General Sheridan's staff as chief of commissary, with rank of colonel; Sarah Prescott, born September 11, 1829.

(IX) Gen. Stephen Wright Kellogg, son of Jacob Pool Kellogg, was born April 5, 1822, in Shelburne. His early life was spent on his father's farm, where he worked in the summer until twenty years old. After he was sixteen he taught school in the winter months, and attended an academy at Shelburne Falls for a short time. At the age of twenty he entered Amherst College, where he remained for two terms, then, at the beginning of the third term, entered Yale. He graduated from the latter in 1846, with one of the three highest honors of his class. In the fall of that year he became principal of an academy in Winchendon, Massachusetts, but the following winter returned to New Haven and entered the Yale Law School. In June, 1848, he was admitted to the New Haven bar, and immediately opened an office in Naugatuck, where he remained until 1854. In that year he was elected judge of probate for the Waterbury district, which included Naugatuck, and removed to Waterbury, where he has since had his law office. In 1851 he was clerk of the Connecticut senate; 1853 a member of the senate from the Waterbury district, and in 1856 a member of the house. In 1854 he was appointed by the legislature judge of the New Haven county court, and held the office of judge of probate for seven years. From 1866-69 he was city attorney, and during that time secured the first legislation for supplying the city with water. From 1877 to 1883 he was again city attorney, and drew up a bill for the establishment of a sewerage system for the city, procuring its passage by the legislature. In 1860 he was a delegate to the Republican national convention, and a member of the committee in that convention which drew up the "platform" upon which Abraham Lincoln was first elected president. He was also a delegate to the national conventions of 1868-76, and in the latter chairman of the Connecticut delegation. In the civil war, from 1863 to 1866, he was colonel of the Second Regiment of the Connecticut National Guard, and from 1866 to 1870, brigadier-general. In 1869 he was elected to the forty-first congress and re-elected in 1871-73. During his six years of service in congress he was a member of the committees on the judiciary, patents, war claims and Pacific railroads, and chairman of the committee on civil service reform in the forty-third. He was thought to be one of the best representatives the district ever had, with a peculiar aptitude for the practical side of legislation. Since the organization of the Bronson library in 1868 he has been one of the agents, and while in congress succeeded in making it one of the six depositories in the state for the valuable publications of the government. Since his retirement from congress Mr. Kellogg has devoted himself to the practice of his profession. He has never lost his interest in public affairs, and has frequently written articles for the press upon political and other subjects of interest.

He married, September 10, 1851, Lucia, daughter of Major Andre Andrews, born July 8, 1782, and Sarah Mehitable Hosmer, born August 4, 1794, and granddaughter of Chief Justice Hosmer, of Middletown. She was born March 11, 1829, in Buffalo, New York. Children, born in Waterbury: Sarah Andrews, September 11, 1852, married Frank Cameron Plume (see Plume XII); Lucy Wright, January 14, 1855; Frank Woodruff, July 26, 1857; John Prescott, March 31, 1860; Elizabeth Hosmer, March 14, 1864; Stephen Wright, March 8, 1866; Charles Poole, April 27, 1868.

BRUSH

Thomas Brush, the immigrant ancestor, was born in England about 1610 and came to this country before 1653, in which year he is recorded as owning a lot in Southold, Suffolk county, Long Island. In 1656 he witnessed a will in Southold and attended a town meeting there in 1660. October, 1660, it was agreed that "Gudman Brush" shall 'keep "the ordinary." He was made a freeman of Connecticut in 1664. In 1656 or 1657 he removed to Huntington, Long Island, having "sold his home at Southold to Thomas Mapes, his wife Rebecca assenting." About 1665 he with two others was sent by the "Inhabitants of Huntington with an Indian called Chickinoe to The South Meadow" to find and fix the boundaries of a piece of land bought from the Massapague Indians. This land was South Neck, and upon it was a marked tree which was to serve as a witness to the bargain. The white men met there some twenty Indians with their sachem, who was at first very reluctant to conclude the transaction. They finally agreed to point out the tree, however. Thomas Brush was ahead of the other white men, and went past the said tree without noticing it. "Then an Indian called him backe and shewed him."

He was one of the proprietors of Huntington in 1672. He was also chosen one of the overseers of the town and finally constable. He exercised his authority in the latter position when the town, February 21, 1670, "refuse

PLUMB

(VI) Joseph Plumb, son of John Plumb (q. v.), was born about 1671. He and Samuel removed to Milford, Connecticut, about 1692. He married, 1700, Susanna Newton, born in July, 1673. He died in March, 1714. His widow was appointed admisintratrix April 8, 1714. Children: Susanna, born 1702, married, January 14, 1724, Nathan Nettleton; Joseph, 1704, married Rebecca Thomas; Ann, 1707, married, January 6, 1731-32, Samuel Sanford; Noah, mentioned below.

(VII) Noah, son of Joseph Plumb, was born in 1709 and died in 1776. He removed to Stratford, Connecticut, as early as May 6, 1747. He married (first) about 1738, Abiah Platt; (second) November 23, 1761, Abigail Custis. He died in January, 1776, and his will was proved February 5, 1776. Children, born at Stratford: Abiah, March 26, 1739, married Andrew Nichols; Phebe, March 5, 1741, married James Nichols; Susanna, August 28, 1748; David, June 25, 1751, married Mary Beach; Joseph, mentioned below.

(VIII) Joseph (2), son of Noah Plumb, was born January 13, 1756, at Stratford, died November 7, 1826. He was a soldier in the revolution in Major Skinner's Light Horse Regiment. He lived in Stratford. He married, May 28, 1777, Sibel Edwards, born November 25, 1756. Children: Ely, born November 25, 1778, married, January, 1800, Betsey Booth; Elliott, mentioned below.

(IX) Elliott, son of Joseph (2) Plumb, was born at Stratford, January 15, 1788, died February 23, 1823, at the early age of thirty-five years. He lived in Trumbull, Connecticut. He married, December 29, 1808, Alice Nichols, born November 22, 1789. Children, born at Trumbull: 1. Avis Elvira, October 10, 1809, married Hall Beardslee in Bridgeport, and is still living, over one hundred years of age; Oliver Elliott, April 20, 1817, mentioned below; Sarah Ann, July 26, 1819.

(X) Oliver Elliott, son of Elliott Plumb, was born April 20, 1817, at Trumbull, now Nichols, Connecticut. He had a large farm and followed farming there during his active life, and in addition to this he also had a general store which he conducted, and did building and contracting. He had in connection with his store a meat market and ran a number of wagons. He was a prominent man in the town. He married, December 10, 1836, Sarah Ann Beach, born July 26, 1819, died October 26, 1899, at Nichols. Children: 1. Elliott B., born December 10, 1837, mentioned below. 2. George Hall, November 17, 1839, died November 30, 1869; unmarried. 3. Alice Elvira, February 15, 1843; married Alexander S. C. Cook; she is still living, at ninety years of age; had a daughter, Jessie Ella Cook, who lives at Nichols. 4. Charles Stiles, July 25, 1846, died July 29, 1869. 5. Hanford, October 2, 1853, lives on Washington avenue, Bridgeport, and has two children.

(XI) Elliott Beach, son of Oliver Elliott Plumb, was born December 10, 1837, died October 28, 1907. He attended the public schools and Easton Academy, also the schools of Stratford, Sedgewick, and the Chapin School of Trumbull. He became associated with his father in the meat business and learned the trade of butcher. He had charge of a butcher's cart with a route in Bridgeport and adjoining towns. After a time he embarked in the same line of business on his own account, opening a market on East Washington avenue. After two years he bought a lot on the corner of Beach and East Washington streets and built a block, removing his market thither and doing business there for a number of years. He subsequently devoted his entire attention to the wholesale trade in meats and provisions, having a place of business in a block which he built on Middle street. He finally sold his business to George Winton and retired about ten years before he died. In politics he was a Republican. He served one year on the school board. He was a member of the First Congregational church and of the Seaside Club. While living in Trumbull he attended the Methodist church. He was modest, retiring and devoted to his family. He married, December 10, 1859, at Trumbull, Connecticut, Celia Amatha, daughter of Andrew Beach and Mary (Thorp) Nichols, granddaughter of Silas and Polly (Fairchild) Nichols. Andrew Beach Nichols had a brother David and sisters Almina and Cynthia; he was a farmer; his children were: Celia Amatha, mentioned above; Plumb Beach, a dairy farmer at White Plains, New York; Estella Victoria, died at seven years; Elmer Thorp, a dairy farmer on the old homestead; Edward, died in infancy, May 12, 1861. Children of Elliott Beach and Celia A. (Nichols) Plumb: 1. Frank, mentioned below. 2. Estelle Nichols, born March 30, 1867, died January 30, 1891; married Professor Vincent C. Peck, of Bridgeport.

(XII) Frank, son of Elliott Beach Plumb, was born at Nichols, Connecticut, May 12, 1862. He was educated in the public schools of Nichols and Bridgeport and the Hills School of Bridgeport. He began his business life as a shipping clerk in his father's store. For some years he has been in business for himself at Stratford and conducts a large wholesale business in grain, and retail in groceries. He is a member of Pequonic Lodge, Independent Order Odd Fellows. He married, June 22, 1888, Eleanor Augusta, born in Nichols, daughter of James L. Peck, a carriage painter of that town; he later removed to Bridgeport, where he followed his trade until he retired. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Plumb have two children: Charlotte E., born March 14, 1891; Margaret, born August 25, 1903.

CLOWES George Hewlett Clowes, a leading citizen and manufacturer of Waterbury, Connecticut, formerly president of the board of trade in that city, and well-known as one of the most enterprising, progressive and successful business men in New England, was born in Clinton, Oneida county, New York, June 17, 1842. When he was five years old his father died, and he and a sister were left to be brought up by their mother. In his early boyhood he attended the Hemstead Seminary and the Jamaica Academy Long Island, and at the age of eleven was placed in the academy at Thetford, Vermont, where he remained four years. He was then called by his brother, Benjamin, to a position in the latter's banking house at De Pere, Wisconsin; but after a brief experience there, he decided to go back to his studies, and entered St. Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wisconsin. Upon concluding his studies there, he returned east, and made his home with his mother in Brooklyn, New York.

At the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Clowes was a handsome, stalwart and well-educated young man of nineteen. With a great love for the Union, and a firm determination to support the Federal government, he set to work at once to prepare himself for active service. Under the instruction of Colonel Tompkins, who had been commissioned by the government to educate officers for military positions, he passed a successful examination before the board of United States examining officers, and was immediately appointed adjutant of the McClellan Infantry, a picked corps then in process of formation in New York City. He took an active part in recruiting six hundred men for this regiment, but, owing to political favoritism, was unsuccessful in going out with it. The regiment itself was consolidated with a smaller body, and the officers of the latter were placed in command of the new organization, displacing the entire staff of the original corps. This did not, however, diminish in the least young Mr. Clowes' patriotism. On the second call for troops, he at once enlisted in the Forty-seventh regiment of Brooklyn, and this time was successful in going to the front. Soon he was appointed sergeant-major of the regiment, and held this position until mustered out at the expiration of his term of service. He next entered the United States navy as paymaster's clerk, and after service of a year and a half aboard the gunboat "Flambeau," doing duty off the coast of North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, was transferred to the store ship "Home," where he remained until honorably discharged, in the summer of 1864. The latter ship was stationed off Charleston, South Carolina, and during his service on board he kept the accounts not only of that vessel, but also of four others stationed near Charleston.

In the fall of 1864 he became bookkeeper for the large manufacturing house of Garden and Company, New York, in which he later became a salesman. In 1866 he received a flattering offer of employment from the Middelfield Fire and Building Stone Company, New York, whose service he left in 1869, to accept an appointment as paymaster's clerk on the United States gunboat "Juniata," with which he served on the European station until 1872. The pay in the navy was not one-fifth what he was making with the building company, and the latter, thinking that he would soon tire of his new position, would not accept his resignation, but gave him six months' leave of absence, stating that his position would be kept open for him. He remained, however, the full three years of the cruise abroad.

On his return to civil life, Mr. Clowes accepted a position as loan and discount clerk with the New York Loan and Indemnity Company. As such he won the regard and respect of all who had dealings with him, and it is said that through their confidence in him personally he influenced to this company deposits of his friends amounting to over a quarter of a million dollars. At the end of his second year there he was offered the position of secretary of the company, but refused to accept it on being told that the incumbent had not resigned. The latter was a man of sixty, with a large family, whom they had taken from the Hanover National Bank; and Mr. Clowes did not feel justified, as he expressed it, in "taking the bread from an old man's mouth." It was the reputation for personal ability and sterling integrity which he gained while in this position, that secured for him his next employment. When the New York Loan and Indemnity Company was preparing to discontinue business, Mr. Philo Brown, president of the corporation of Brown & Brothers, manufacturers of sheet brass, and copper, seamless and brazed tubes, of Waterbury, Connecticut, asked its president if he could recommend one of his employes who had the requisite ability and character to become identified, in a responsible capacity, with the Waterbury corgether, and Mr. Taylor conducted it alone for a time. In 1861 the mill was moved to Colt's dyke, the change from the original location being made on account of the freshets.

Mr. Taylor was a member of the city council in 1856 and was its youngest member, being only twenty-three years old. He was the fourth councilman from the fourth ward, the city then having six wards. The council then met in the old city hall, on the site of the present police station. After his year as a councilman, Mr. Taylor held no other political office whatever, but he was a Republican from the foundation of the party in 1856 and voted for every Republican nominee for the presidency from Lincoln to Roosevelt. He had known many men prominent in the affairs of the state and his recollections of the civil war period and the years after were most interesting. He was known and regarded as one of the most careful and painstaking financiers of Hartford. He was president of the State Savings Bank and after 1875 a director in the American National Bank. He was a vestryman in the Church of the Good Shepherd (Episcopal) and acted as trustee of the Church Scholarship Society and Fisher Memorial Fund; he was a member of the Church Club, Hartford Club, The Hartford Republican Club, the Connecticut Historical Society, and the Hartford Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Samuel Taylor married (first), November 27, 1856, Laura Louise Lester, born in East Hartford on April 3, 1830; died at Hartford, June 12, 1870; daughter of Chauncey and Abby (Wood) Lester, of East Hartford. He married (second), June 5, 1873, Mary Amelia Curtin, born January 5, 1836, at Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, died October 11, 1887, at Hartford, Connecticut. She was daughter of Dr. Constans and Mary Ann (Kinne) Curtin, of Bellefonte, Pennsylvania. Child of Samuel and Laura (Lester) Taylor: 1. Ada Louise, born August 10, 1863, at Hartford, where she resides. Child of Samuel and Mary Amelia (Curtin) Taylor: 2. Mary Curtin, born September 19, 1874, at Hartford, where she resides.

(III) Julia, daughter of Edwin and Nancy Jane (Kinne) Taylor, was born at Hartford, November 29, 1844, and died at Philadelphia, March 18, 1904. She married (first), November 27, 1867, John Stone Robinson, born May 29, 1837; died at Hartford, January 21, 1876; son of George and Harriet Robinson. She married (second), March 22, 1882, Roland Gideon Curtin, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, born at Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, October 29, 1839; son of Dr. Constans and Mary Anne (Kinne) Curtin, of Bellefonte, Pennsylvania. Children of John S. and Julia (Taylor) Robinson: 1. Sarah, born September 13, 1868; died July 23, 1872. 2. Julia Louise, born February 10, 1870, married Dr. Samuel D. Risley. 3. Edwin Taylor, born February 18, 1872, married Florence Evey. 4. John Trumbull, born June 11, 1874. 5. George, born December 28, 1875; died May 10, 1877. Children of Roland Gideon and Julia (Taylor) Curtin: 6. Roland Kinne, born August 6, 1883; died July 29, 1884. 7. Mary Kinne, born May 15, 1885.

(III) Edwin Pemberton, son of Edwin and Nancy Jane (Kinne) Taylor, was born at Hartford, Connecticut, August 20, 1849. He resides at Hartford, and is the head of the Edwin Taylor Lumber Co. He married, November 12, 1874, at Hartford, Caroline Lincoln, born August 15, 1849, at Hartford, daughter of Charles T. and Maria (Brewster) Lincoln. Children of Edwin Pemberton and Caroline (Lincoln) Taylor: 1. Charles Lincoln, born September 10, 1875; married Bertha H. Smith. 2. Edwin Pemberton, born February 22, 1879. 3. Caroline Brewster, born July 23, 1883. 4. Roland Kinne, born July 18, 1887; died July 25, 1888. 5. Morgan Welles, born May 14, 1895.

PLUMB

The origin of the surname Plumb (Plume, Plumbe and its other variations) is unknown, but it was in use in England among the earliest family names. The American family of Plumb is descended from the English family of county Essex. There are numerous coats-of-arms of this family, but that to which the Essex branch has claim is described: Ermine a bend vaire or and gules cottised vert. Crest: Out of a ducal coronet or a plume of strict feathers argent. The name of Robertus Plumme appears in the Great Roll of Normandy, in A. D. 1180; also Robert Plome. John Plume was in Hertfordshire in 1240, and in 1274 the surname is found in Somersetshire, Cambridge and Norfolk. One branch of the Connecticut Plumbs traces its ancestry direct to John Plumb, or Plumbe, of Toppesfield, county Essex, England, born about 1505; of this line, John Plumb, of Wethersfield, was the immigrant and progenitor of a widely dispersed line.

(I) John Plumb, of Terling, county Essex, was born about 1510, and was doubtless closely related to the other John. He married Johana ———, and he was buried January 25, 1548-49. Children: Elizabeth; Jane, baptized February 23, 1538-39; Margaret, baptized May 18, 1540; Philip, May 4, 1542; Johana,

May 22, 1543; Thomasin, April 4, 1545; George, mentioned below.

(II) George, son of John Plumb, was baptized at Terling, April 23, 1547; was buried there October 11, 1586, aged thirty-nine years five months eighteen days. The names of his children are not known, but there is good reason to believe that he and his sons lived at Inworth, the register of which is lost.

(III) ?

(IV) George Plumb, or Plume, grandson, it appears to be proved, of George Plumb, was born about 1607. His will, dated July 25, 1667, bequeathing to wife Grace and sons John and Timothy, was proved July 18, 1670, and shows that he was father of Timothy of Hartford and Wethersfield, and of John, mentioned below. He had a second wife Sarah, who proved the will. George was buried in June, 1670, at Inworth, Essex, England, where he lived.

(V) John, son of George Plumb, was born in Essex, England, in 1634, and died about 1696. He deposed at Hartford, Connecticut, July 11, 1666, that he was about thirty-two years old. He lived many years at Hartford, but moved to New London, Connecticut; was constable there in 1680 and inn-holder there. His wife joined the church in 1691. He was a shipowner and master and owned the ketch "Hartford." His wife was fined for selling liquor to the Indians. He was a bearer of dispatches from New London to the governor at Hartford in January, 1675-76, in King Philip's war, and was afterward granted land for service in this war. He was given a power of attorney, when he was of Hartford, to collect debts at Charlestown, Massachusetts, for creditors in England, and was named a son of George Plumb, of Inworth, Essex. He married Elizabeth Green. Children: John, born about 1666; Samuel, mentioned below; Joseph, about 1671; Green, about 1673; Mercy, 1677; George, 1679; Sarah, 1682.

(VI) Samuel, son of John Plumb, was born in 1670, probably at Hartford. He settled in Milford, Connecticut. His will, dated May 22, 1728, mentions land at New London, and was proved June 12, 1728. He died May 29, 1728, though his tombstone gives the date May 19. He married Mehitable Hinde. Children, born at Milford: Joseph, February 17, 1694-95; Mehitable, October 12, 1696; Elizabeth, February 18, 1699-1700; Samuel, February 8, 1701-02; Ebenezer, March 25, 1705; Ezra, mentioned below; Jonathan, September 10, 1710; Samuel, 1711; Hannah, April 6, 1712.

(VII) Ezra, son of Samuel Plumb, was born at Milford, February 27, 1708-09; died July 1, 1787; married, March 9, 1739, Elizabeth Buel, born April 27, 1720. He settled in Litchfield, Connecticut, in 1733, with his brother Joseph. Children, born at Litchfield: Elizabeth, May 9, 1742; Ebenezer, January 27, 1746-47; Hannah, November 24, 1749; Ezra, mentioned below.

(VIII) Ezra (2), son of Ezra (1) Plumb, was born at Litchfield, May 10, 1755, and died there October 17, 1787. He married, June 8, 1775, Sarah Woodruff, born July 13, 1751, died February 8, 1781, daughter of Nathaniel Jr. He married (second) December 4, 1783, Sarah Griswold. Children: 1. John, mentioned below. 2. David, born March 4, 1778. 3. Elizabeth, November 17, 1779; married Silas White. 4. Sarah, October 19, 1784; married Aaron Spencer and Noah Beach. 5. Ezra, December 25, 1786; died December 22, 1850; married, January 20, 1811, Hannah Lemley; grandparents of Hon. C. C. Jadwin, member of congress, who prepared much of the genealogy of this family.

(IX) John, son of Ezra (2) Plumb, was born at Litchfield, July 6, 1776; married, June, 1798, Deborah Plumb, who died November 26, 1828, aged fifty-six years, daughter of Ebenezer Plumb. John died August 15, 1813. Children, born at Litchfield: 1. Charlotte, April 26, 1799; married, August 1, 1845, Asa Slade. 2. Frederick W., mentioned below.

(X) Frederick W., son of John Plumb, was born October 28, 1801; married, December 8, 1828, Huldah Seymour Landon. He died September 26, 1877, aged seventy-five years ten months twenty-eight days; she died July 19, 1854. Children, born at Litchfield: 1. John L., mentioned below. 2. Seth F., August 27, 1836; killed at Chapin's Farm, Virginia, September 29, 1864, in battle in the civil war. 3. Lennia Elmira, born June 28, 1838. 4. William H., September 17, 1840; married (first) Emma T. Buell; (second) March 18, 1885, Ellen Peck. 5. Charles E., March 17, 1845; married Emma Camp.

(XI) John L. Plumb, son of Frederick W. Plumb, was born at Litchfield, December 14, 1831; died in November, 1907. He married, April 21, 1856, Lucy Fields, who is now living at Litchfield. Children, born at Litchfield: 1. Frederick L., July 11, 1858; in insurance business, New York City. 2. Anna Gertrude, February 27, 1861; lives at Litchfield. 3. Edward L., August 22, 1862; married, December 30, 1890, Jennie Kilbourne; he is a florist at Litchfield. 4. William S., February 11, 1865; mail clerk, Litchfield. 5. John Fields, mentioned below.

(XII) Rev. John Fields Plumb, son of John L. Plumb, was born at Litchfield, Connecticut, March 20, 1867. He attended the public schools of his native town and Trinity College, where he was graduated with the degree of A.B. in 1891. He studied for the ministry in Berkeley Divinity School, and was graduated in 1894. He was ordained a deacon the same year, and took orders as priest in 1895. From June, 1894, to April, 1895, he was assistant at St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, of Stamford, Connecticut. He was appointed rector of St. John's Church of New Milford, Connecticut, in 1895, and has had charge of that parish to the present time. He has built a parish house, and effected various other improvements in the church property. He is archdeacon and assistant secretary of the diocese. He is probation officer. He is a member of St. Peter's Lodge, No. 21, Free Masons, New Milford.

He married, June 12, 1895, Annie Goodman, daughter of A. C. Goodman and Annie (Johnston) Goodman, of Hartford (see Goodman). Children: Lucy G.; Edward L.; Robert J.; Annie Alden; John L.

BURROUGHS

It is believed that the Connecticut family of Burroughs is descended from the distinguished family of the same name which from an early period was seated near Barnstable in the county of Devon, England. A noted representative of that ancient house was Captain Stephen Burroughs, the navigator, who in 1553 commanded one of the vessels in the expedition sent from England by the Muscovy Company to attempt the passage to China by the Nova Zembla route. All the ships except that of Burroughs were lost on the coast of Lapland, but he arrived safely in the White Sea, and from this event dates the beginning of commercial relations with Russia. In 1556 he discovered the straits Oveparatiaq Nova Zembla from the then supposed continent. Another member of the Devonshire family, William Burroughs, Esq., "clerk and comptroller of the queen's navy," received in 1586 a grant of a coat-of-arms, described as azure, a bend wavy argent between two fleurs-de-lis ermine—a blazonry of much beauty.

For the early records of the Burroughs family in Connecticut we are indebted to Orcutt, the historian of Bridgeport and Stratford. (See also the paper by Mr. Orcutt, "Captain Stephen Burroughs and His Times," in the Annual Reports of the Fairfield County Historical Society for 1887.)

(I) Robert Burroughs, of Wethersfield, Connecticut, married Mary, widow of Samuel Ireland, and removed to New London, Connecticut; had (with perhaps other children) a son, see forward.

(II) John, son of Robert Burroughs, was born in New London, Connecticut. He married there Mary, daughter of John Culver. Children: John, see forward; Mary, born December 14, 1672; Hannah, October 9, 1674; Margaret, October 5, 1677; Samuel, October 5, 1679; Robert, September 9, 1681; Abigail, August 10, 1682.

(III) John (2), eldest child of John (1) Burroughs, was born in New London, Connecticut, September 2, 1671. Removing in early manhood to Stratford, Fairfield county, Connecticut, he became a prominent citizen of that community and one of its most enterprising men. In 1707 he purchased a half proprietorship in a grist mill, with a dwelling and several acres of land from John Seeley, who had built the mill—the first on the Pequonnock river—in 1697; and in 1710 he bought Seeley's remaining interest. Throughout the remainder of his life he was a prosperous farmer and miller. He married Patience, daughter of Edward Hinman, of Stratford. Children: Stephen, see forward; Edward, born March 14, 1696; Hannah, November 23, 1697, married Eliphalet Curtis; Eunice, September, 1699, married Joseph Curtis; Joseph, November 23, 1701; Bathsheba, September 26, 1703, married a Mr. Lewis; John, August 31, 1705; Eden, July 10, 1707; Ephraim, 1708; Patience, January 2, 1710, married (first) John Hubbell, (second) Benjamin Beach.

(IV) Stephen, eldest child of John (2) Burroughs, was born in Stratford, February 25, 1695. He inherited the paternal homestead, and also received a "double portion" of the estate. Subsequently, by purchase from his sisters, he became the sole owner of the mill property. In addition to his possessions in Stratford he had lands "in Rocky Hill, in the mountains of Cornwall, and on the plains of Wallingford." He married, March 3, 1720, Ruth, daughter of Abraham Nichols, a leading citizen and member of a wealthy family of Stratford. Children: Patience, born January, 1721; Eunice, July 4, 1723; Edward, 1727, died November 29, 1733; Stephen, see forward; Ruth, born April, 1731; Edward, April, 1735; Eden, January, 1738; Ephraim, April, 1740; John, July 1, 1745.

(V) Stephen (2), known as Captain Stephen Burroughs and also as Stephen Burroughs the astronomer, fourth child of Stephen (1) Burroughs, was born in Rocky Hill, now North Bridgeport, October 4, 1720. He was a man of extraordinary mathematical attainments, which, apparently, were acquired

Dear Rev. Wilteridge,

[Devon Family Hist. Soc.] As a relatively new member of the ~~D.F.H.S.~~ I have been interested in the Devon interests of other members but, until recently, haven't paid much attention to their other involvements.

I have just spotted your "PLUMB / PLUME" (Essex) Can I help - as an Essex resident?

"Plume" is quite a famous name in nearby Maldon — the Plume library of 6000 volumes is quite famous. It was bloated* by a local man, Dr. Thomas Plume, who became Archdeacon of Rochester. By all accounts he was a fine preacher & Samuel Pepys went to hear him at, I think, Greenwich. Not quite a Billy Graham but he evidently had his following!

* 1704 ca.

The Essex Record Office is in Chelmsford. I don't get much opportunity to get there - even though I live in the forlorn - as I work all week in Loughton but if you let me know a little more about who, when, & where, I'll be glad to have a look for you when next I go there.

None of your other names mean anything to me. I wonder though about Wilteridge? I am researching Wittrick / Whitnick / Witherick etc... in Norfolk & I suppose

Dear Mr. Roberts:

Thank you for your friendly and fascinating letter about my interest in the Plumb/Plume family of Essex, and your kind offer to help if you can.

In my genealogical research I am working not only on all of my ancestral lines, but also on all of my wife Elizabeth's.

Plumb was her mother's maiden name, and her immigrant ancestor, John Plume, came to America about 1635. We have fortunately been able to trace her family back to Great Yeldham in about 1530, through a book by W. B. Plumb, published in this country in 1893. However, we obviously still have a great deal more to learn about the Plumb/Plume family of Essex, and we are pleased to be in touch with someone who lives right there in Chelmsford.

Fortunately, we have already made two trips to Britain — one in 1976 and another in 1980. Each time we visited the Essex Record Office in Chelmsford, but only for part of a day.

One of the places where Elizabeth's ancestors lived was Spaynes Hall in Great Yeldham, and we were delighted to be shown through that lovely old home in 1980 by the present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Douglas-Hughes.

While trying to locate the Great Yeldham Spaynes Hall we mistakenly thought it was the Spains Hall in Finchingfield owned by Sir John Ruggles-Brise. In the process we spent seven hours one day with Sir John — first on a personally guided tour through his magnificent home, and then on a tour of places of interest in nearby Essex. He is the one who put us in touch with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas-Hughes and the proper Spaynes Hall.

Since Sir John Ruggles-Brise was for so many years the Lord Lieutenant of Essex, you probably know about him and perhaps are acquainted with him.

Through someone he knew in Maldon, Sir John made arrangements for us to visit not only the Moot Hall, but also the Plume Library, even though it was temporarily closed for repairs. We had a most pleasant visit with the Director of the Library, and she even gave my wife, as a distant relative of Dr. Thomas Plume, a small photographic copy of Dr. Plume's portrait, which normally hangs in the Moot Hall but was at that time in London being refurbished.

Since 1980 Elizabeth has frequently corresponded with Sir John and also with Mrs. Shacklock, the Director of the Plume Library. In fact, she just yesterday wrote to Sir John in answer to a letter we got from him at Christmas time.

I haven't been doing much on Plumb genealogy for some time, so I cannot easily suggest something you could do for us at the Essex Record Office. Perhaps the next time I write I'll have a favor to request of you there.

The one thing you could do for us, however, that might even be easier than trying to get to the Record Office during its open hours, is this: We're sure there must be some descendants of the Plumb/Plume family of Essex who are still living there. They would obviously be distant relatives of Elizabeth, and we should very much like to correspond with one or more of them. Some might still have the name Plumb, but others certainly wouldn't.

Would you be willing to use your ingenuity to find someone whose "Plumb line" goes way back in Essex? If there is an Essex Family History Society, perhaps they would have a record of who is researching the Plumb family. Perhaps there would be someone by the name of Plumb/Plume in the telephone directory whose family has been in Essex for a long time. I'll leave this to your imagination to work on for a while!

Regarding the name Wittrick and its variants in Norfolk I don't know whether or not they are tied into Witheridge, but I tend to doubt it. So far, it appears that all, or nearly all of the Witheridges stem from Devon. There are various forms of the name, but they all seem to have "g's" in the last syllable, rather than "ck's". However, one cannot be dogmatic in such matters!

Thank you again for writing and offering to help. We look forward to hearing from you again.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Sir or Madame:

My wife's maiden name was Plumb, and we know she had some distant relatives who lived in Streator.

We should be very grateful if you would check some of the historical books or articles about your city or county to see if mention is made of the first Plumbs who came to Streator and something about their ancestors and descendants.

Enclosed is a check for $2.00 in the hope that you can send us photocopies of the pages that refer to the Plumbs.

As far as you know, are there any Plumbs or Plumb descendants still living there? If so, we should appreciate your sending their names and addresses.

Thank you very much for your help.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

absolute ethics of life or of the underlying principles which form the basis of all human rights and privileges. Unfaltering application, intuitive wisdom and a determination to thoroughly utilize the means at hand are the concomitants which insure personal success and prestige in this great profession. Possessing all the requisite qualities of an able lawyer Mr. Butters has from the time of his admisison to the bar continued in practice in Ottawa, his labors attended with success that has gained for him a place among the representative members of the La Salle county bar.

HON. RALPH PLUMB.

Hon. Ralph Plumb, capitalist and philanthropist, founder of Streator and promoter of many of her leading business interests, was numbered among Illinois' distinguished citizens and was the friend and associate of many of the eminent men of the state. Full of years and honors he passed away on the 8th of April, 1903, but his memory will be cherished through generations to come in the city which he named and which owes so much of its substantial development and intellectual and moral progress to his aid and co-operation. Others have figured more prominently before the public, winning military or political distinction, but Ralph Plumb concentrated his energies upon the upbuilding and improvement of Streator and the city, with its varied interests, its business activity, its high ideals and possibilities for intellectual culture, stands as a monument to his life and labors. As the years rolled their course and were added to the cycle of the centuries each one was filled with successful accomplishments and good deeds that indicated that while not without that laudable ambition for advancement in business world Mr. Plumb also possessed the thorough understanding of life, its principles and its possibilities, that led him to aid his fellowmen and work for individual character development, for civic virtue and for national progress. Although the life record is ended the full value of his work cannot be estimated until the interests with which he was connected have reached their full measure of possibilities for good.

Ralph Plumb was born in Busti, Chautauqua county, New York, on the 29th of March, 1816. His ancestors had lived for many generations in the new world, the line of descent being traced down from John Plumb, who sailed from England to Great Britain's colonial possessions in America in 1635, locating in Weathersfield, Connecticut. The ancestral history in England is obtainable back to the year 1240 and prior to that in Normandy to the year 1180. The earliest knowledge of the family is largely obtainable through wills found in the great rolls of Normandy, showing Norman ancestry of the Plumb family in the time of Henry II, the great-grandson of William the Conqueror. A most complete record of the Plumb ancestry in England is obtainable, the line being traced back to the year 1500.

John Plumb, the first representative of the name in America, having taken up his abode in Weathersfield, Connecticut, rendered active service in the Pequod war under command of Captain Mason and received therefor a grant of land. Only one of his children was born in America and there is no record of any save one son, Samuel, who lived with him in Branford, Connecticut, when he died in 1648. It was from this John Plumb and another who came in 1660 and left descendants that the American branch of the Plumb family sprang, and in successive generations representatives of the name have been prominent in military and civil life of the country. They have been a race of warriors and statesmen and have been notable and forceful in all the emergencies of their several generations. There were forty representatives of the family in naval and military service during the war of the Revolution and the family was also worthily represented during the Civil war, while splendid record has been made by its members in official capacities. Ebenezer Plumb, grandfather of Ralph Plumb, was a native of Massachusetts and fought for the independence of the nation in the Revolutionary war. Because of his great activity and prominence in church work and the fact that he held the office of deacon for many years in the old church at Stockbridge, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, he was familiarly known as Deacon Plumb. His son, Theron Plumb, was born in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, August 17, 1783, and was married to Miss Harriet Merry, a daughter of Samuel Merry, of Herkimer county, New York. For a number of years they were residents of the Empire state and were living in Chautauqua county at the time of the birth of their son, Colonel Plumb, removing thence, however, in 1820, to Hartford, Ohio.

Spending his boyhood and youth in Hartford, Ralph Plumb mastered the branches of English learning in the common schools, which he attended to the age of fourteen years, when the limited financial resources of the family rendered his employment a necessity to him and he began earning his own living. He was first employed by a gardener at the small wage of eighteen and three-fourths cents per day. His diligence, enterprise and trustworthiness, however, soon won the attention and trust of his employer, Seth Hayes, and he was granted a position in his store, which was conducted under the firm name of Richard Hayes & Company. Further proof of his fidelity is indicated in the fact that he remained continuously in that employ until he had attained his majority and was then admitted to a partnership by his employer under the firm style of Hayes & Plumb. In the meantime he had early embraced every opportunity that was offered for the improvement of his education, giving much of his leisure time to reading and study, while in the school of experience he learned many and valued lessons. At the time of his admission to a partnership, the business had become quite extensive owing, in no small degree, to the efforts and capability of Mr. Plumb, and they further extended the field of their operations by establishing branch stores, Mr. Plumb personally superintending three of these in most successful manner. He thus steadily progressed toward the goal of prosperity and his business record was so honorable and straightforward and his ability so manifest that his fellow townsmen called him to positions of public trust. In 1854 he was chosen to represent his district in the Ohio legislature, where he served for three sessions, leaving the impress of his individuality for good upon various measures which were enacted during that period.

From Hartford Mr. Plumb removed to Oberlin in order to provide better educational facilities for his children. He had been married in 1838 to Miss Marrilla E. Borden, the friendship of their early days having ripened into love and had been consummated in marriage. Mrs. Plumb was in her girlhood a resident of Hartford, Ohio, and a daughter of Philo Borden, who was a native of New England and was of Puritan descent. By occupation he was a farmer. He filled some public offices, however, serving as captain in the state militia, while at one time he was postmaster of Hartford. His daughter, Mrs. Plumb, was there born September 16, 1818.

Following his removal to Oberlin Mr. Plumb became a factor in the business life of that city to the betterment of his own financial resources and also the general prosperity of the city. He was stirred to the depths of his nature by the events which were then transpiring and which were destined to shape one of the most important epochs in our national history. He was a student of the signs of the times and noted with interest the attitude of the south on the slavery question and the abuses to which the power of the slave holder was put. He became a strong opponent of the system and in 1858 was an active factor in an episode that has become historical and that clearly proved his position in regard to the slavery question. A contemporary biographer has given the following account of this. "A fugitive slave, John Price by name, had gone to Oberlin and secured work. His master, learning of his whereabouts, sent a slave-catcher to capture him and take him back to Wellington, a place nine miles away, where an officer with papers for his arrest awaited him. Fearing that Price might recognize the slave-catcher, two strange men were sent and told him that a gentleman wished to hire him. With the trusting disposition of the negro, fearing no treachery, Price accompanied the men. Oberlin then became the scene of wild excitement, the anti-slavery people being greatly aroused by the injustice of the methods that had been pursued. Five hundred strong, they rescued the slave and sent him off to Canada. Although Mr. Plumb was not among the number he, with thirty-six of the party, was arrested and thrown into jail. For eighty-four days they were incarcerated, during which time Mr. Plumb, with the assistance of two of his fellow prisoners, established and edited The Rescuer, an anti-slavery paper, even printing the same in the jail, where one of the party, owning a press and being a printer, did the work. This paper had a wide circulation and the arrest and imprisonment of those thirty-seven men caused the wildest excitement in the county and state. They were anxious for and demanded a trial. The town, county, state and even the federal government did not know what to do with them; they were a veritable white elephant on the hands of the authorities. During the legislative career of Mr. Plumb he helped to secure the passage of a bill defining the crime of kidnaping, and of this the citizens of Oberlin took advantage at this time and had the two men who inveigled the slave into the hands of the officers arrested for kidnaping him. This was like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky to the authorities and brought them to time; and they opened negotiations with the prisoners for their release, being secretly glad to get rid of them. They were released in consideration of the kidnapers not being prosecuted. During these eighty-four days of incarceration the thirty-seven prisoners were the heroes of the hour. Their imprisonment was a continuous reception, people coming from all parts of the country by the thousands to visit them and encourage them in the stand they had taken against oppression and injustice. At last the prison doors were opened with eclat and the prisoners welcomed with a band of music and the salute of one hundred guns."

Mr. Plumb continued a firm advocate of anti-slavery principles; and, being a strong advocate of the Union cause at the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion, he received the appointment of assistant quartermaster of a division, with a rank of captain. He was quartermaster on the staff of James A. Garfield, and was one of the General's closest friends and warmest admirers and served with him until the General became chief of staff for General Rosecrans. During the latter part of the great struggle he was quartermaster of Camp Dennison, and was brevetted colonel for meritorious service. During his service as quartermaster he handled immense sums of money without the loss of a dollar to the government, and at the close of the war he returned to Oberlin with a most honorable record.

Shortly after the close of the war, in 1866, Colonel Plumb became a resident of Illinois. He was selected in that year by a large syndicate of capitalists as resident manager to go to Streator, Illinois, and purchase four thousand acres of coal lands. He did so, developed the mines, built four hundred miles of railroad to handle the coal output and thus his labor proved of immense benefit to the state as well as a source of large profit to the syndicate and himself. When he arrived he found a territory in which the work of development had been scarcely begun, its great natural resources had not yet been transformed into marketable commodities but awaited the enterprise of a man who could plan and co-ordinate forces and produce results. Not only did he establish and control a business of large volume but also became at once a direct and valued factor in the growth and progress of Streator. There had been a village of practically no commercial or industrial importance in this locality, but Colonel Plumb was the real founder of the city of Streator, which he laid out, giving to it its present name in honor of Dr. Streator, who was president of the syndicate of which Colonel Plumb was manager. Moreover he personally named every street and became the first mayor, holding office for two terms. He was the unanimous choice of his fellow townsmen for the position, having no opposition, and he gave a public-spirited administration, recognizing and utilizing the possibilities for growth and improvement and looking beyond the exigencies of the moment to the future, so that not only the hour at hand but the oncoming years profited by his labors.

To a man of his strong anti-slavery tendencies it was the logical sequence that he should become identified with the republican party when it was formed to prevent the further extension of slavery. He never sought or filled office with the desire for public honor but only as a means to an end. When he felt that he might best discharge his duties of citizenship in this manner he accepted positions of political preferment. Had he directed his energies toward the field of political action and sought office he could undoubtedly have attained national distinction. As it was, his fellow townsmen sought him as their representative in congress and he was elected in 1884 and again in 1886, gladly retiring to private life at the close of his second term, although his great interest in the questions and issues of the day continued to the closing years of his life.

Colonel Plumb was at all times awake and alert to the interests of Streator and co-operated in many of the measures for material growth and development here. Evidence of his efforts is found in the Plumb Opera House and at his own expense he built one of the finest high-school buildings in this portion of the state, furnished it with all modern conveniences for educational purposes and presented it to the city. It is a model of its kind. No movement for the benefit of the city sought his aid in vain and in fact he was the promoter of the great majority of interests which have been of direct benefit to Streator and are matters of civic pride. In his later years he engaged in no active business save the supervision of his investments.

The home life of Colonel and Mrs. Plumb was largely ideal. Their three daughters were spared to them to years of maturity but all have now passed away, Geraldine having departed this life July 1, 1875, Harriet Eliza on the 24th of January, 1861, and Francenia M. on the 11th of February, 1872. On the 15th of October, 1898, Mr. and Mrs. Plumb celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage, years not without their sorrows yet fraught with much happiness, in which love and confidence continually increased. Mrs. Plumb was the associate and co-worker of her honored husband in all of his benevolent and philanthropic enterprises. She was a patron of the Ladies' Library at Streator and for more than two decades furnished a home rent free to it in the Plumb Opera House block. She was also deeply interested in the colored race and its advancement, making frequent and generous contributions to southern colleges, including the Freed Men's College and the Fisk University at Nashville, Tennessee, besides other institutions of learning for the negro. Hers was one of the natures that shed around it much of the sunshine of life and in her labor among the poor she sought not only to alleviate immediate suffering and needs but to give happiness and pleasure that life may seem brighter and more worth living to those whom she came in contact. Mr. and Mrs. Plumb were also numbered among the donors of large gifts to Oberlin College, where their daughters were educated, and to Goodwill church of Streator. Too broad in nature to be hampered by dogma or creed, both Mr. and Mrs. Plumb nevertheless displayed the true spirit of Christianity and exemplified the teachings of Him who came not to be ministered unto but to minister. Freely they received and freely they gave and not only in charitable bequests but also in their hospitality they were most generous, to the great delight of their host of warm friends. Frank and open hearted, straightforward in business, public-spirited in citizenship and loyal in friendship, the best traits of character in Ralph Plumb, however, were reserved for his own home. It was his greatest delight to provide his wife with those things which add to aesthetic culture and enjoyment and promote real happiness. His name, however, is interwoven inseparably with the city's history. Whatever was a matter of civic pride and civic virtue was of interest to him and he left the impress of his individuality upon the elements of progress, upbuilding and improvement that have given Streator the prominent position which she now occupies today as one of the leading cities of northern Illinois. He had the breadth of mind that recognized the liability to failure as well as the chances for success in business, the strength of purpose and of spirit which enabled him to courageously uphold his position in regard to any line of public thought or action; and, added to those qualities, his life manifested a gentleness of spirit that

"Nature might stand up
And say to all the world,
'This was a man.'"

CHARLES E. HOOK.

Charles E. Hook, cashier of the First National Bank of Ottawa, to which position he has attained through consecutive promotions since entering the institution as messenger on the 7th of January, 1880, was born June 25, 1862, in the city which is still his home. His parents were Charles H. and Anna (Schermerhorn) Hook. The maternal grandparents were Dr. Peter and Sarah (Ryder) Schermerhorn, the former from Schodack Landing on the Hudson and the latter from Sing Sing, New York. Dr. Schermerhorn came to Illinois in 1832 and settled at Channahon, Will county, in 1834. He brought his family to this state in 1837 and devoted his attention to the practice of medicine and surgery, becoming a leading citizen in the thriving settlement in which he took up his abode. In 1841 he removed to Ottawa, where he practiced his profession successfully until his death in 1848. He was one of the pioneer physicians of this city, his name being closely associated with the early history of the county. His widow survived him for a number of years and made her home with her daughter Anna, who became the wife of Charles H. Hook. Mr. Hook was born in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, in February, 1834, and Mrs. Hook was born in Ottawa in August, 1843. They were married in this city in 1861, Mr. Hook having come to Ottawa in 1857. He was first employed as clerk of the circuit court and also occupied a clerical position in the office of the county recorder. In 1868 he was elected county recorder and in 1872 was elected clerk of the circuit court, filling the position continuously until 1876. His political allegiance was given to the republican party and he was a recognized leader in its ranks. He exerted considerable influence in public thought and opinion and aided in molding the policy of his party in this locality. He died in June, 1884, and his widow is now living with her son, Charles E. Hook, in Ottawa. They were the parents of four children: Virginia, who is the wife of Charles Newbert, a resident of Kittanning, Pennsylvania; Arthur S., who is living at Oak Park, Illinois, and is secretary of the Inland Steel Company; Lee H., who is mayor of Chicago Heights and is assistant treasurer of the Inland Steel Company; and Charles E., of this review.

In taking up the personal history of Charles E. Hook we present to our readers the life record of one whose position in financial circles is a prominent one. He was educated in the public schools, pursuing the high-school course, and when fifteen years of age he accepted a clerkship in the employ of M. B. Mitchell, with whom he remained for ten months. On the 7th of January, 1880, he became messenger in the First National Bank of Ottawa and in February, 1881, was appointed bookkeeper, serving in that capacity until the 1st of July, 1887, when he was made assistant cashier. His promotion to his present position came to him on the 1st of Jan-

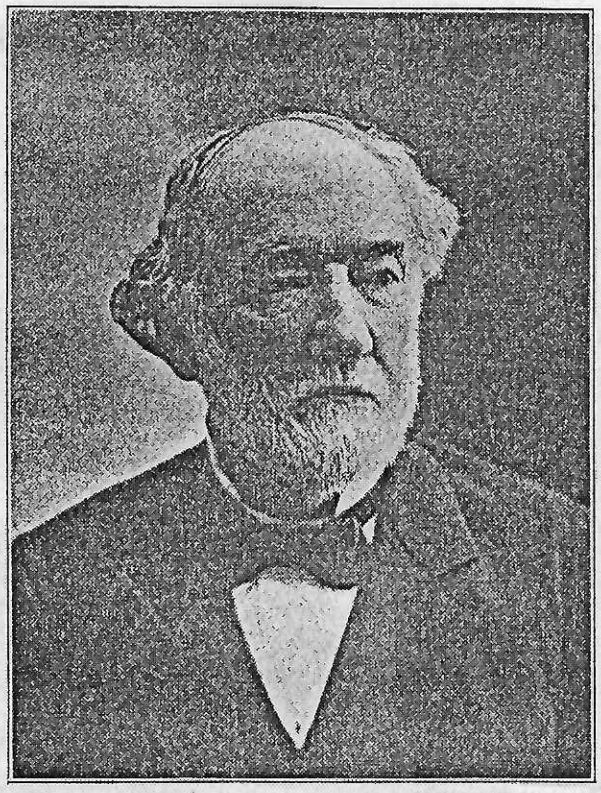
COLONEL RALPH PLUMB

FOUNDER OF THE CITY.

For no gift of nature, or no advantage of location is Streator so much indebted as for its great men. Its founder, Col. Ralph Plumb, was one of the products of a mighty epoch—the epoch that produced Lincoln, and Grant, Sumner and Logan and the other giants of the Civil War period. He was of the same heroic stature, and was cast in the same mould as those great Titans. He thrilled to the same issues, vibrated to the same passions and was a commanding figure in the anti-slavery battles of those turbulent times. He was a participant in the famous Oberlin-Wellington Rescue, and with thirty-six others was imprisoned for 84 days in an Ohio jail for the rescue of a fugitive slave. When they came out they were met by a band of music, a salute of 100 guns, and greeted as popular idols. In 1854 he was elected to the Ohio legislature, in which he served three terms, was a friend of Chase, Wade, Giddings, the correspondent of John Brown, and was an active and powerful champion of the radical reform measures of those days.



When the war came he gave his services to his country and was assigned to the staff of Gen. Garfield, with whom he held friendly and confidential relations until the latter's untimely end. He continued in service till the close of the war, and came out with the rank of Colonel.

At the close of the war, in the maturity of his powers, he came to Streator to open up the then undeveloped coal fields. As the head of the development company he opened mines, platted the town and developed a great industry. Later he built several hundred miles of railroad to connect the new village with the outside world. Streator is indebted to his initiative and influence for the fine park of eleven acres in the centre of the town, which it now enjoys.

He laid the foundations of the town on a broad industrial basis, and all his life gave every encouragement to factories, railroads and every enterprise calculated to upbuild the town. After many years of active service he decided to retire from business and give his attention to the higher interests of life. He sold out his railway and other interests, and became a soldier of the common good. He built a high school at a cost of $35,000 and donated it to the town, erected an opera house and established the Streator National Bank. When the town became incorporated as a city he was unanimously elected its first mayor, and when in 1884 the republicans of his district called him to be their representative in Congress, he was triumphantly elected, and again re-elected in 1886. He was born in Busti, New York, on March 29, 1816, and died full of years and honors at his home in Streator April 8, 1903.

His last public appearance was at the dedication of the Carnegie Library, Jan. 30, 1903, which the famous ironmaster had given the town at the personal solicitation of Col. Plumb. It was during the correspondence over the building of this library that Mr. Carnegie acknowledged Col. Plumb as his inspiration and example in his philanthropies, and in the devotion of the latter part of his life to the public good.

Col. Plumb's influence lives on in the broad democratic spirit of the town; in the absence of caste or social snobbery; in the fine enthusiasms for causes calculated to advance the city or the nation; in the liberality and open-hearted hospitality with which it receives all religions, creeds and opinions, and welcomes all men of all classes, races and peoples.

FAWCETT PLUMB

FIRST IN REAL ESTATE.

No man has written his name more deeply on the map of Streator than Mr. Fawcett Plumb. For to him more than any other is due its physical appearance, its additions, its subdivisions, its streets, and its general conformation as a town. He it was who orginally owned most of the land that Streator stands on, and who laid it out into additions, blocks and lots. It was his wise and liberal policy that made Streator a town of workingmen's homes, for at an early day he instituted the practice of low prices and easy monthly payments on lots to encourage home-owning by workers. No doubt this contributed largely to Streator's prosperity by inducing settlement by steady and thrifty workers, whose stake in the town made them conservative, and not easily persuaded to join in the strikes and turbulent labor disputes of those early days in the coal fields.

But it is not on the surface of the town alone that Mr. Plumb's mark is observed. The imprint of his hand is seen in the beginnings of every important industry in the town. In the early days he was interested in coal mining, and when he with prescient eye foresaw the possible exhaustion of that industry, he was one of the pioneer experimenters with the clays of the town, and then with the making of glass in Streator—the two industries which later came to be the town's main industrial reliance. Later he invented the Plumb Steam Tile Ditcher, one of the first power ditchers on the market.

His interests have been wonderfully varied, and no movement or enterprise for the good of Streator but has felt the push of his strong and stimulating hand. Liberal to a fault, he has given largely of land and money to help the new industries which it was sought to plant in Streator; and in all movements for the advancement of the town, whether economic, civic or social, he has been among the first to be called on for assistance and one of the most generous in response.

Mr. Plumb has been an independent republican in politics, and consequently not in the line of political promotion. But in 1872 he was elected to the state senate as an independent by a coalition of democrats and greenbackers and served for four years. He held the office of president pro tem of the senate, and was one of a group of three who held the balance of power, which they used to elect Judge David Davis instead of Gen. John A. Logan to the United States Senate.

He served as private secretary to his uncle, Col. Ralph Plumb, during the civil war, later studied law and was admitted to the bar in Albany, N. Y. in 1867. Came to Pontiac and began the practice of law the same year. In 1868 he joined his uncle, the founder of the town, in Streator, where he has remained ever since. Mr. Plumb is president of the Streator National Bank, is owner of the opera house, president of the Streator Paving Brick Company, and is actively engaged in real estate and other important enterprises. He was born in Andover, Ohio, in 1834, and at this writing (1912) is regarded as the most remarkable youth of 77 for energy, activity and zest of life that can be found in these parts. He has not retired from business, and as long as he lives he will work. His interest in Streator is as keen and his faith as unbounded as it was forty-five years ago, when he left the practice of law to lay out the real estate foundations of the city.

Outwardly a man of bricks, of real estate, of business; inwardly a dreamer, a mystic, an ardent student of the occult. In affairs, shrewd, practical, money-making; in his heart, generous, lavish of time, money and influence to every fine cause that reaches him with its appeal. Unostentatiously liberal; retiringly bountiful; self-effacingly public-spirited. Such is Fawcett Plumb as he appears to one who has known him for thirty years. Were fortune to bring him millions, no one would spend them more liberally or more for the good of Streator.

Dear Mr. Plumb:

My wife's maiden name was Plumb, and we know she had some distant relatives who lived in Streator.

We received your name and address from the Streator Public Library, and we hope you may be able to help us.

From a history of La Salle County we are aware that the Hon. Ralph Plumb was one of the founders of Streator, and that his nephew, Jarrett Plumb, was also an early leader there. Would you be willing to tell us how you are related to Jarrett and Ralph?

We have a copy of the book, The Plumb Family, by W. C. Plumb, 1892, and perhaps you also have one or have seen one. If so, are you able to explain how your family ties into the Plumbs as outlined in that book?

If you are unable to help us, could you refer us to someone in your family who knows a great deal about the Plumbs of Streator?

Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Rev. Witheridge:

I am excited to hear from you, and that your wife was a Plumb, and within a few days I am sending you a copy of the Plumb geneology — it is 5 or 6 pages, and I am making a copy for you. It is a geneology prepared by Col. Ralph Plumb and my grandfather (Samuel Plumb) was a brother of Ralph Plumb, came to Streator at Col Plumb's request in 1866 or '67 and spent the rest of his life here.

He, and my father and myself have been in the Banking business.

I would like to know more about the book "The Plumb Family" by H.B. Plumb (1872) to see if I could find a copy.

I'm sure the geneology will help and I will be anxious to hear more from you and be of any assistance I can.

Sincerely,

Dan Plumb.

Dear Ms. Klein:

Thank you very much for the information you sent regarding the Plumb family of Streator. The articles on Fawcett and Ralph Plumb were very helpful.

I have an additional request to make if you are able to help. Do you have anywhere a more complete article on Fawcett Plumb's life? For example, the article in The Story of Streator does not give the name of his father.

I would be very grateful if you or if you can find additional material on Fawcett and any other Plumbs and send it to me. Enclosed is another check for $2.00 and a reply envelope.

Yours sincerely,

1855, locating in Vermillion township and purchasing a farm. As the years have passed he has added thereto until he has reached his present acreage.

He was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1840, his parents being Arthur and Eliza (Horn) Chamberlin, who came to La Salle county in 1855, and were residents of Vermillion township until called to their final rest. The father died in 1863, at the age of forty-five years, and the mother in 1903, when about eighty-six years of age. Arthur Chamberlin was a native of Pennsylvania but his father was born in Ireland, whence he came to America in the eighteenth century, settling in the Keystone state, where he followed farming, his death there occurring when he had reached a venerable age. He was three times married, and a son of his first marriage was a soldier in the war of 1812, after which he removed to Wisconsin, where he died. In the family of Arthur and Eliza Chamberlin were eight children, all of whom came to this county: Daniel, deceased; Sarah, the deceased wife of Jerry Studebaker; Jackson; Emily L.; Mrs. Martha Lewis, residing in southwestern Nebraska; David, who is married and resides upon a farm in Eagle township; Hulda, wife of William Peck, of Vermillion township; Mrs. Mary A. Cover, who died in Fulton county, Illinois; and Mrs. Susan Cartwright, living in Nebraska.

From the age of fourteen years Jackson Chamberlin has lived in La Salle county, where he attended school. Through the periods of vacation he was trained to the work on the farm and desiring no other occupation as a life work he has always devoted his energies to the tilling of the soil and has prospered in his farming operations. He is today the owner of a valuable property comprising two hundred and eighty acres of land situated on sections 27 and 15, Vermillion township. His farm is equipped with substantial buildings and everything necessary for the care and development of the fields, including the latest improved machinery. There are good fences and in the pastures are found high grades of stock. Mr. Chamberlin has made all of the fine improvements upon his farm and he also owns a good farm of eighty acres in Idaho, worth one hundred dollars per acre.

On February 2, 1874, occurred the marriage of Jackson Chamberlin and Miss Sarah Brierly, who was born in La Salle county and is a sister of Samuel Brierly, of Eagle township. She died August 20, 1885, at the age of thirty-six years, leaving two children, Almira and Ora O., both at home.

Politically Mr. Chamberlin is a democrat, supporting the party since age conferred upon him the right of franchise. He has served as school director for thirty-three consecutive years, being also clerk of the board until he recently resigned. He is now serving his first term as supervisor. The cause of education profited by his active and helpful co-operation and in all matters of citizenship he is progressive and public-spirited, his labors proving of direct benefit in the work of public progress. Fraternally he is connected with the Masonic lodge at Tonica and is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

SAMUEL PLUMB.

Too often the idea of business success conveys the impression of close, unrelaxing attention on the part of employer and of continuous, uninterrupted labor on the part of employe, permitting little or no thought of those personal interests relating to man's intellectual or moral progress. Maximum accomplishment with minimum outlay of work and capital seems to be a dominant spirit in the business world today. It is refreshing in the midst of such an outlook to pause and contemplate the life work and business record of such a man as Samuel Plumb. Successful in an eminent degree, he nevertheless possessed the broad humanitarian spirit that recognized the rights of others and never was he known to take advantage of the necessities of his fellowmen in any business transaction. He won prosperity through judicious investment and through close application and at the same time shaped his course in conformity with a high standard of commercial ethics, manifesting at all times not only justice but the higher attribute of mercy. In the ancestral history of the family were displayed many sterling traits of character that won prominence for different representatives of the name in civic and military affairs and the same principles of honorable manhood which work for righteousness and for eminence in public life were manifest by him in his business career and in his daily conduct with his fellowmen, although he did not seek to figure prominently in the public gaze.

It was in the year 1635 that John Plumb, of England, established his home in Weathersfield, Connecticut, as the first member of the family in the new world. The ancestry is traced back through continuous line in England to 1500, while record is found of the Plumbs in Normandy back to 1180 A. D., a number of wills being extant which show the ancient lineage of the family even to the days of the reign of Henry II, the great-grandson of William the Conqueror. Only one of the children of John Plumb was born in America and there is no record of other members of the family save that of his son Samuel, who lived with him in Branford when he died in 1648. It was from this John Plumb and another who came in 1660 and left descendants that the American branch of the Plumb family sprang and from that time to the present the name has been honored in connection with those interests which work for the material progress and for the honor of the nation. Ebenezer Plumb, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Massachusetts and was a member of the colonial army in the war for independence. He was usually known as Deacon Plumb from the fact that he long served as deacon in the old church at Stockbridge, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, in the work of which he took a most active and helpful part.

The parents of Samuel Plumb were Theron and Harriet (Merry) Plumb, the latter a daughter of Samuel Merry, of Herkimer county, New York, while the former was born in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, August 17, 1783.

The parents were residing in New York at the time of the birth of Samuel Plumb on the 15th of January, 1812. At the usual age he entered the public schools, but his opportunity for pursuing his studies under public instruction was limited and he largely obtained his knowledge by study while at the work bench. He was a youth of eight years when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Hartford, Ohio, where a portion of his youth was passed, while later he became a resident of Oberlin, that state. Watchful of every opportunity for business advancement and placing his dependence in the safe and substantial qualities of close application, energy and a thorough mastery of every task which he undertook, he gradually advanced until as president of a bank in Oberlin he was recognized as one of the prominent business men of his part of the state. It was prior to the Civil war that he joined with others in establishing this bank and was officially connected with the enterprise until 1869, when he removed to Streator.

In the meantime, through the period of the Civil war, Mr. Plumb was recognized as an influential resident of Ohio, leaving the impress of his individuality upon public thought and action during the momentous period in our national history brought about by events which led up to and culminated in the Civil war. The great question of slavery was agitating the country and a study of the conditions in the south led him to the endorsement of the policy of abolition. He voted with the whig party and later when the republican party was formed to prevent the further extension of slavery he joined its ranks. He was the friend and associate of distinguished leaders in the movement, including Hon. Benjamin Wade, Hon. Joshua R. Giddings, Governor S. P. Chase and others. He was elected to the state legislature from Ashtabula county and took an active interest in the discussion of the important questions which came up for settlement in the house. Following the inauguration of the Civil war his aid proved a potent factor in bettering the condition of soldiers in the field and of their families at home. He served on a committee under appointment by the governor of Ohio that investigated the conditions of Ohio troops after the first battle of Bull Run and suggested means for the improvement of such conditions. He ever remained a stalwart advocate of republican principles, and, though he had no aspiration for official preferment, in the years following his removal to Streator few men outside of public life had broader or more accurate knowledge of the issues of the day and of the questions bearing directly upon state and national welfare.

It was in the year 1869 that Samuel Plumb arrived in Streator, finding it a small village of embryonic conditions. The fact that it was known as Hardscrabble perhaps indicates something of the charater of the town, which was just emerging from villagehood and had little industrial or commercial importance. Believing in the future of the new town, however, and realizing that the growth of Illinois was being rapidly carried forward along substantial lines, he opened a private bank in Streator and subsequently organized the Union National Bank, of which he was president for a number of years prior to his death. As a banker he won a gratifying measure of success and became one of the capitalists of the city. Any successful business enterprise is a factor in a city's growth and in this manner Mr. Plumb contributed to general improvement. Moreover his co-operation and aid could be counted upon at all times to further any plan or movement for the benefit of the city and its people and he did much to advance material, intellectual and moral progress.

In the year 1865 Samuel Plumb was united in marriage to Miss Levancia Holcomb, a native of New York and a daughter of Hiram and Jane (Richards) Holcomb, who removed from the Empire state to Ohio, and thence came to Illinois when Mrs. Plumb was but twelve years of age. Afterward returning to the Buckeye state, she continued her education in Oberlin College, from which she was graduated in the class of 1861. While a student there she formed the acquaintance of Mr. Plumb, to whom she gave her hand in marriage in 1865. Their children are as follows: May E., the wife of Dr. R. A. Harris, of Los Angeles, California; Jessie, the wife of H. A. Schryver, of Wheaton, Illinois; Samuel Walter, vice president of the Union National Bank; and Bertha M., the wife of L. B. Frazier, of Aurora, Illinois.

Mr. Plumb held membership in the Congregational church of Streator, but withheld his aid from no religious movement that tended to uplift his fellowmen. He took a sane, unbiased view of life, its possibilities and its responsibilities, and he neglected no duty that devolved upon him in his business career or in his relations with his fellowmen as a citizen or social associate. His nature was pre-eminently kindly and cordial. He looked for the best in others and thereby received from them the manifestations of the higher nature. He was true to every trust of the business world and no confidence reposed in him in any relation of life was betrayed to the slightest degree. He passed away in Colorado Springs, Colorado, June 23, 1882, having rounded out the Psalmist's span of three score years and ten. Mrs. Plumb, still surviving her husband, yet makes her home in Streator and is president of the Union National Bank. Moreover she is a mem- of the Presbyterian church of Streator and her spirit of philanthropy is manifest in her hearty co-operation with many benevolent and charitable enterprises of the city. Provided with excellent educational privileges, added to innate refinement and culture, she has always been recognized as a leader in social circles, exerting a wide influence in behalf of the ennobling virtues and graces of character.

SAMUEL W. PLUMB.

Samuel W. Plumb, one of the directors and the vice president of the Union National Bank of Streator, was born in this city, July 14, 1874. He completed his education in Wheaton College at Wheaton, Illinois, from which he was graduated in 1895. The following year he entered the Union National Bank of Streator as messenger and has been an important factor in the management of this strong financial institution in later years.

In Wheaton, Illinois, on the 11th of November, 1896, Mr. Plumb was united in marriage to Miss Anna A. Dresser, who was born in Pentwater, Michigan, April 28, 1876, the wedding ceremony being performed by her grandfather, Rev. Amos Dresser, who in antebellum days was a strong anti-slavery man and was once whipped on the streets of Memphis, Tennessee, for expressing his opinions in opposition to slavery. Mrs. Plumb still has in her possession the testament which her grandfather carried in his pocket at that time. Her parents were Amos and Rhoda (Roberts) Dresser. Her father, born in Ohio and educated in Oberlin College, is now a manufacturer of Wheaton, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Plumb have two children: Samuel W., born March 6, 1899; and Gordon Dresser, born February 28, 1901.

Mr. Plumb is a valued member of the Streator Club, while in his political views he is a republican.

THOMAS O'DONNELL.

Thomas O'Donnell was born on the farm where he now resides on section 17, Wallace township. His natal day was June 23, 1862, and his parents were Andrew and Margaret (O'Donnell) O'Donnell, further mention of whom is made in connection with the sketch of James J. O'Donnell on another page of this work. In the family were seven children, namely: Mary, who was born in Ireland, and died in 1860; Johanna, who is living on the old home farm in the house built by her father; John, who was born in Ireland and married Mary Hogan, their home being in Stewart, Iowa; Kate, the wife of Ed Wolfe, also a resident of Stewart, Iowa; Mike, who is married and resides in Montana; James J., who is living in Wallace township; and Thomas, of this review.

Throughout his entire life Thomas O'Donnell has lived upon the old home place. When his father died he inherited eighty acres of land and he has built a new house and barns upon his farm and otherwise improved his property. He has drained his fields by laying many rods of tiling and has divided the farm by well kept fences. He is now getting everything about his place in good shape and is still investing money for the further development and improvement of the property. The buildings are new and in good condition and the farm is neat and thrifty in appearance. In addition to his home place he rents and cultivates forty acres owned by his sister, who lives in the old home.

On the 9th of February, 1891, Mr. O'Donnell was united in marriage to Miss Katie Keating, who was born in Ottawa and is a daughter of John Keating, a resident of the county seat. Two gas company, which was then about used up, and consolidated under the name of the Streator Gas and Light Company. He has also since residing here sold the Bessemer Electric Company of Bessemer, Alabama, to the Birmingham Electric Railway Company, and has now sold the Streator Gas & Light Company to the Illinois Light & Traction Company.

Mr. Stiles was married in Sycamore, De Kalb county, to Miss Emily Dutton and has two sons and one daughter now living, who are William A. Stiles, of Chicago; Everell D. Stiles, of Streator, and Mrs. John E. Brower, of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

FAWCETT PLUMB.

Fawcett Plumb is a representative of various corporate interests in Streator and his name has figured conspicuously in political circles, so that his activity in various lines has contributed to public progress and improvement, promoting the commercial development and upholding the legal and political status of the community. He was born in Andover, Ashtabula county, Ohio, December 10, 1834, a son of Francis M. and Laura M. (Hyde) Plumb, the former a native of New York and the latter of Connecticut. The mother died when but forty-five years of age and the father, who for many years followed farming in Ohio, departed this life at the venerable age of ninety-two years.

Reared under the parental roof, Fawcett Plumb early became familiar with the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist. His father was poor with a large family, so that Fawcett Plumb had to begin work early and as a barefooted boy he labored in the fields and on the farm. He thus worked from the time of early spring planting until crops were harvested in the autumn. He attended school for a brief period in the winter seasons and manifested much aptitude at his studies. Studious by nature and taking great interest in the work of the schoolroom, he did not consider it a hardship to walk four or five miles to a spelling school when a boy. He was a good speller, often making the best record in a large class. He taught school when quite young and he worked his way through college, supplementing his early educational privileges by study in Oberlin College at Oberlin, Ohio. He possessed determination and energy, which brought out every spark of latent talent and his ambition prompted him to seek fields of labor wherein intellectual prowess and progress were necessary.

Following his return from college he [illegible] with and was associated in business with his uncle, Colonel Ralph Plumb, who is mentioned elsewhere in this work and in whose history is given the genealogical record of the family. He served as private secretary to his uncle during the war and afterward was associated with him in about the same capacity until his death. Desiring to enter professional fields, he took up the study of law in Albany, New York, and was admitted to the bar there in 1867. In that year he came to Illinois, settling in Pontiac, where he formed a partnership, becoming a member of the firm of Fleming, Pilsbury & Plumb, attorneys at law. He was thus associated until 1868, when he removed to Streator, where he embarked in the real-estate business and has since handled property, negotiating many important realty transfers. His executive force, keen discrimination and business ability awakened public confidence and led him to be sought as a co-operant factor in the furtherance of many business projects which have felt the stimulus of his executive and wise counsel. He was one of the organizers of the Streator National Bank in 1881, became one of its first directors and has since acted in that capacity. In 1891 he was chosen to the presidency and has since been at the head of the bank, which is one of the safe and reliable monetary institutions of the county, being conducted upon a conservative yet progressive plan that has awakened public confidence and therefore gained public support. Mr. Plumb is also president of the Streator Paving Brick Company and is associated with one of the leading industrial enterprises of the city. He is likewise the owner of the Plumb Opera House, which was built in 1883. His name is thus inseparably interwoven with the business development and consequent prosperity of the city. During his residence in Streator Mr. Plumb continued through the influence of his uncle to stand to him largely in the relation of a private secretary, assisting him in his operations as a railroad builder and in various ways. His knowledge of law made his services very valuable to his uncle in the management of extensive and important business interests. A man of great natural ability, his success in business from the beginning of his residence in Streator has been uniform and rapid. It has been truly remarked, after all that may be said for a man in the way of giving him early opportunities, he must essentially formulate, direct and give shape to his own character and to a large what Mr. Plumb has done. Watchful of opportunities, readily utilizing the advantages that have come to him, his has been an enviable as well as successful business career and [illegible] contributed in large measure to the general commercial prosperity.

Mr. Plumb was married to Miss Geraldine Plumb, a daughter of Colonel Ralph Plumb and a cousin and a schoolmate of his boyhood days. Following her death Mr. Plumb wedded Miss Lavina Ballard, of Peoria, Illinois, who died at the age of thirty-two years, leaving one son, Erwin F., now seventeen years of age. For his third wife Mr. Plumb chose Miss Carrie Merry, of Ilion, New York, and a daughter of Lawrence L. Merry.

Mr. and Mrs. Plumb are supporters of the Goodwill church of Streator and in politics Mr. Plumb is an independent republican, who does not hesitate to transfer his allegiance from one party to another when he deems that the principles involved demand such a course of action. He was elected upon an independent ticket to represent La Salle county in the state senate from 1872 until 1876. In 1896 he supported Bryan for the presidency but voted for Roosevelt in 1904. He stands as a man firm in support of his honest convictions and is public spirited, being thoroughly interested in whatever tends to promote the moral, intellectual and material welfare of his city, county, state or nation. He is now seventy-two years of age, but is still a hale and hearty man, being as active as most men of fifty years. He is a man of exemplary habits, who has always exemplified in his life honorable and straightforward principles and he is widely recognized as a modest, whole-souled man.

DANIEL HART.

Daniel Hart is a farmer and stockman of Eagle township, living on section 13. His farm embraces two hundred acres of land, which is arable and productive and has been well improved through the efforts as well as the result of the ambition of Mr. Hart. A native of New York city, he was born on Willett street, August 7, 1833, his parents being John and Elizabeth (Mahon) Hart, both of whom were natives of county Roscommon, Ireland. They came to America in 1835, and after a brief residence in New York made their way westward to Chicago, John Hart worked on the canal and was drowned in the Illinois river in 1842. His widow with the children afterward removed to Galena, Illinois, where they remained for a year and then returned to Peru, but when another year had passed settled in Eagle township a half mile west of the present home of Daniel Hart. There the mother continued to reside for a long period, passing away here upon the home farm in 1888, at the advanced age of seventy-five years. Her children were four in number. Mary, born in Ireland, in 1831, became the wife of Charles Clifford, and both died in Chicago about 1890. They owned and for long years resided upon a farm in Eagle township and were well known in their part of La Salle county. They left nine children; James, John, Daniel, Joseph, William, Pierce, Frank, Ellen and Mary. Bryan Hart, born in 1833, in Ireland, died upon the home farm on section 13, Eagle township, at which time he was serving as constable. He had previously filled that position and been tax collector for twenty-five years or more. He married Sarah Kain, who passed away prior to his death and their surviving children are Isabella, Ann, Ellen, Mary and John Hart. Daniel Hart of this review is the third of the family. Lavina, born in Peru, Illinois, in 1840, is the wife of John Hamilton and they reside in Streator. They have five children, John, Anias, Loretta, Mary and Anna.

Daniel Hart has resided practically all his life in La Salle county. He worked forty-seven years at blacksmithing, conducting a shop on the farm and employing one or two men all the time. He learned the trade with John McDermott, and afterward worked as a journeyman in various places before starting a shop of his own, when twenty-two years of age. He had a liberal patronage because of his good workmanship and his straightforward business methods. As the years went by he also gave considerable attention to the cultivation of his farm and to the raising of stock and this dual pursuit still claims his attention. He is today the owner of two hundred acres of rich and productive land on section 13, Eagle township, and the place is lacking in none of the modern equipments of a model farm. He has well tilled fields and good grades of cattle, horses and hogs and both branches of his business are proving profitable.

In 1859 Mr. Hart was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Casey, a daughter of Nicholas Casey. She was born in Ottawa and died March 7, 1905, at the age of sixty-five years. There had been thirteen children of that marriage, of whom seven are yet living: William, residing near the old home farm, married Miss Elizabeth Whalen. Isabell became the wife of James Ryan, and died in 1890. Mary Jane married Andrew Byrnes and lives at Joliet, Illinois. Margaret is at home. Loretta E. became the wife of James Whalen, a resident farmer of Eagle township, and died in 1900. Sarah B. is the wife of James Mullen, living near Farmer City, Illinois. John is at home. Frank is married and lived in

Dear Rev. Witmerdge.

I am very pleased to send you this Plumb geneology — a copy of one I have and a copy of the one compiled by Col. Ralph Plumb, who was a Colonel on the staff of General (later President) Garfield during the Civil War. As you know he came to Streator to locate and develop coal, which had been discovered in the area, and representing Ohio capitalists (Ralph Plumb came from Oberlin, Ohio) headed by a Dr. Streator.

Colonel Plumb came to this locality in 1867 ~~1866~~ — was credited with being the founder of Streator, and stayed here the rest of his life — until his death in 1903.

My grandfather (Samuel Plumb, 1812-1870) was Colonel Plumb's brother — came to Streator about 1867 ~~1866~~ at Ralph Plumb's request, to provide banking for the new settlement — Samuel Plumb was a banker in Oberlin.

Corrections by DEW

I have checked, (✓) my own immediate family in this geneology — my Own name in the genealogy is listed as Samuel Walter Plumb Jr. — on the last page in this genealogy.

I have lived in Streator all my life — and now live only one city block from my daughter and son-in-law (Mr and Mrs Thomas R Brew) and two grandchildren in Streator.

Would be sincerely interested in what you find from this Genealogy — to know more about you and your wife's family — and to answer any more questions you might have.

Please let me know.

Most sincerely,

Sam Plumb

Dear Samuel,

Thank you very much for the Plumb genealogy you sent on March 22nd. I have now been able to identify this material and tie it into Elizabeth's family. You remember that I mentioned the book called The Plumb Family, by H. B. Plumb. When your sheets arrived, I was sure they were from this same book, because the format of the type and the page sizes were the same. However, the pages were numbered beyond any we had, and the numbering of the individuals didn't tie into what we had.

So I went over to the Minnesota Historical Society Library in St. Paul, where I had seen the book and where they had Xeroxed it for us. I thought we had the whole book, but it turned out that we only had the first half. They had two editions of the book — a preliminary one dated 1890 and the final edition dated 1893.

Your sheets are from the 1890 edition, and ours are from the 1893 one. This is why the numbering systems didn't fit together. As you see, I have had some pages Xeroxed to send to you. These carry your line back to John and Johane Plumbe of Tarling in Essex County, England.

Elizabeth's line also goes back to Tarling, but unfortunately no one has been able to tie her ancestors and yours together with certainty. Your earliest identifiable ancestor was John, who was born about 1510 and lived in Tarling. Elizabeth's earliest identifiable ancestor was another John, who was born about 1505 and lived in Toppesfield. It seems quite reasonable to assume they were related, as those two towns are less than 15 miles apart. For the moment I am assuming they were first cousins, though they might have been second or third cousins at the most.

If the two original Johns were first cousins, I have figured out that you and Elizabeth's grandfather, Frank Plumb, are 12th cousins. That means that you and Elizabeth are 12th cousins twice removed, and she is a 14th cousin of your grandchildren!

I'm also enclosing two articles on the Plumbs (Plumes) from a book about Connecticut families by Wm. R. Cutter. One deals with the early history of Elizabeth's line, and the other deals with yours. Of course, the later generations diverge to a different descendant in each case, as you can see.

Now a few words about ourselves. Elizabeth and I grew up in Saginaw, Michigan. I began as a heating and ventilating engineer, working with my father, who was a manufacturer's representative, for four years after college. Then I decided to be a minister (Baptist) and went to a seminary in Rochester, N.Y. We spent six years in Chicago while I was doing graduate work at the University of Chicago and serving as an assistant minister. Then I was a minister of a church in Wheaton, Ill. (between Elgin and Rockford) before coming to be executive director of the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches. I retired two years ago after 29 years in that position.

Before our marriage Elizabeth was a kindergarten teacher, and more recently she has been the author of seven books for children and young people. We have two sons: Jim works in a store in Minneapolis and lives a few blocks from us. Tom is a psychiatric social worker in Chicago and is working on a Ph. D. in Northwestern University. He's going to be married in June, and I'll be performing the ceremony!

We've had two trips to England — in 1976 and 1980 — and have had some wonderful experiences visiting ancestral places. You would be especially interested in our trips to Essex, where we were shown through Spaynes Hall by the present owners. It was once owned and lived in by Elizabeth's ancestors (distant cousins of yours). We also visited the Plume Library in Maldon. It was established and endowed by another relative Dr. Thomas Plume, D.D. We correspond frequently with friends and relatives we met in England.

Elizabeth's grandfather, Frank Plumb, had a Guernsey dairy farm near Saginaw, and she grew up on that farm when her grandfather adopted her after the death of her mother. She thought you would like this picture of him. He stood 6'-4½" in height and was a very distinguished looking man.

We met your cousin Ermin's daughter, Virginia White, at Lakeside, Michigan, last year, where her family has had property on Lake Michigan for some time. We were visiting close friends of ours from our Chicago days. We knew she was a Plumb, but didn't know until now how she and Elizabeth are related.

We've enjoyed your friendly letters, and we're delighted to have found a new Plumb relative. We look forward to hearing from you again.

Yours sincerely,

David Witheridge

PLUMB, (Plumbe, Plume, Plum), origin of name unknown; but the family seems to have been of some note prior to 1180, when a ROBERT appears on the "Great Roll of Normandy," in reign of Henry the Second.

1. JOHN, of Toppesfield, Co. Essex, Eng., b. abt. 1505, m. abt. 1529, Elizabeth ————; he bu. 1 Oct., 1586, will dated 29 Sept., 1586 mentions ch. viz.: Robert, John, Thomas and 4 daus.—Essex Visitation, 1634, ment. his yeoman.
2. ROBERT, (prob. the R. above ment.) b. abt. 1530; m. (1) abt. 1555, Elizabeth Purcas, who was bu. June, 1615; he m. (2) abt. 1600, Mrs. Ethelred Fuller, who d. May, 1615. He d. May, 1613, owned much land in Great Yeldham, Little Yeldham, Toppesfield, Waller Belcamp, Bulmer, Castle Hedingham Sible and Halstead, in Essex and in Suffolk parishes. Gave Spaynes and Butlers Manors and considerable other land to his eldest son, Robert; Yeldham Manor to son, Thomas, and Hawkdon Hall in Suffolk to Edmond; was classed as a "gentleman," and had a coat of arms.
3. ROBERT PLUMB, of Spaynes Hall, Great Yeldham, b. abt. 1558, buried Aug. 14, 1628, son of Robert & Elizabeth (Purcas) Plumb, m. abt. 1596, Grace Crackbone, who was bu. July 22, 1615.
4. JOHN PLUMB, 2nd son and 3d child of preceding, b. Great Yeldham, July 28, 1594; d. July, 1648; m. abt. 1616, Dorothy ————, living in 1669. He probably owned Ridgwell Hall by gift of his father upon marriage. In Essex Visitation of 1643 he was reported as living there. Doubtless owned property coming to New England.—Htfd. Times, 3 Feb., 1902.

This ppy. he prob. sold and with the proceeds emigr. to Dorchester, Mass., 1635; he owned a vessel in which he prob. came to Weth., 1635 (or before Sept., 1636—Savage III, 445) and in which he made voyages trading with the Indians up and down the Conn. river. It is surmised to have been his vessel which was employed to carry Capt. John Mason's little army of soldiers, in the Pequot War of 1637, around to Narragansett Bay, to the point of their attack upon the Indians—and that he took part in that engagement and received therefor a grant of ld. Was from the first a ship-owner in Wfld. For his ppy. in Weth. rec. 1641, but which he had prob. owned several yrs. before, see Chapt. VII, Vol I. His name appears often on the town's recs.; and as Juror; rep. to Gen. Ct., 1637, '41, '42, '43, and collector of customs, 1644; nom. as Ant. but lost the election, etc.; sold his ppy. in Weth., 1644, consisting (as C. S. Hall states) of "13 parcels fm. 2 acres up to 204, and 2 dwelling houses"; and rem. to Branford, where in Dec., 1645, at the first town meeting of that settlement, he was chosen to keep the Town's Books, which office he held until his dth. in July, 1648, ae. 54; his will was prob. 1st Aug., that yr. His wife Dorothy ————, was living as late as 1669. They had 9 ch. all b. Eng. except Dorcas, the youngest, b. at Weth. abt. 1635 and m. John (s. of Rich'd) Lyman, of Htfd. John Plumb, eld. s. Robert, b. 1617; was a first sett., 1639, of Milford, Ct., where he d. 1655 or '56, will presented for prob. in May of latter yr. His wife was Mary (dau. Sylvester) Baldwin, b. 1625, where he m. 1642; she m. (2) Wm. East, of Milford (Hall Gen. and Maltby Gen.) Robert Plumb & Mary Baldwin had six ch. of whom only one was a son, viz.: John, b. 1646, at Milford, Ct., and who m. 1668, Elizabeth (prob. dau. of Thos. & Elizabeth) Norton, of Saybrook, and had 10. ch. of whom Ruth (the 8th) b. 1685, m. * His son Sgt. William, Jr., b. New Htfd, Ct., 13 July, 1757; served in Revol. War, 1777-83, and res. in Simsbury, Ct.; m. Abigail Case, 11 May, 1782; their dau. Emma (Taylor), b. 22 Mch., 1797; m. Evits Carter; their s. Noah Andrews (Carter), m. Emma Taylor, and they were the parents of WALTER S. CARTER, Esq., of New York City. This well known lawyer was b. at Barkhamsted, Ct., 24 Feb., 1833; rec'd his education at the public schools of his native place, studied law (and taught school) with eminent lawyers in Plymouth, New Htfd., and Midd., Ct., and in 1855 was adm. to the Conn. bar and opened an office in Midd. A very successful defence of a client who was charged with murder, gave him an unusually good start in his professional career, and in 1858 he rem. to Milwaukee, Wis., and by 1860 had become the senior partner of the law firm of Carter & Whipple. In June, 1869, he rem. to Chicago, Ill., and estab. the law firm of Carter, Becker & Dale. After the Great Fire in Chicago, Mr. Carter came to New York City as the representative of the Chicago creditors of the suspended fire insurance companies of New York and other Eastern cities; and formed a partnership with Judge Leslie W. Russell, now of the Supreme Ct., under the firm name of Carter & Russell; various changes have taken place in the firm, which is now that of Carter, Hughes, Rounds & Scnurman. The offices of this firm have been the legal school of many prominent lawyers in N. Y. and other cities of the Union, due largely to the personal inspiration and executive ability of Mr. Carter as an organizer and instructor and example. Altho' always prominent in (Rep.) politics wherever he was he never accepted any political office but that of U. S. Comm'r in Chancery of the U. S. Circuit Ct. in Wis., which however, he soon resigned. He was a trustee of Syracuse (N. Y.) Univ.; one of the incorporators of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Institute of Arts & Sciences and Pres. Miss Caulkins's History of New London says: John Plumbe and —— Green, his wife, came there to live in 1679, and children were born and baptized—Mercy in 1677, George in 1679, and Sarah in 1682; that he had children older than these—John, Samuel, Joseph and Green; that Samuel and Joseph went to Milford to live. Counting back the births from Mercy would fetch Samuel about the right age for this Samuel. On his death in 1725 his son Joseph, the executor, found property of his father's in New London, which was appraised by John and Peter Plumbe, of New London. He was a shipwright by trade. I am satisfied he is the son of John of New London.

Jadwin. Son of Samuel and Mehetable; born in Milford; married there, and all his children were born there, but they are found on record at marriage in Litchfield, except Emeriah, a daughter, who probably died young. Joseph died in Litchfield, but it is not certain when he went there to live, as in selling his land in Milford he is not called of Litchfield till 1735. He was a weaver by trade. He had no son as far as known, and his wife's given name is the only one known. This name Sarah has caused some confusion, as another Joseph, not more than 20 years younger, also had a wife named Sarah, and both bought or sold land in Milford about the same time, or part of the same time, and there is no family town record of the family of either of them.

g. 5, 1739	[illegible]	Mary Skeels Ebenezer Plumb	Apl. 17, 1821	81— 8— 12	Of Stockbridge, Mass. From private records by Hon. Ralph Plumb, Ills. Son of Ebenezer and Patience, of Guilford, Conn., born in Guilford, removed to Richmond, Berkshire Co., Mass., married and again removed, this time to Stockbridge, where he was admitted to the church by letter from Richmond, Sept. 27, 1795, where he remained till his death. His children's births, except two, are not known, and so, as usual, are guessed at, as well as his marriage, reckoning always at two years for each child, unless there is good reason for varying from that rule. What became of Ebenezer, Calvin, Joab and William? These names of children I take as given, whether they come in regular rotation as born I do not know, but if they do they are not far in birth from the guesses made, as in so large a family two years between births very nearly always fit.

These children were probably all born in Richmond, though the tradition says he lived there only a short time, but the date of admission to the Stockbridge church by letter from Richmond seems to tell a different story.

Helen, m. to Patrick, EARL OF STRATHMORE.

Sir James was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES DURHAM, of Pittkerrow. This gentleman commenced his career, as a captain in his brother's regiment, then actively engaged in supporting the royal cause, but he subsequently directed his enthusiastic mind to the study of theology, and became an eminent and learned divine. He was one of the ministers of Edinburgh, and chaplain to the King; in which latter capacity he attended his majesty at the battle of Dunbar. He wedded Margaret, daughter of Sir — Mure, of Glanderston, (relict of the celebrated Zacharias Boyd), and was s. at his decease by his elder son,

FRANCIS DURHAM, esq. who inherited the estate of LARGO, from his uncle Sir Alexander Durham. He m. Jean, daughter of Sir James Scott, of Ardross, but dying issueless, was s. by his only brother, JAMES DURHAM, esq. of Largo. This gentleman espoused Margaret,* daughter of Sir Thomas Rutherford of Hunthill, by whom he had (with four daughters) three sons, viz.

JAMES, his heir.

This gentleman, whose patronimic is PLUMBE, assumed by sign manual in 1824, the additional surname and arms of "TEMPEST."

History of the Commoners of Great Britain and Ireland, John Burke, 1834, Vol. 1

Lineage

The family of TEMPEST has maintained a leading position in the county of York from a remote period, and many of its members held places of great trust upon the Scottish Border, in the reigns of the EDWARDS and the HENRIES.

ROGER TEMPEST, lord of the manor of Bracewell, living temp. HENRY I. and witness to several charters cited in the Monasticon, was father of

RICHARD TEMPEST, whose name is attached to the charter of Silsden Mill, in the 18th of King STEPHEN. He was s. by his son,

ROGER TEMPEST, who paid, in the 14th of HENRY II. half a mark into the treasury, as appears by the pipe roll of that date. This Roger was father of

RICHARD TEMPEST, of Bracewell, who gave, in 1223, the advowson of the church of that place to the abbot of Kirkstal. His grandson,

SIR ROGER TEMPEST, knt. of Bracewell, living temp. EDWARD I. espoused Alice, daughter and heiress of Walter de Waddington, Lord of Waddington, and was s. by his son,

RICHARD TEMPEST, of Bracewell, who d. in 1305, leaving two sons,

JOHN, his heir.

Richard (Sir), knight, governor of Berwick upon Tweed, in the reign of EDWARD III. Sir Richard m. Johanna, daughter and heiress of Thomas de Hertford.

The elder son,

JOHN TEMPEST, Lord of Bracewell and Waddington, was one of the partisans of Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, in removing Piers Gaveston from the councils of EDWARD II. He wedded Maria, daughter of Sir Hugh Clitheroe, knt. and had two sons,

I. JOHN (Sir), his heir.

II. Richard (Sir), who m. Isabel, only daughter and heiress of Sir John Graas, of Studley, and relict of Sir Hugh Clitheroe, and had a son,

SIR WILLIAM TEMPEST, of Studley, M. P. for the county of York, in the 2nd of HENRY IV. He espoused Eleanor, daughter and sole heiress of Sir William Washington, of Washington, knt. by whom (who d. in 1451) he had two sons,

1. WILLIAM, of Studley, who, dying in 1444, left two daughters, his co-heirs, namely, ISABELLA, m. to Richard Norton, of Norton Conyers, in Yorkshire.

DIONYSIA, m. to William Mallorie, to whom she conveyed the manor of Studley; and from this marriage the present MRS. LAWRENCE, OF STUDLEY, derives.

2. Rowland (Sir), of Holmeside, which he acquired by gift of Sir Robert Umfraville; and in the 18th of HENRY VI. he also obtained lands from his brother. He m. Isabella, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Elmdon, knt. by Elizabeth, sister and co-heir of Gilbert Umfraville, (great grandson of Robert Umfraville, Earl of Angus.) From this Sir Rowland Tempest descended the TEMPESTS of Holmeside, Stella, Brancepeth, WYNYARD, &c. in the county of Durham, and the TEMPESTS of Cranbrook, in Kent.

John Tempest died in 1351, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR JOHN TEMPEST, of Bracewell, who had a military summons in the 17th of EDWARD II. He wedded Margaret, daughter of Sir Robert Holand, knt. and sister of Thomas Holand, Earl of Kent, K.G. (the husband of JOAN PLANTAGENET, the celebrated "FAIR MAID OF KENT," who m. subsequently, the BLACK PRINCE) and had issue,

RICHARD (Sir), his successor.

Margaret, m. to Sir James Ratcliffe, ancestor of the Ratcliffes, Viscounts Fitz Walter, and Earls of Sussex.

Sir John was s. by his only son,

SIR RICHARD TEMPEST, knt. of Bracewell, living temp. RICHARD II. who m. Isabel, daughter and heiress of Sir John Leggard, knt. and widow of John Graas, of Gemelyne, and had issue,

1. PIERS (Sir), his heir.

2. Roger, who m. Catherine, daughter of Sir Piers Gilliott, Lord of Broughton, Burnsall, and Thorp, and from this marriage descend the TEMPESTS, of Broughton, now the only male branch of the family remaining, (see TEMPEST, of Broughton.)

3. Peter. 4. Robert (Sir).

He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR PIERS TEMPEST, of Bracewell, who accompanied HENRY V. into France, and shared in the glories of AZINCOURT, upon which celebrated field he received the honor of knighthood. He wedded the daughter and heiress of Sir Nicholas Hebdon, of Hebdon (by his wife, the heiress of the ancient family of Rie), and had, with two daughters, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Thomas Holland, and Margaret, of Richard Banks, of Bank Newton, in Yorkshire, a son and successor,

SIR JOHN TEMPEST, knt. of Bracewell, who served the office of sheriff for the county of York, in the 18th and 37th of HENRY VI. and of Lincolnshire in the 34th of the same reign. Sir John, who was zealously devoted to the house of Lancaster, afforded a place of concealment at one period to its royal chief, the unfortunate King HENRY, at Bracewell. He m. Alice, daughter of Sir Robert Sherburne, of Stonyhurst, in Lancashire, and had inter alios, NICHOLAS, his successor.

Thomas (Sir), who received the honor of knighthood in the 22nd of EDWARD IV. He had a daughter, MARGARET, m. to Sir Thomas Tempest, of Bracewell.

Alice, m. to Sir Thomas Talbot, of Bashall, in the county of York.

Anne, m. to Sir Thomas Metham.

Agnes, m. to William Calverley, esq.

Maria, m. to John Sherburne, esq.

Isabel, m. to L. Hamerton, esq. of Wigglesworth.

Jane, m. to William Ratcliffe, esq. of Rillstone.

Sir John was s. by his elder surviving son,

NICHOLAS TEMPEST, esq. of Bracewe n who espoused Margaret, daughter of Joh Pilkington, esq. and was s. by his son,

SIR RICHARD TEMPEST, knt. of Bracewell, who had a command (and fought gallantly) under the Earl of Surrey, at Flodden field. He wedded Rosamond, daughter and heiress of Tristram Bolling, esq. of Bolling Hall, in the county of York, and acquired thereby that estate. He had issue,

1. THOMAS (Sir), sheriff of Yorkshire in the 34th of HENRY VIII. He served under the Earl of Surrey, and burnt Jedburgh. Sir Thomas was also one of the council of the north in the same reign. He m. first Margaret, daughter and heiress of William Bosville, esq. of Chevit, and secondly Margaret, daughter of his great uncle, Sir Thomas Tempest, knt. but d. s. p.
2. JOHN (Sir), who inherited Bracewell. This gentleman was sheriff of Yorkshire in 1546. He m. Anne, daughter of Mr. Speaker Lenthall, but d. issueless.
3. NICHOLAS, of Bracewell and Bolling. This gentleman was involved with Lord D'Arcy in the Pilgrimage of Grace temp. HENRY VIII. He m. Beatrice, daughter and heiress of John Bradford, esq. of Bradford, and had issue, Richard, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of T. Wentworth, esq. of North Empsal, but d. s. p. 23rd ELIZABETH.

   ROBERT, m. Anne, daughter of Richard Pigot, esq. of the county of Derby, and had an only son,

   RICHARD (Sir), of Bracewell and Bolling, sheriff of Yorkshire temp. JAMES I. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Francis Rodes, knt. one of the judges of the Common Pleas, and had, with two daughters, TROTH, wife of Sir Thomas Tempest, bart. of Stella, and FRANCES, wife (first) of John Osbaldeston, esq. of Osbaldeston, and afterwards of John Ward, M.D., a son and successor,

   RICHARD, of Bracewell and Bolling, who commanded a regiment of horse in the service of King CHARLES I. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Gervase Clifton, and grandaughter of Francis, Earl of Cumberland, and left at his decease, 30th November, 1657, an only daughter and heiress, ELIZABETH, m. to JOHN SOUTH, esq.

4. Tristram, m. to Joan Methley, an heiress, and had issue.
5. HENRY, of whose line we are about to treat.
6. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Peter Fretchville, knt.
7. Jane, m. to Sir Thomas Waterton, knt. of Walton, in Yorkshire.
8. Anne, m. to John Lacy, esq.
9. Beatrice, m. to Wm. Gascoigne, esq.

The fifth and youngest son,

HENRY TEMPEST, esq. espoused Ellinor, daughter and heiress of Christopher Mirfield, esq. of Tong Hall,* by whom he acquired that estate, and dying in 1591, was s. by his eldest son,

* RICHARD DE TONG held the manor of TONG, in 1194, of Hugh Neville, of Brearly, as lord of the fee, and it continued in his family until the reign of HENRY VI., when HUGH DE TONG left an only daughter and heiress, MARGARET, who conveyed the lordship of TONG to her husband Robert, son and heir of William Mirfield, esq.

RICHARD TEMPEST, esq. of Tong Hall, who wedded Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Savile, esq. of Overthorpe, and was s. at his decease in 1607, by his only son,

RICHARD TEMPEST, esq. of Tong Hall. This gentleman m. Alice, daughter of William Mauliverer, esq. of Arncliffe, and dying in 1613, was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN TEMPEST, esq. of Tong Hall, who espoused Katherine, daughter of Robert Duckenfield, esq. of Duckenfield, in the county of Chester, by whom (who m. after Mr. Tempest's death, Henry Fairfax, esq. of Bolton Percy), he left at his decease in 1623, a son and successor,

HENRY TEMPEST, esq. of Tong Hall, baptized in September, 1621, elected knight of the shire for the county of York, in 1654 and 1656. He m. Mary, daughter of Nicholas Bushall, esq. of Bagdall Hall, and dying in 1657, was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN TEMPEST, of Tong Hall, who was created a BARONET in 1664. This gentleman by the decease of Richard Tempest, esq. of Bracewell, without male issue, in 1657, became chief of the family of TEMPEST. He m. Henrietta, daughter and heir of Sir Henry Cholmley,* of Newton Grange, and had issue,

1. HENRY, who inherited NEWTON GRANGE, at the decease of his mother in 1680. He m. Alathea, daughter of Sir Henry Thompson, of Marston, in the county of York, and had two daughters, who both died unmarried. He died himself, (before his father), in 1685.
2. GEORGE, heir to his father.
3. Catherine, d. unmarried.
4. Henrietta, m. to Ferdinando Latus, esq. of the county of Cumberland.

Sir John Tempest was s. by his only surviving son,

Faulkner in his history of Fulham states that the arms on this monument are those of Dormer impaled with Gresham those of Plumbe are gone.

This family he says resided at North-End at the time that Norden published his Speculem Britannicæ, in 1595 (Norden gives no further information (C. H. C)

"This village (No man's Land) contains about six houses & is situated between Fulham Field & Northend. There is an ancient house once the residence of the family of Plumbe several of whom were buried in Fulham Church. They resided here in the time of Queen Elizabeth.

N. B. The registers of Fulham Church commence in the year 1660.

There are no other monuments or grave-stones in the Church yard to members of the Plumbe family.

Origin of Surname

N.A.Lower in his Patrongrica Britannica states that probably the family name Plum, Plumb, Plumbe, derives its name from one of the following:

(1) Plumb: A Scottish word signifying a deep pool in a river or stream.
(2) A Hollanishire word signifying sensible, honest.
(3) A Commune near Avranches in Normandy is called Plumb.

Arms

The arms of the Leicester Family as given at visitation of that Co. in Ac.1619 are:) Arms Ermine a bend vair cotised sable, impaling a bend ingrailed cotised.

(The arms were granted June 10 1563 Nichols Leicestershire

N.B. The above descriptions of the arms differs as regards the impaling of a bend engrailed, to the drawing of the armorial bearings issued to Mr.Roland Plumbe by the Windsor Herald and to those given by Nichols in his history of Leicestershire which are the same. The above armorial bearings were borne by the descendants of the Leicester Family who settled in Lancashire. Nichols gives the Crest. A Greyhound couchant, collared, argent, collared gules. (Coward)

The arms of the Essex family as given at the visitation of that Co. Ac 1634) Arms Argent, a bend vair or, a Gulesbet; two bendlets vert.) Crest A talbot seyant gules, collared, and lined or as given in Wright's Essex: Arms, Ermine and bend vair or a gule vert, Motto Vere, vade. Morant in his history of the county of Essex gives the same arms and motto as Wright. The Crest is a hound.

Pedigree Pedigree of Plumbe of Marston Co.Leicester
(as given at the visitation: 1619)

Walter Plumbe of Aldeburgh, Co.Norfolk.
John Plumbe
John Plumbe = Margaret da of Lindsey or Horsham Suffolk.
John who purchased the Manor of Marston Co 6 Aug 1616 = 1st wife Maria da of J.Duport of Shepeshed Co.Leicester.

(besides 2 other sons who had no issue) Thomas of Marsdon = Elizabeth da of John Portescue of Fabian Co.Essex.

William Thomas Radulf Walter John Plumbe son & heir age 22 1619

Nichols in his history of Leicestershire gives the above pedigree in full and states that Thomas Plumbe of Marston Esq. son and heir of John Plumbe who purchased the Manor of Potters Marston sold Marston and died at Narborough (living 1619) leaving, besides many daughters 1 John who died s.p.aet 22.1619
2 William
3 Thomas Plumbe Esq. of Marston 1624 living 1630.
4 Ralph who had a son William living 1652 and 5 Walter.

He gives two views of Potter's Marston Hall.

John Plumbe

John Plumbe of Narborough, gent, purchased this Manor Potter(s Marston) or Edward Vincent Esq., and died in 1616 possessed of the manor in capite. In 1630 Thomas Plumbe was the only freeholder in Marston and he in 1630 sold his property in this lordship (Nichols Burke states that the Plumbes were originally settled at Aldebrow Suffolk and afterwards at Marston and Narborow Co.Leicester of which County John Plumbe of Marston was Sheriff in 1609. Thence one of them, Thomas Plumbe, during the troubles of King Charles retired with the remnant of his property to the neighbourhood of Prescott Co.Lancaster and John Plumbe of Whiston nr.Prescott Co.Lancaster descended from the above Thomas died 1727 having had issue: 1. William of Stepney who was father of William who died in the East Indies leaving two daughters.

2. Thomas of Madras d.s.p.
3 John of Wavertree Hall near Liverpool and of Aughton in Lancashire
4 Edward d.s.p.
5 Abraham of Stepney.

Thomas Plumbe son and heir of William Plumbe of Wavertree Hall & Aughton married the heiress of the Tempests of Tonge Hall Co.York whose son changed his partonymic and annexed by sign manuel in 1824 the additional surname and arms of the Tempests; he was succeeded in the Estates by his son who died s.p. and was succeeded by Sir Robert Richetts 3rd Bart. the son of her youngest sister, who when coming into the property of the Plumbe-Tempest assumed the arms and name of Tempest by Royal License in 1884 (The above is an epitome of Burke'sremarks on the family in his various works.

The advowson of the living of Aughton was the property of the Plumbes, two members of the family having been Rectors. On the south side of the altar in this church is a marble Tablet to John Plumbe Esq. son of Thomas Plumbe M.A. formerly rector of the Parish of Aughton, ornamented by the family bearings, but which have no motto attached.

"There was a suit between Zachariah Plumbe and Thomas Plumbe about 1810 respecting two properties at Shilmersdale; the parties appear to have lived at Ormskirk" (Miss Parlby)

SAMUEL PLUMBE, Lord Mayor of London 1767

1767 5th March Samuel Plumbe Citizen & Wiredrawer elected Alderman or the Ward of Castle Baynard.
1767 28 April Alderman Plumbe translated from the Company of Gold and Silverwire-drawers to the Company of Goldsmiths.
1776 9 July Samuel Plumbe Alderman and Goldsmith elected Sheriff.
1778 29 Sept. Alderman Plumbe elected Mayor
1782 3 Dec. Resignation of Samuel Plumbe Esq. of the office of Alderman on account of his infirm state of health, accepted. The resignation was made by letter from Tooting dated 23 March 1782.

N.B. Col.Plumbe-Tempest traced his descent on his Mother's side to EDWARD III and on his father's by marriage of his grand-father William Plumbe of Wavertree Hall and of Aughton Lancashire with Miss Townley of Royale (?) to Edward II and consequently he was a descendant of Alfred the Great (com by Sir.Robt.Tempest Bart.)

"The late Co.John Plumbe-Tempest of Tong always considered that he was descended from the Plumbes of Warston, but he was unable to prove this to the satisfaction of the Carter King at Arms."

Abraham Plumbe of the Lancashire branch who died about 1733 or36 went to reside near London and lived at Mile End and either he or his son lived at Stepney at one time (Ibid).

"My uncle told me that Plumbe Hall belonged to his uncle who was in the navy and lost at sea and his will could never be found, that his father fought for it etc. (extract from letter from Miss Barlby).

"Samuel Plumbe, Alderman of Castle Bayard Ward was Lord Mayor in 1778. Col. Plumbe of Bath is a son of Samuel Plumbe, brother to Mr.William Plumbe's grandfather, his great-grand-father and the Lord Mayor were, he believes cousins" (Ibid)

Pedigree of Plumme of Great Yeldham Essex (from the visitation 1634)

John Plumme of Yeldham Magna

Robert of Yeldham = da. - Purcal of Cb.Essex.

Samuel of Y.M. Ac.1634 = Dorothy sister of Sir W.Higham Essex.

N.B. Great Yeldham is 6 miles from Braintree.

Wright in his history of Essex states that his estate (Yeldham Magnus) belonged to the Earls of Oxford the 17th of which sold it to the family of Plumme or Plume, whose descendants retained possession till the year 1718. The first of this family on record is Robert Plume who was tenant of this manor under John Earl of Oxford temp Henry VIII. Morant gives similar information and he and Wright give the above pedigree in greater detail.

"Of this family was Dr.Plumb the ~~founder~~ founder of the Plumian Professorship in Cambridge" Morant.

There is or was a family of this name living in Maldon, Essex.

The following are the only references to the name of Plumbe in Blomfield's"History of Norfolk"

Coal, shale and sand helped start Streator

By MARTHA CUNNINGHAM
Pantagraph Streator reporter

Sam Plumb is enthusiastic about Streator — past, present and future. A descendent of one of the town's founding families, Plumb has lived all but a few of his 83 years in Streator.

He's seen the city through wars and depressions, economic good times and bad times. He wouldn't want to live anywhere else.

"The people of Streator," he says, "have an uncanny way of taking the materials on hand and making them into something useful, something which will provide employment."

Plumb was referring to the natural elements — coal, shale and silica sand — that gave Streator its start more than a century ago.

The area around Streator attracted a few farming families as early as 1831. The discovery of coal and the expansion of railroads were largely responsible for the growth of the village once called Hard Scrabble into the modern industrial city of Streator.

The town is named for Dr. W. L. Streator, founder of the Vermillion Coal Co., the first of many mining firms established in Streator. But to most Streatorites, the real founder of the city was Col. Ralph Plumb.

Streator stayed in Cleveland, Ohio, after he formed the coal company. In 1868 he sent Plumb, a man known for his anti-slavery sentiments and a veteran of three terms in the Ohio legislature, as his representative and general manager of the mine.

Coal was only one of the natural elements that brought industry to the town. By the time Streator was incorporated in 1882, it had a population of 6,000. A nearby supply of fine silica sand was the basis of the glass industry that made Streator the "Glass Capitol of the World." Shale for bricks and tile led to the establishment of a half-dozen brick and tile factories, one of which remains today.

Readily available jobs in mines and factories brought hundreds of immigrants, including Poles, Greeks and Germans, and by 1912 Streator had a population of 18,000. It also had 14 operating coal mines, 30 passenger and 40 freight trains stopped daily and a host of industries.

The finer side of life was not neglected. Plumb built a high school at a cost of $35,000 and donated it to the city. The present high school has been built around that structure.

Plumb also built an opera house that stood until a few years ago. Sam Plumb talks of the many famous acts that played in that building in his youth. Only two hours from Chicago, Stretor was a convenient one-night stopover for shows going to and from the city.

"Today," Plumb says, "the people of Streator are replacing the entertainment of the old opera house with the fine plays produced locally at Engle Lane Theater, another product of local imagination and work."

Today Streator still has two large glass factories - Thatcher's and Owens-Illinois.

The coal mines closed a few years after World War II and the railroads have fewer trains stopping daily, but Plumb is undaunted by the changes in Streator's fortunes.

He says that through the years he has been amazed at the way Streatorites have united and pulled themselves out of hard times when another group might have merely sat back and watched a decline occur.

He cites the days when the glassblower was the elite worker at the glass factory. Then mechanization precluded the need for glassblowers and people were out of work. Machines meant adjusting to a new attitude toward work and Streatorites did just that.

Today Streatorites find employment at St. Mary's Hospital, several manufacturing firms that produce items such as truck seats, pneumatic conveyor equipment and fertilizer, at produce companies and at two large utility companies.

"Streator has always been a working town," says Plumb. "Now they (the city) are building a new industrial park to help bring new jobs to Streator to make up for industries that have closed or have reduced their work force. Look at the way people have rallied to support Streator as a site for the new prison. That kind of spirit is what makes Streator a good town."

Dear Samuel

We've had a busy spring and early summer, especially highlighted by the marriage of our son [illegible] in Evanston on June 5th. It was a lovely occasion, and we are very fond of our new daughter-in-law Virginia.

Now we are making preparations for a trip to the east as far as New England. We'll be starting out on July 10th, and will be gone for about three weeks.

I'm writing to you because we think we'll be able to come through Streator on our way home, and we'd like very much to visit you and your family.

Our present plans are to drive from Michigan to Wheaton, Illinois, where our new daughter-in-law's parents live, on Thursday, August 5th. Then on Friday August 6th we'd like to change to be with Jon and Virginia, stopping in Streator on the way. If you are going to be home on that day, I'd like to take you to lunch somewhere, and if your daughter and her family will be in town, we'd like to have them join us, too.

There's only one problem. It's possible that Virginia's parents may be away on a trip at that time, in which case we may not be going to Wheaton. We don't know whether or not we'll be able to work in a trip to Streator. All I can say is that when we know for sure, we'll write to you again. We just wanted to give you some advance notice and to hear from you as to whether or not you'll be at home on that date. If we're in Wheaton we'll be in touch by July 10th, please let us know if you're free then.

Yours sincerely,

July 10 1982

Dear David and Elizabeth:

It's a delight to hear from you again — congratulations to Tom and best wishes for a beautiful and rewarding married life for Tom and Virginia.

And I'll be home on Friday August 6th and looking forward to having lunch with you if you do find you can be there here on that day.

I am not sure about my daughter and her family — they have vacation plans that I am not sure of now and they are out of town for a week. If they can be with us they would like to join us.

At any rate I will be here — and my telephone number (at my apartment and home) is 672-5727. (If you find last minute changes necessary in your plans to have lunch in Streator and find it more convenient to telephone from out of town the number is 1-815-672-5727 (area code)

I have a book of some additional information about the Plumb's in Streator, but the Genealogy pretty well tells it.

Hope it works out that I can meet you, and know you better..

Best to you and yours —

Most Sincerely,

Sam Plumb

Dear Sam,

We're in Harford County, Maryland, where a number of Elizabeth's ancestral families lived from early Colonial times.

We wanted to let you know that even if we don't go to Manteo on Sunday evening, we will be coming to Creston on Friday noon (Aug. 3rd) for lunch with you and hopefully your family.

It will be a real pleasure to meet you and to see some of your Clark family information.

Our trip is going very well in spite of the hot weather. We may find a few traces of Clarks in Connecticut.

Yours sincerely,

David & Elizabeth

Dear Tolbs:

Again I want to tell you how very very much I enjoyed meeting you and being with you for the time we had together. It was delightful, and you were very kind to take the time and trouble to include, in your trip, the stop at Streator.

Dear Folks:

Thanks so very much for the wonderful pictures and the super letter. It is a delight to know you both, and I sincerely hope you can come back again — and surely the next time we'll arrange to have my family get to know you.

Glad you could have a nice summer and early fall — and now I'm so glad to get the pictures, and yes they are great.

We all look forward to seeing you here again — and next time all of us being together.

Very best to you and yours — and thank you so very much, David and Elizabeth, for giving me the chance to know you —

Most sincerely,

Dan's.

Dear Mr Whitbridge,

Many thanks for your letter of last February.
Please excuse the delay in replying but as you will be aware I have not been exactly idle
It must have been most exciting & rewarding for you - & especially your wife - to have such a guided tour during your visit to Essex. I'm sure that your connection with Essex must now seem so very much more real now that you have visited the actual villages.
As for finding some leftover Plumes for you I'm not so sure.
As Dr. Thomas was unmarried & there are therefore no direct descendants to trace, it would be very much a question of trying to follow through on collateral lines. This regret would take rather more time etc than I am able to give.
However I had a little scratch around to see what I could find to help you on your way.
To summarise: -
I wrote:
a) to Mrs. Shacklock. Plume Library
b) Ven Derek Palmer Archdeacon of Rochester
c) Professor Martin Rex. Plumeian Prof. at Cambridge to ascertain if they had, ex officio, been contacted by any Plume descendants — they haven't!

I also wrote to Rev. Dunlop, Vicar of Maldon but have had no reply.
I copied various relevant (1 page) passages relating to Plume in the general reference books in the Library - including the Dictionary of National Biography.
Quite a few interesting 'lines' emerge from all this possibly, you may find links with the line already established by your wife.
I should very much like to either (a) have a copy of the tree in H.B. Plumb's book or (b) to have you explain, stage by stage the line back from your wife to Dr. Thomas.
I should like to pass on the information to Professor Rees who, as you will note, shows some interest, & also in due course to let the Essex Record Office etc. have copies of the various bits & pieces so that any future Plume / Plumb researcher will have an easier task.
When you have had a chance to study all the data & to select your line of research, let me know if there is any specific Query you are stuck on. I'll do what I can find out for you.

Kind regards to you both.
Good hunting!

Tim. Roberts.

Dear Jim,

I am doing now what I should have done immediately after receiving your very kind letter of May 14th with all its enclosures.

Elizabeth and I want to thank you for the extensive work you did in finding the articles and references to the Plumbs/Plumbe's of Essex and then having them photocopied and sent to us. We also greatly appreciate your correspondence in regard to possible Plumbe descendants in Essex at the present time. Elizabeth says to tell you she has read it all and finds it very fascinating.

At this point I have still been unable to complete my analysis of this material and the integration of it into my other records. Now we are about to take a 3 week trip east to Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New England. Therefore, I shall be unable to finish this process until after our return home.

We want you to know that we have not forgotten your kindness in sending this helpful information. I'll be writing again later in the summer.

Yours sincerely

David Hitchcock

Dear Mr. Roberts,

Thank you very much for your letter of the 31st March. Dr. Plume is, of course, known to all of us in this area as one of my predecessors and, in fact, I have a photograph of him upstairs.

He is also very well known and respected by current Clergy as he left a sum of money for Clergy in the Diocese and the 'Plume Trust' has been able to help a great number of Clergy. However, I am afraid that is as far as our information goes, and I can give you no help at all on any of his children or any ancestors. There is, of course, quite a lot known about him in the Diocese, in the local history books, but nothing I think which would link him with people alive today.

Every good wish,

Yours sincerely,

Derek Palmer

Dear Mr Roberts,

I am sorry to have been rather slow in answering your letter seeking information about possible descendants of Dr Thomas Plume. Unfortunately I do not know anything about this, and therefore cannot help you. If you have not already done so, perhaps it would be a good idea to contact Mr Dunlop, the present Vicar of Maldon. I had the pleasure of meeting him some years ago, when he kindly invited me to give a lecture on the anniversary of Plume's death.

I am sorry I cannot help you more, but would of course be very interested to learn if your quest proves successful.

Yours sincerely,

Martin Rees

RICHARD SYMONDS, ESQUIRE, 1612 (?), AT GREAT YELDHAM.

The plate (26¼ by 13 inches) on which this composition is engraved has a rounded top. It is affixed to the west wall of a chapel on the south side of the nave. The design upon it is unfinished, lacking the inscription. This was intended, apparently, to occupy the lowest of the four compartments into which the surface of the plate is divided, which compartment is blank. The effigies are all shown in full profile, which is unusual. They all kneel, in the attitude of prayer, upon tasselled cushions, on a chequer-paved floor. Before them are tables on which are open books. The features of most of the figures are very ill represented.

In the uppermost compartment, which occupies nearly one half of the whole plate, are the two principal effigies, facing one another and gazing upwards. They are attired in the usual costume of the time—the man in neck-ruff, doublet buttoned down the front, breeches, and long civilian gown with false-sleeves: the woman in neck-ruff, kerchief or veil hanging behind her head, a light cloak hanging from her shoulders, a long-waisted bodice, and a skirt much set-off at the hips. Her hair is brushed backwards and upwards in a manner by no means elegant. Above their heads, and the object of their gaze, is the word Jehovah, encircled by rays of light issuing from an orle of clouds.

In the second compartment are the five sons, kneeling in a group and facing the daughter, with a table between them. They are dressed in a style of costume somewhat later than that worn by their father. They wear doublets, breeches, sleeveless short cloaks, and swords. The daughter is dressed as is her mother, except that she lacks the kerchief, light cloak, and neck-ruff.

In the centre of the third compartment is a small shield, surrounded by scroll-work and bearing, Quarterly, 1st and 4th Symonds,[1] 2nd ———?,[2] 3rd ———?,[3] impaling Plumbe.[4]

The fourth and lowest compartment is blank, as stated already.

The armorial bearings on the shield enable us to assign this brass with certainty to Richard Symonds, Esquire, of The Pool, in Great Yeldham, which he acquired through his marriage, on 9th January 1580, with Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Plumb (or Plume), of Great Yeldham. He was a Cursitor in Chancery and resided at The Pool, where he died the 8th July 1627, his wife having predeceased him on 24th January 1611-2.[5] Not improbably the brass was engraved shortly after the death of his wife, the inscription being omitted pending his own death (the monument being intended clearly to commemorate both); but, apparently, it was never added. This is the more remarkable considering that his descendants remained in possession of the estate for nearly a century. One of his descendants was Richard Symonds, who made the heraldic and genealogical "Collections" relating to Essex (3 vols.) now in Herald's College. Unfortunately, they are not accessible to Essex searchers.

The firſt of this family I meet with, is Robert Plumme of Great Yeldham Gent. who was tenant of this maner and eſtate under John de Vere the great Earl of Oxford in the reign of K. Henry VIII.——Robert, his ſon and heir, bought this maner of Edward Earl of Oxford, for his two youngeſt ſons, Thomas, and Edmund. By his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of .... John Ruſh Eſq; is the preſent poſſeſſor of this eſtate; who hath alſo a farm called the Change, behind the Church, once belonging to John Hatcher, Eſq; [N].

2. Gunces, alias Bunces, took that name from a family called Gounſe, or Guncelin, its ancient owners. Guncelin, ſon of Richard, was witneſs to a deed dated 24 Edw. I. and held half a fee in Gelham, and Toppeſfeild (r). . . . . John Gounſe had a meſſuage, 8 acres and 3 roods of paſture, in 1370, in the laſt named pariſh (s), and —— Thomas Gounce was witneſs to a deed of Richard Rector of Gelham, dated 9 Hen. IV.

The maner houſe is ſituated both in Toppeſfield and Yeldham, though moſt of it ſtands in the latter; for which reaſon it is reckoned to belong to this pariſh, as a great part of the land doth. This maner was holden of the Honor of Clare by the ſervice of half a knight's-fee. And part of it ſeems alſo to have been holden of the Honor of Stambourn, by the name of Daunces in Gelham (t).

In Queen Elizabeth's reign it was in William Bigge, who dyed 5 Janu. 1585, holding this by the name of Gounces: likewiſe Barwicks-hall in Toppesfield, and other eſtates near (u).

Richard Symonds dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1627, by the name of Gunges (w). And it continued in that family [more particularly mentioned under the Pool] till John the laſt of the family left it in 1692 to his nephew

John Pepys Eſq; whoſe ſiſter Suſanna, and her huſband Dr. Jonas Redman, ſold it, and alſo Spains-hall, in 1749, to Peter Muilman Eſq; a very eminent Merchant in London [O]. He, and his brother Henry Muilman Eſq; were the firſt of the family that came out of the United Provinces, where their anceſtors flouriſhed for above 300 years. Their brothers, now in the Magiſtracy at Amſterdam, are ſome of the moſt conſiderable merchants in Europe.

3. Spains-hall

ſtands on the Eaſt ſide of the river Colne, about three quarters of a mile from the Church: and derived its name from the ancienteſt owners upon record, the family De Iſpania or Hiſpania, which were originally of Spain, and gave name to Spains-hall in Finchingfeild, where they were ſeated, and alſo to Willingale-Spain.

William de Muſchet held this, in 1253, under the Earl of Oxford: for it hath been all along holden of the Honor of Caſtle Hedingham.

William, and Richard, de Hiſpania, were poſſeſſed of it in the reign of K. Henry III. And in 1286, Cecily and Iſabell daughters of Michael de Iſpania.

Under John de Vere Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1360, it was holden by John Weld, as half a fee (x): and continned a while in his family, at leaſt till 1426.

Then it appears to have been in John Dorewarde (y). And, in 1498, in William Wallpole. [redacted] John Crochrood, and Richard, and Thomas, Purcas, ſeverally held this maner of the Honor of Caſtle-Hedingham.

From the Plumme family it paſſed, as the foregoing; to Symonds, Pepys, and Peter Muilman Eſq;

4. The Maner of Butlers.

The manſion-houſe ſtood behind Spains-hall, in the fields, where the foundations are ſtill viſible, from which it appears to have been a large edifice.

'Tis probable that it had its name from a family ſurnamed Butler [P]: And ſuch a one there was, which held the Lordſhip of Great Bardfeild in this county. In grants and deeds of the Earls of Clare, I frequently met with witneſſes ſurnamed Pincerna, or Boteler: which office of Butler under thoſe Earls was then a conſiderable Place. [See under Bulmer.]

This maner hath been long incorporated into Spains-hall, and brought moſt probably into the Spain family by a female heir of the Butlers. For ſome time it belonged to the De Veres Earls of Oxford [Q], and of Edward the 17th Earl was purchaſed, as Yeldham-hall, by [redacted] His ſon —— Robert Plumme Eſq; married two wives, and by the firſt, had only a daughter. The latter was ſeated at Ridgewell-hall [where ſee an account of him.] Robert, the father dyed 13 Aug. 1625, ſeized in fee of the manor of Spains and Botelers (a). ——Robert his eldeſt ſon was living at Spains-hall in 1634. By his ſecond wife, Honora daughter of . . . . Woolrich, he had a daughter. And by his firſt wife, Frances daughter of . . . Gawſell, he had 2 ſons and 4 daughters. From this family Botelers paſſed, with Spains-hall, to Symonds, Pepys, and Peter Muilman Eſq;

5. The manner of GRAPNELLS and Old-Hall.

Time hath ſo entirely ſwallowed this up, that no traces of it remain. But that here was ſuch a maner, is plain from an ancient deed, wherein Nicolas Hales Rector of Great Staneway, John Barcamſted, Chaplain, and John Somer, did, in 1395, convey to William Doreward and Catharine his wife all their Maners of Grapnells and Old-Hall, with appertenances, in Great and Little Gelham, Stambourne, and Toppesfeild. This deed is witneſſed by Thomas Coggeſhale, Clement Spice, Robert Rikedon, Tho. Toppesfeild, and Thomas Mackwilliam.

In the Inquiſition taken after the death of John Doreward, in 1480, I find 4 acres of arable called Grapenell, Old-Hall, Levendon, and Le Pole, joyned together, and ſaid to be holden of the Honor of Clare (b).

From the Dorewards it paſſed to the Oxford family; and is now incorporated into ſome of the adjoyning eſtates.

The POOL,

a capital meſſuage in this pariſh, ſituated on the eaſtern bank of the river Colne, by the road ſide, is above a mile from the Church.

It took its name from the ancienteſt poſſeſſors of it upon record, the noble family of De la Pole, ſome of whom were Dukes of Suffolk, and had eſtates at Geſtingthorp, and Hatfeild-Peverell. Hugh de la Pole, of this place, was witneſs to a Deed dated 24 Edw. I. 1296. In that family it continued till John de la Pole, ſometimes written John att Poole, paſſed it away in K. Edward the third's reign, to

John Weld, mentioned under Spains-Hall. In 1373 John Weld, and Roger de Wolverſton, granted to Geffrey Michell of Great Gelham, all thoſe lands and tenements called Le Pole, which they had by feoffment from Sir Thomas Nanton, and belonged before to Thomas Saleman. By ſome intermediate conveyances it came to

Sir Thomas Staunton [R]; then to . . . Doreward (c).—John Doreward Eſq; ſold it to

John de Vere Earl of Oxford. And his grandſon —— Edward Earl of Oxford alienated it, with the other eſtates in this pariſh to [redacted]: from whom it came by marriage to

Richard Symonds Eſq; And as his poſterity was ſeated and flouriſhed here for about 100 years, it will be proper to give ſome account of them. The family is originally of Croft in Lancaſhire, where they continued in a direct line for about 20 generations, and at length terminated in females. —— From Richard, in the third generation, ſprung the Symonds's of Norfolk; and from John, in the eighth generation, ſprung the Symonds's of Cambridgeſhire. —— Thomas Symonds, in the eleventh generation, married . . . daughter of Mr. Tolleſhunt, of Tolleſhunt Darcy. —Thomas, in the fourteenth deſcent, married . . . daughter of Robert Oſbaldeſton. —— John, in the ſeventeenth deſcent, by . . . . daughter of William Lerding, had two ſons, William of Croft; and Robert who marrying . . . . daughter and heir of . . . . . Congreve of Stratton in Staffordſhire, ſettled in that county; and from his deſcendents iſſued the Symonds's of Oxfordſhire . . . . John, in the twentieth generation, was of Newport; and, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Thomas Maynard, was father of . . , John: who, by Anne daughter of Thomas Bendbow of Shropſhire, had his ſon and heir

RICHARD SYMONDS above-mentioned. He was a Curſitor in Chancery; and marrying, 9 Janu. 1580, Elizabeth daughter of Robert Plumb of Yeldham-Hall above-mentioned, had in frank marriage with her the Poole, where he ſettled. His wife was interred in this Church 24 Janu. 1611, and he himſelf dyed 8 July 1627, and was alſo buried here [S]. ——Richard, then aged 40 years, is ſet down in the Inquiſition as his ſon and heir (d). But, according to the pedigree, he had alſo 4 other ſons; viz. John; Thomas, who dyed without iſſue 5 June 1625; Samuel; and Edmund; and Richard is ſet down as the fifth. Of John, who is placed as the eldeſt in the pedigree, we ſhall give a particular account, after taking proper notice of the others. 3. Samuel, the 3d ſon, married Dorothy daughter of Thomas Harlakenden of Earl's-Colne. He was a Curſitor in Chancery; and had Olivers in Toppesfield; but retired to New England with his family. . . . 4. Edmund the 4th ſon, was alſo a Curſitor in Chancery. In right of his wife, Anne only daughter of Joſhua Draper of Braintree, to whom he was married 2 February 1614,, he had an eſtate at Black-Notley, where he dwelt, and dying 9 Decemb. 1627; was buried in that Church. He had 3 ſons, and 1 daughter. Richard, the eldeſt ſon, was a Curſitor in Chancery, and Collector of the Three Volumes in folio, preſerved in the Heralds Office, containing the Arms, Epitaphs, and other Antiquities in this county, to which we ſo often refer in the courſe of this work. On the 25th of March 1643, he was committed to priſon by

Miles Corbet for his loyalty to K. Charles I. but escaping, he went into the King's Army, and served in his troop, under the command of the Lord Bernard Steuart Earl of Litchfield, at the battles of Cropedy-bridge, Lestwithiel, Newbury second and third, Naseby, and relief of Chester, where that noble Lord was slain: After that, he was at Denbigh with Sir William Vaughan, and at other places.——Edward, the second son, baptized 20 Decemb. 1621, dyed at Oxford in 1645, being in arms for the King. . . John, the third son was baptized 10 April 1627. And Anne 31 March 1631. 5. Richard, the fifth son of the first Richard Symonds settled here, was of Magdalen College, Cambridge, and of Lincoln's-Inn. He purchased the maner of Panfield, where he sometimes resided, and dying 26 Sept. 1680, aged 83, was buried in this Church, with a monument [T].

JOHN, the eldest son abovementioned, of Richard Symonds, who first settled at the Pool, and [illegible], married Anne daughter of Tho. Elyott of Godalming in Surrey, Esq; by whom he had 4 sons, Richard, John, Samuel, and Fitz-Symonds: and 4 daughters, Agnes wife of Tho. Bacon of London, merchant; Elizabeth, of Antony Wolmer of Lincoln's-Inn Esq; Thomasine and Dorothy, twins, born 16 August 1627. Thomasine was married to . . . Pepys Esq; . . . . Richard, the eldest son, born 13 Octob. 1616, being of Lincoln's-Inn, was in several battles with the Earl of Essex against the King; and slain at Naseby 1645, fighting under the command of Sir Thomas Fairfax. . . . . John, the second son, born at Yeldham, 4 Sept. 1618, became one of the Cursitors in Chancery upon his father's resignation in 1641. He was of Lincoln's-Inn, and near 40 years a Justice of Peace for this county. He had two wives, but issue by neither. The first was Elizabeth daughter of Sir Robert Quarles of Rumford Knt. She was buried in this Church 18 Decemb. 1666. His second wife was Jane daughter of Sir Robert Burgoyne, of Sutton in Bedfordshire, Knt. This worthy person dyed 19 Febr. 1692-3, in the 74th year of his age, and was buried in the South Chapel of this Church [V]. By will he left this and other his estates to his nephew,

John Pepys Esq; of whose heirs it was purchased, in 1749, with the rest by . . . . Peter Muilman Esq; The house is mostly pulled down.

Other Estates in this parish.

Spencers Farm; the Lady Viscountess Dowager Bateman's.——Lovington belongs to Sir Geffrey Amherst, Governor of Quebec.—— Stonebridge . . . . to Mrs. Anne Blundell, widow.——The Brook-farm . . . . . to Robert Edgar Esq; of Ipswich.——Mans-Cross . . . to Mr. Thomas Buxton of Coggeshall.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 927*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.*

A House, near the Church, was anciently used and appropriated for dressing a Dinner for poor folks when married: and had all utensils and furniture convenient for that purpose. It hath since been converted into a SCHOOL. John Symonds Esq; had ordered in his will 200*l.* to be laid out in lands for the maintenance of a School-master here. But he himself, before his decease, bought a farm in Halsted, of about 16*l.* a year, called Kettles, and made it the endowment of this School.

A House, in the lane leading to Tilbury, was given for the habitation of the Church-clerk.

Here are Almshouses for Six aged poor men and women, maintained by the parish.

Out of a pightle of about five roods, called Cracknells, near Mans-cross-house, purchased by William Fitche of Edward Earl of Oxford, is to be paid the sum of three shillings yearly at Easter for ever to the Church-wardens for the relief of the poor. And there is to be provided a sufficient quantity of pease-straw for the winter season, and rushes for the summer, to be strewed in the seats and stools in the Church, as was used aforetime. The like custom is, or lately was, kept up at Great Waltham, and other places in this county.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, consists of a body and a south isle; which are tyled, as is also the Chancel. On the south side near the Chancel there is a Chapel leaded belonging to the Poole, wherein several of the Symonds family lie interred with monuments. The Church is a handsome stone building; when and by whom erected, is unknown; 'tis supposed to have been by contribution of the neighbouring nobility and gentry, because of the coats of arms still visible on the rail or partition between the Church and Chancel, particularly of the De Veres Earls of Oxford. At the west end there is a stately Tower, embattled, containing 5 Bells. Peter Muilman Esq; hath adorned this Church with a handsome altar-piece, painted glass, and velvet pulpit and communion cloth.

The Advowson of this Rectory hath been all along appendent to the maner of Yeldham-hall. In right of that it was in the Dorewards; and is now in John Rush Esq; lies ſouth of Elſenham.

9. TAKELEY

The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Tacheleia, Tackel, Takele, Takelee, Takelegh, Takkeleye, Thacelee. But whence it is formed I cannot eaſily conjecture, unleſs it is from the Saxon words þac, hay, or 2eaz, incloſed land in oppoſition to the adjoyning open foreſt, and leȳ, paſture, unploughed ground.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign the lands in this pariſh were holden by a freeman whoſe name is not mentioned; by Ulmar, another freeman; and by another freeman called Turchill. At the time of the ſurvey, the owners of them were, Robert Gernon; Eudo Dapifer; and the Priory of St. Valery in Picardy.

There are four Maners in this pariſh. 1. The maner of Waltham-hall. 2. Colcheſter-hall. 3. The maner of St. Valery's, vulgarly Wariſh-hall. 4. The maner of Baſſingborns.

1. The Maner of WALTHAM-HALL.

The Manſion-houſe is down; but out of its ruins a Farm houſe was built at Green-end, where the Courts are kept.

This is reaſonably ſuppoſed to be the part that belonged to Robert Gernon [X].

Waltham-hall is reckoned the chief Maner in this pariſh; and called in ancient records the Maner of Takeley, alias Waltham-hall: which laſt name it had—becauſe it belonged to the Abbey of Waltham Holy-Croſs.

When, and by whom, it was given to that houſe, is not particularly recorded; but it appears by Pleas at Chelmsford, in 1285, that it was a gift of K. Henry II. [Y]. K. Henry III. granted them a Market, and a Fair: and K. Edward III. free-warren, here (n).

This maner continued in the Abbey till their diſſolution; at which time it was farmed by Nicolas Clerk at 8 l. os. 3 d. and the perquiſites of Court were 5 d. (o).

K. Henry VIII. granted it to Richard Heigham or Higham Eſq; it being known both by the names of Takeley, and Waltham-hall, which were one and the ſame; and holden of the King in ca. by knight's ſervice, and rent of 15 s. 7 d. ob. to the Court of Augmentation. He dyed poſſeſs'd of it 11 Novemb. 1546.——William Heigham was his brother and next heir (p). [See above, p. 490]. Mary widow of Richard Heigham, was formerly wife of John Colt Eſq; Thomas Colt her ſon had a ſhare in this eſtate with William Heigham, and got licence, 9 July 1550, to alienate two parts of the maner of Takeley, alias Waltham-Hall, to

Thomas Miller, who purchaſed the remaining third of Heigham, by licenſe dated 10 April 1554 (q). By another licenſe of 4 Novemb. 1565. Miller ſold a third part to Francis Salperwig, alias Gyllam, and Joane his wife (r). Tho. Miller dyed 20 Decemb. 1565 (s), and his ſon——Thomas, and Salperwig joined in ſelling this eſtate in 1574 (t), to

Robert Petre Eſq; He dyed 16 Septemb. 1593, and was ſucceeded in it by his eldeſt brother's ſon ——John (u), afterwards created Lord Petre. He departed this life 11 October 1613, having given this eſtate, with Chicknal St. James and Maſhbury, to his ſecond ſon; John Petre Eſq; who dyed 2 Jan. 1622, leaving—John his ſon and heir, five years old. (w) [See above, p. 65, 80.]

This maner and eſtate was lately in Sir Iſaac Shaard Knt. whoſe ſon and Heir——Abraham Shaard Eſq; was knighted in 1745, and dyed 22 Auguſt 1746.

2. COLCHESTER-HALL, ſtands about a mile and a half north north-eaſt from the Church; and was ſo named, becauſe it belonged to St. John's Abbey at Colcheſter. It is the part which was holden, at the time of the ſurvey, by Eudo Dapifer [Z]. He endowed that Abbey, of his foundation, with two parts of the Tithes of Takelee (x): But is not recorded to have given them any lands here. We find, however, they had in this pariſh, the whole fee of Erniſe, given them by Alexander de Limeſey, and Rohais de Ambli [A]: Sceteparc, Eſtfield, Laley, and ſeveral other parcels, given them by William Fitz-Geffrey, and others: William de Hauvill ſen. gave them 80 acres in his park, with the tithe of the panage of his wood, &c. William de Hauvill jun. ſeveral tenements and lands, with the tenents (y). All this was ſufficient to make up what was afterwards called Colcheſter-hall. The ſum of their demeſnes here, as entered in their leſſer Regiſter-book, amounted to 246 acres. And the names and meaſures of the lands where they received two parts of the Tithes, are alſo entered in the ſame book (z).

Part of this eſtate was holden of the Plaiz family of Stanſted, as one knight's fee and a quarter (a).

The Abbey remained poſſeſs'd of it till their ſuppreſſion: at which time it was lett for the yearly rent of 7 l. 7 s. 8 d. (b).

In 1538, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Colcheſter-hall to Robert Foſter: who, 8 May in the year following, had licenſe to alienate it to

Richard Heigham, Eſq; (c) [See above, p. 184, 194, 490.] He held at the time of his deceaſe this maner of Colcheſter-hall, and 2 meſſuages, 100 acres of arable, 20 acr. of meadow, 100 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 20 s. rent, in Takeley, Eliſnam, White Roodynge, Kinges-Hatfeild, and Stanſteed-Mountfitchett, of the King in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's-fee. His brother William was his heir (d). But his widow, Mary, who had for her firſt huſband John Colt Eſq; held this maner till her death, 7 September, 1551, and was ſucceeded in it by her ſon —— Thomas Colt, then aged 34 years (e). He had licenſe 1 Decemb. 1553, to convey it to

Robert Thorpe: And the latter by licenſe dated 7 May 1557, conveyed it to Thomas Wyberd Gent. who had other conſiderable eſtates, and the maner of Biſhop Lees, in this County (f). He dyed 3 Febru. 1599, leaving his ſon and heir— John (g), father of Walter, whoſe grandſon William kept an inn at Stortford. It belonged afterwards to William Ruſſel of North-Okingdon, Eſq; he married Mary daughter of Samuel Saville of Colcheſter, Eſq; and had by her —— William Ruſſel Eſq; who dying 6 October 1754, was ſucceeded by his ſon —— John Ruſſel Eſq;

This Family hath another eſtate in this pariſh, called THE GRANGE, and reputed a Maner.

It is ſaid to have belonged to Tiltey Abbey, but when and by whom given, doth not appear.

Philip Wiſe was poſſeſſed of it in Qu. Elizabeth's time, and obtained licenſe, 17 April 1565, to alienate this maner of Takeley as it is there called; with 5 meſſuages and 2 cottages, to

Ralph Wiſeman Eſq; who had licenſe the next year to grant it to [redacted] yeoman (b). This laſt dyed 23 June 1593, poſſeſs'd of Takeley Grange.— Robert, his brother and heir (i), was ſucceeded in it by Grace, one of his daughters and co-heirs, who brought it in marriage to [redacted] of Great Yeldham in this County.

She dyed 21 July 1615, and her ſon and heir —— Robert Plumme enjoyed it after her (k). [See above, p. 301] belonged to the Abbey of St. Valery in Picardy [B], and was given to it, as is reaſonably ſuppoſed, by K. William the Conqueror [C]. A ſmall Priory was founded here, for a Cell to St. Valery, in the reign of K. Henry I, who added to their poſſeſſions in this pariſh [D]. Beſides which they had the maners of Birchangre, Priors in Lindſell, Bacons in Dengey; Walla, Urthiſtun, Medelbury, Mangeden, Botilton, Machekes, Chavenfeld, &c. and the Rectories and Advowſons of the Vicarages of Hamton, Heſton, Iſleworth, and Twickenham in Middleſex (l). The Prior of this Cell was Procurator general of St. Valery's Abbey, and collector of the rents of all the lands they had in England.

3. The Maner of ST. VALERYS, vulgarly called Wariſh-hall,

The Revenues of theſe Priories alien were ſeiz'd ſeveral times by our Kings, as may be ſeen above, p. 407. 416. Moſt probably it was obtained of K. Edward III. by William of Wickham, biſhop of Wincheſter, and ſettled by him upon his munificent foundation of New-College in Oxford, in whoſe poſſeſſion it remains to this day.

The Priory is long ſince demoliſhed: but there is an ancient houſe moated round, about 3 quarters of a mile Eaſt from the Church, called Wariſh-hall, where a court is kept for the college. In the Rolls it is ſtyled Takeley S. Walerici.

1560, an annuity of 200l. His ſon, James Lomelin, or Lumley, was an eminent merchant in London, and dyed in 1592, aged 88 years. By his wife Joane, daughter of . . . Litton of Derbyſhire, he had his ſon —— Sir Martin Lumley Knt. mentioned a little before, the purchaſer of this eſtate; who dyed in 1634, and was buried in Great St. Helen's Church, London. He married Margaret, daughter of . . . Witham, and had by her —— Martin, born in 1604 (t); High-Sheriff of this county in 1639; created a Baronet 8 January 1640; and one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament which met 3 November 1640. He had to his firſt wife, Jane, daughter of John Meredith of Denbighſhire Eſq; by whom he had only a daughter, Prudence, married to Sir Roger Moſtyn, Bart. His ſecond wife was Mary, daughter of Edward Allen, Alderman of London, and by her he had Martin, Thomas, and James, which two laſt dyed ſingle. —— Sir Martin, the eldeſt ſon and heir, was Sheriff of this county in 1663. He married Anne, daughter of Sir John Langham Knt. Alderman of London, by whom he had Martin, and a daughter that dyed young. He departed this life in Auguſt 1702.——Sir Martin Lumley, his ſon, married, firſt, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Dawes of London, Merchant, by whom he had Martin, who dyed young; and Anne, married to Sir Stephen Anderſon, Bart. He had for his ſecond wife Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Chamberlain of Gray's-Inn, Eſq; by whom he had James, and Elizabeth, wife of the Right Rev. Dr. Cecill, Biſhop of Bangor. His third lady was Elizabeth, daughter of Clement Rawlinſon of Sanſcale in Lancaſhire, Gent. He was Sheriff of this county in 1710, and departed this life 17 January 1710-11, being ſucceeded by his ſon and heir——Sir James Lumley Bart. (u). In 1725, an Act of Parliament paſſed for veſting his ſeveral eſtates in truſtees, to be ſold, for the payment of his own, and his father's debts and legacies: And in 1729 another Act paſſed to the ſame purpoſe. Whereupon, Bardfeild-lodge, with the Parks, and ſeveral Maners were purchaſed by

Edward Stephenſon, Eſq; once a Governor in the Eaſt-Indies. But now the Lordſhip and Burgh of Great Bardfield, with Bardfield-Saling; the great Lodge, Parks, Blue-gate-hall, and Park-hall, belong to Jones Raymond Eſq; [ſee above, p. 163.] The great Lodge is entirely pulled down, the ſtables converted into a Farm-houſe, and all the encloſed lands diſparked, except a Paddock of 30 acres, which is ſtocked with deer.

As to the reſt of Lumley's eſtate, Great Bardfield-hall, Coxhills, Claypit-hall, Little Lodge, and the Buſhett, all capital Farms within this pariſh; they were purchaſed for the uſe of Guy's Hoſpital [I].

2. The Maner of PITLEY, otherwiſe called Pitſea, Pitſey, and Packley,

Was originally part of Fitz-Gilbert's eſtate here, and given by his ſon Gilbert Earl of Clare to the Abbey of Bec in Normandy, or rather to the Priory of Stoke near Clare, together with this Church (w). That Abbey had large poſſeſſions in England, and to it Stoke was at firſt a cell. The Abbot of Bec had a houſe at Streatham in Surrey, where he reſided when he came hither upon affairs of his monaſtery. This is what his Grace the Duke of Bedford now enjoys, and his maner there is called the Maner of Tooting Bec.

This maner was ſeized by K. Edward III. in 1337, as belonging to a Priory alien, but reſtored by K. Richard II. in 1395, when Stoke Priory was naturalized, as I may ſay (x). [ſee above, p. 341.]

Upon the ſuppreſſion of Religious Houſes, this eſtate came to the crown. In 1551, K. Edw. VI. granted to his Præceptor Sir John Cheke, among other things, this maner of Pitley, and woods called the Marſhe and Pynkwell grove (y). He being forced to ſurrender it, 12 April 1556, to Qu. Mary, She granted it, 5 Auguſt 1557, to Henry Vavaſor, and others (z).

Thomas French, mentioned above, p. 256, held this maner, and divers other lands in Great Berdfeld, in K. James the firſt's reign (a). It belonged in 1636 to John Owen, Gent. ſon and heir of Iſrael Owen, [illegible] it of the Crown for killing a Battle?

K. Charles I. granted it away, and by Mr. Haſlefoot it was given to the Company of Haberdaſhers in London, charged with the following payments. To the Church-wardens of St. Nicolas Cold-Abbey, for the better maintenance of the weekly Lecture there, 8l. To 20 poor houſe-keepers of the Company 20l. To the four Hoſpitals 20l. To Ludgate, Newgate, and the two Compters 10l. And to the Company and Officers, as a ſtock for laying up corn (b). The Maner-houſe ſtands in Little Bardfield [K].

Park-gate, an eſtate in this pariſh, was many years in the Searle family. William Searle, the laſt of them, was buried here in June 1692.

In records it is called Normandies, alias Oldfields.

2. The Maner of BOXTED-HALL, otherwise Le Mote.

The mansion house stands below Alphamston Church, in a bottom by a small stream, on the left hand of the road leading from that Church to Heny and Lammarsh.

It took the name of Boxted-hall from the family of Boxted, who had it as early as K. Henry the Third's reign; [and are sufficiently mentioned above under the parish of Boxted] and le Mote, from its being moted round, of which some remains are still visible.

Sir Ralph de Boxted, who dyed 31 Edw. I. [D] held in Alfemeston, of Nicolas de Noers, 60 acres of arable; and there were 2 acr. of meadow, a water-mill, and 12 s. rent of assize. — Peter, his son and successor, dyed 19 Edw. II. possessed of the same, with 2 acres more of meadow, and 13 acres and a half of pasture. — Peter his son left a widow named Isabell, that enjoyed for her life, in the parishes of Alphamston, Lammarsh, Pebmarsh, and Twynsted, a messuage, 120 acres of land, and 18 s. rent, of the heirs of Sir Tho. de Grey. — Peter de Boxted was their son and heir (l). But we hear no further of the family in this place.

John Baker, who dyed 16 November 1540, held of Henry Payne Gent. as of his maner of Cleys, this messuage called Le Mote, in Alphamston; and another messuage, with 20 acres of arable, and 10 of pasture, called Sewalls; and 8 acres besides; and 3 messuages, 40 acres of arable, and 10 acres of pasture, in this parish, and Lammarsh: with other small parcels in several of the adjoining parishes. —— Roger his son was aged 22 years (m).

Thomas Strutt, of Wickham St. Paul's, appears the next possessor upon record. He dyed 24 Octob. 1626, holding the maner or capital messuage called Le Mott, alias Boxsted-hall, with appertenances, and Sparrows croft, and a messuage and other premisses mamed Phimbles, Ballances, Imbells, and Wilkens. His only daughter and heir —— Hester was 13 years old (n). She became the wife of lies in Bures Hamlet. The mansion house is on the left hand of the road leading from Earl's Colne to Bures. It derived its appellation from the noble family of Ferrers, Earls of Derby, mentioned above under Woodham-Ferrers, and Butsbury, p. 31, and 48, and also under Stebbing, Tiltey, and Steple——John de Ferrers, a branch of this noble Family held it about the reign of K. Edw. II. Afterwards it belonged to John Mortimer. And then came to the ancient family of Cressener, by marriage it seems, on which account they bore in their Coat-armour, six horseshoes, the original arms of the Ferrers [E].

William Parke of Gestingthorpe Gent. and had by him, William; John; Robert; Hester; Elizabeth; and Sarah.

3. The Manet of FERRERS,

The Cressener family was originally of Norman extraction. Soon after the conquest, they fixed themselves at Haukedon and Reed in Suffolk, and gave name to the chief places of their residence there, called Cressenors to this day. From thence, about the reign of Henry IVth, they branched themselves into Essex and Norfolk, and held divers considerable Lordships in the several Counties aforesaid. They ennobled their blood by marrying into the illustrious Houses of Mortimer Lords of Attilburgh and Ferrers Earls of Derby and Nottingham, whose arms they bear quarterly, and by which means they became possessed of the Maners of Mortimers and Ferrers: as also by the alliance of William Cressener of Cressenors, in the parish of Haukedon aforesaid Esq; who married Margaret, relict of Richard Lord Scrope of Bolton, daughter of Ralph Nevill first Earl of Westmoreland, from which match, the Cressenors of Morley in Norfolk, and the Family at Earl's-Colne, are lineally descended. Their antient place of Sepulture was the Black Fryers in Sudbury; but for several generations they have been buried in the Church of Earl's Colne (o).

Ralph Cressener, who dyed 12 Hen. IV. held the site of the maner of Ferrers, of the heirs of the Earl of March, and of the King; and 100 acres of land of the heirs of the Earl of Kent, as of his maner of Lammarsh. —— William his son was then aged 18 years (p). But Robert, whom we suppose to have been brother to Ralph, had this estate at the time of his decease in 1414 [F] (q). William, son and heir of the said

"Migration from East Anglia to New England before 1660", by N. C. P. Tyack, Ph.D. Thesis, Univ. of London, 1951

[Headmaster of Willenhall Comprehensive Secondary School, Staffs.]

Permission to quote from the thesis should be obtained from Dr. Tyack.
Microfilmed by Ipswich + East Suffolk Record Office, Ipswich Borrowed from Wesleyan Univ. Lib., Middletown, Conn.

Preface

Between 1620 and 1660 some 3,000 emigrants set out from Essex, Suffolk, and Norfolk for New England... largest contingents leaving during the years from 1630 to 1638.

Essentially a series of group movements, of families, households, or congregations led by the head of the family or by a cleric.

Mainly from agrarian & the cloth & textile industries.

Economic factors probably outweighed the relig. + political

During the late thirties, particularly the movement from Norfolk in 1637 + 1638, religious persecution appears to have been the main driving force. As a personal influence in East Anglia the elder John Winthrop towered above all others.

Previous approaches - - - - Genealogical deduction was often a matter of surmise until the thorough techniques of H. F. Waters and his successors -- indicated the full significance of the Somerset House records in relation to the parish records.

The summation of both approaches came in the work of Col. C. E. Banks.

The transfer of place names and the connections of family names have been worked out in detail, by such as the Rev. J. Hunter for Suffolk, and by Col. J. L. Chester for Essex. The vessels in which the emigrants sailed have been described in considerable detail, more particularly in the Mass. Hist. Society's Proceedings.

Col. C. E. Banks, in "The English Ancestry and Homes of the Pilgrim Fathers," "The Winthrop Fleet of 1630," and "The Planters of the Commonwealth", attempted a systematic treatment - -

M. L. Hansen's "The Immigrant in American History."

Most treatments of the background of the movement have tended to overestimate its religious aspects and to underestimate the importance of the economic and political factors.

Previous analysis of the religious background has tended to be almost exclusively concerned with the view of the elder John Winthrop and of the outstanding clerics of the emigration; while the wide impact of the Laudian policy on many humble layman in East Anglia has been largely ignored. A. P. Newton's "The Colonising Activities of the English Puritans" is the outstanding exception.

Central in the sources -- the vast mass of genealogical research on the New England immigrants, assembled mainly in the many volumes of the Mass Eng. Hist. Gen. Reg.

Work of H. F. Waters & his successors peculiarly valuable, as have been the transcripts so generously placed at the writer's disposal by Miss L. J. Redstone. J. Savage's "Genealogical Dictionary," an early classic in this field and much corrected by later research, is still invaluable. Hotten's "Lists," Venn's "Alumni Cantebrigienses," and the three volumes of Col. Banks already mentioned have been deeply drawn on.

In the economic and social aspects the following have proved outstandingly valuable among the local archives: the Quarter Sessions Rolls for Essex and Norfolk, the Essex Quarter Sessions Bundles, and the manorial records, particularly the Court Books, Rentals, Surveys, and Maps, in which Essex and Suffolk are rich for this period. Sir Thomas Barrington's Account Books have given useful leads on the actual migration from Essex and its political background.

At the Public Record Office the Port Books for London, Ipswich, and Colchester, the Chancery Depositions for all three counties, and Rentals and Surveys for Essex and Norfolk have thrown much light. - - -

And in all aspects of the emigration and its background the monumental edition of the Winthrop Papers, begun by the Mass. Hist. Soc. in 1929 and still in progress, is irreplaceable.

Colchester Museum (Library of the Essex Archaeological Society).

p. 80 The East Anglian movement from Essex, Suffolk and Norfolk, was probably unique in the unity of its dynamic over these years, and in the high average quality of its emigrants — in intellect, character, material wealth, and skills.

The Religious Background

Chap. VIII

The Puritan Background

There seems no doubt that the religious background in the counties of Essex, Suffolk, & Norfolk was profoundly significant in the movement of people from those counties to New England before 1640. ... One major link... is to be found in the ecclesiastical policy of William Laud, as applied by his agents, such as William Juxon and Matthew Wren. The resulting religious exodus to the Low Countries was not without its influence on the New England movement. The other important link exists in the spiritual yearning that flowed in the life and teaching of such as William Ames, Thomas Hooker, and Samuel Ward.

As elsewhere in England, Puritanism in East Anglia was two-sided in its development — in that it grew within and outside the Established Church. Up to 1630, probably, Puritan Nonconformity was the greater religious influence on the movement to New England from the three counties. After 1632, while that dynamic remained strong, the dominant religious impulse behind this emigration seems to have derived much more from Puritan practice and teaching within the Church of England. p. 240

(a) The Separatist Movement

The conventicle ~~[illegible]~~ — which merged so many for New England — seems to have been first prominent in East Anglia about the middle of the 16th cent. Early in 1551, partly as the result of Kentish conventiclers moving from Faversham to Bocking in Essex, and partly as the direct result of the 1549 Act of Uniformity, conventiclers in Bocking appear to have numbered some sixty persons. - - -

And by 1581 Robert Browne had begun to gather his "company" at Norwich, where a Brownist congregation seems to have had a continuous existence until 1603. From this group seems to have stemmed a Brownist or Barrowist movement in or about Ipswich. - - -

Perhaps more significant from the point of view of the later background of East Anglican emigration was the persecution in the three counties to which this Nonconformity gave rise. Long before 1630 it was abundantly clear that the authorities of the Established Church were ready to deal most sharply with Puritans as well as Recusants. About 1592 John Clarke - - - then about fifty years old, was imprisoned for three years or more, because of his Barrowist views.

P2+2 Four years later — in 1612 — William Sayer was imprisoned in "the gaol for the county of Norf(olk)." His main offence seems to have been his forthright expression of views unacceptable to John Jegon, then Bishop of Norwich. Sayer seems to have denied the ~~[illegible]~~ godhead of Jesus and of the Holy Ghost. He disapproved of the baptism of infants, because they had no actual faith. Regarding established ecclesiastical authority and its relations with the state, he considered it unlawful for a layman to take an oath before an ecclesiastical officer; and in his view the king had no right to ~~[illegible]~~ grant to bishops or priests the powers of civil magistrates. To him the ministers of the Established Church were not called to their office in a scriptural manner, with the corollary that their ordination was illegal. Admittedly these were strong views; and against what he regarded as outrageous rebellion, the diocesan, Jegon, after two examinations of Sayer, took the far-reaching step of imprisonment. The bishop's report on the matter to Archbishop Abbot seems to have recommended even more stringent action — for the metropolitan's reply ... stated that such a severe course as burning this desperate heretic would never be assented to by ecclesiastical law. The case stands out as a first flash of lightening in the storm that was brewing in the Norwich diocese between Puritans and episcopal authority.

Much of the spiritual dynamic behind the voyages, from 1620 onwards, of the Pilgrim Fathers, seems to have derived from their famous pastor in Leyden, the Reverend John Robinson. For some years after 1604 he was attached to St. Andrew's Church, Norwich, in close contact with the Puritan movement in the city, led by his close friend and colleague at St. Andrew's, Thomas Newborne, of Christ's College, Cambridge, and other Norwich clergy. from Robinson's own college, Corpus Christi. It was during this period that Robinson's views on the rights of the church congregation developed to clashing point with the policy of Jegon, then Bishop of Norwich — a clash which resulted in Robinson's suspension, his return to his birthplace, Sturton-le-Steeple, Lincolnshire, and his eventual migration to Leyden, whither many from Norfolk, some possibly from his St. Andrew's congregation, followed him — in some cases, perhaps, eventually to journey on to Cape Cod.

(6) Puritanism Within the Established Church

p. 244

Puritanism within the Established Church, so defiant a feature in East Anglia's religious life after 1630, and so strong a dynamic behind emigration to New Eng. over those years, seems to have derived from two opposite sides of the three counties. The Puritan colleges of Cambridge, espec. Emmanuel & Sidney Sussex, were filling the churches and lectureships in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex with a steady stream of Puritan propagandists. Many of these resolved the increasing tension of their individual religious problems by flight to New Eng; ~~so~~ so giving a direct lead to many other emigrants. — — —

46 The same yearning for greater freedom and latitude within the Established Church appeased itself in East Anglia, as elsewhere, in the appointment of chaplains and lecturers — some of which became the leaders of emigration to New Eng. in the thirties and were afterwards outstanding religious leaders there in the new communities. During the rule of James I and Charles I such posts were increasingly sought after by ministers of Puritan leaning, who objected to rigid conformity and who wished to avoid meticulous subscription to regulations. That more and more of such appointments were made in this period was a sign of the increasing preference of the religious laity, whether of the upper class who kept chaplains, or of the middle classes whose voluntary contributions supported the lecturers. It is not without significance that in some towns their office had the status of an official corporation appointment, as at Colchester in Essex and at Ipswich, Suffolk, where the remarkable Samuel Ward was town preacher. — —

247 In Norfolk, Suffolk, & Essex — the main centres of Puritanism within the Established Church, where the most influential lectureships were eventually established, were Haverhill, Colchester, Dedham, Chelmsford, Ipswich, Norwich, and Great Yarmouth — and their influence was felt all over East Anglia. Particularly was this true of Haverhill, situated near the boundaries of three counties — Essex, Suffolk, and Cambridgeshire, and of three dioceses — London, Norwich, and Ely. And with the Haverhill lectureship is associated some of the outstanding names of East Anglican Puritanism before 1660. Richard Blackerby, a cleric born at Worlington, Suffolk, and a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, did much to build what became the Haverhill tradition. After holding two Suffolk chaplaincies — at Rushbrooke, to Sir Thomas Jermin, and afterwards at Denham, to Sir Edward Lewknor — Blackerby for a time was minister at Feltwell in Norfolk. His Puritan leaning forcing him to resign, he then settled at Ashen, on the north Essex border, teaching, like Thomas Hooker after him, and preaching lectures at Castle Hedding ham, Stoke-by-Clare, and Haverhill. Later he lived with his son-in-law at Great Wratting, and took a lecture at Gestingthorp. As with his more famous successor Blackerby's change of outlook was reflected in his teaching and indicates the nature of his influence. From a moderate Puritan he had, by the early forties, moved to so radical a position that he is reported to have said, when preaching in the early 1640's at Halstead, that to bow at the name of Jesus was to thrust a spear into Christ's side, and that such ministers as signed children with the sign of the cross did as much as in them lay to send such children to the devil. - - -

249 The family of Wards represents perhaps most clearly the strongly sustained inspiration at work at that time in Haverhill and its immediate district in relig. matters. Their association with Haverhill began with the work there of the Rev. John Ward, described in the Camden Pedigree as "preacher of Haverhill." That he was a descendant of an upper middle class family of Norfolk and Essex may account, in part, for the strength of his influence among such people, and that of his sons, Samuel and Nathaniel, after him. His widow subsequently married Rev. Richard Rogers, then lecturer at Wethersfield. When Laud described the lecturers as "the people's creatures, who blew the bellows of their sedition," perhaps most clearly in his mind was the Rev. John's eldest son, Samuel Ward, who succeeded his father as lecturer at Haverhill. While town preacher at Ipswich [1603] he [Samuel] became the beloved and venerated apostle of Puritanism in East Anglia; and his teaching and preaching, which in the middle thirties brought down on him the full rigour of the High Commission Court, led many in East Suffolk and in Norfolk, partly for that very reason, to decide for the Low Countries and New England.

Nathaniel Ward, who crossed to New England with his family in 1634, was probably more famous in his own day for his activities in Massachusetts and for his polemics in England after his return in 1646. - - -

252 Like the Wards of Haverhill, with which family he was connected by his second marriage, Richard Rogers originated from a middle-class family of Chelmsford. - - It was his son Ezekiel who went over to New England in 1638. - - The Puritan views of Nathaniel Rogers, the son of John of Dedham and who emigrated in 1636, found wide support - - - Nathaniel's elder brother Daniel, who succeeded his father Richard (?) at Wethersfield (1625-1654) made a specific but entirely different contribution to the religious ~~climate~~ dynamic behind the ~~[illegible]~~ New Eng. movement. Candler described him as "an eminent scholar + preacher, who hath many works in print; he, being one of the eminent fellows in Christ's College in Cambridge, was the advancer of Dr. Ames, whom he brought in to be fellow there." This contact, in that it strengthened the association of the Ames family with East Anglican Puritanism, prepared the way for Joan Ames' departure to New England in 1637, with her husband's library among her luggage — the contents of which library were to complete his profound influence on religious thought in the new settlement.[25]

255 This growing Puritanism within the Established Church, which drew many out of East Anglia, derived from the work of many other lecturers, more particularly in Essex, and in turn stimulated them to more radical thought and action. Such was the outcome, there seems no doubt, of Dr. William Ames' brief tenure in 1609–10 of the long established Lecturership at Colchester, an office in which he was succeeded some years later, in 1631, by William Bridge, who afterwards became a pillar of Puritanism in Norwich and Great Yarmouth. At Halstead, Great Waltham, Coggeshall, and Earls Colne the same leaven was at work. Thomas Shepard, a protégé of Thomas Weld, with whom he lived at Tarling, "where he (Shepard) enjoyed the blessing of his and Mr. Hooker's ministry at Chelmsford," became preacher at Earls Colne in 1627.

151 There is no doubt that over these years the Puritan-minded clergy of Essex drew spiritual as well as material sustenance from the laity, among whom they had an ever increasing following. This eventually widely spread attitude of laymen was reflected in part by the action of such as Sir William Masham, of Otes, High Laver. Roger Williams and John Morton, later emigrants to New England, were successively his chaplains.[32]

The Laudian Policy

Throughout the period from 1630 to 1642 the central government was attempting frequently to deal with the problem of emigration to New England. With the measures taken to this end Laud was intimately connected; and they were, in the main, the outcome of his influence on Charles I. To the king and his archbishop the problem appeared, to quote the Star Chamber decree of 1638, as "the frequent resort to New England of divers persons ill-affected to the religion established in the Church of England." That is, it was a fact of and an obstacle to their central task, as they conceived it, in ecclesiastical matters — namely to establish among clergy and laity, a complete conformity to the doctrines and rites of the Anglican Church. Therefore, as Laud saw it, the discharge of his responsibility in this field, in which he had the full support of the king, demanded that this emigration to New England, if it could not be prevented, should be curbed, and restricted to those certified as conforming to the Established Church. The logical completion of this policy was to seek to establish ecclesiastical control over the emigrants after they had settled across the Atlantic. This aspect of the Laudian policy may have derived from the order made in Council on October 1st, 1633, which provided that the Merchant Adventurers' Company should appoint only Anglican chaplains in the Low Countries, and that those chaplains were to be under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of London.[2] In the next year, 1634, for the express purpose of dealing with New England, two commissions were almost simultaneously created, under Laud's presidency. The first was the Commission for New England, a revival of the commission set up under archbishop Harsnet, to deal with charges brought against the Massachusetts Bay Company, and which was now made permanent. The second, and identical in personnel with the New England Commission, was "a board for the purpose of governing the colonies" known afterwards as the Commission for Foreign Plantations.[3] At the same time it was ordered that intending emigrants should provide at the embarkation port either a certificate from the Commission, or a testimony of their conformity, signed by the minister of their parish. A certificate was also required, signed by the local justices of the peace, to whom the emigrants were known, that they did not owe taxes to the Crown, and that they had taken the oath of allegiance and supremacy. Masters of ships carrying such passengers had to give bond that they — the masters — were satisfied that this procedure had been completed before any embarkation; and they had to return lists of such "bona fide" passengers to the Privy Council.[4] Two years later, on April 10th, 1636, in a further commission issued to Archbishop Laud and others, for the government of the colonies, intent of control was carried a stage further, in that he and his fellow commissioners were given power "to establish courts, as well ecclesiastical as civil, for determining causes."[5] On April 30th of the following year, 1637, Charles I proclaimed that "being informed that great numbers of his subjects are yearly transported into New England, with their families and whole estates, that they might be out of reach of ecclesiastical authority, His Majesty, therefore, commands that all his officers of the several ports should suffer none to pass without license from the commissioners of the several ports, and a testimonial from their ministers of their conformity to the order and discipline of their church."[6] The next day a second royal proclamation was issued, tightening Laud's control over clerical emigrants, on the ground "that such as are not conformable to the discipline and ceremonies of the Church, do frequently transport themselves to the plantations, where they take liberty to nourish their factious and schismatical humours, to the hindrance of the good conformity and unity of the church": and the port commissioners were expressly commanded "in his Majesty's name to suffer no clergyman to transport himself without a testimonial from the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London."[7] — The depth of Laud's concern with his New England responsibilities can be gauged from his arrangements, made the same year, to send a bishop there.[9] Not long after, in 1639, he wrote to Wentworth, then in Ireland, complaining that there should be "yet such an universal running to New England, and God knows whither."[10]

269 The very frequency and constant repetition of these regulations indicated both the wide scope and the ultimate failure of Laud's intentions for New Eng. To the same degree that Laud failed, his policy served only to stimulate what he hoped to control and to repress — and to that extent, at the national level, became a powerful factor behind emigration to New England before 1642. That such was its relationship to the movement from East Anglia in that period there seems no doubt. — In February, 1634, Henry Dade, his commissioner in Suffolk, was reporting from Ipswich on the next sailing of the "Francis" and the "Elizabeth" from that port to New England. His report emphasized the "ill effects of suffering such swarms to go out of England; trade will be overthrown, and persons indebted will fly into New England, and be accounted religious men for leaving the Kingdom, because they cannot endure the ceremonies of the Church."[1]

271 The subterfuge to which many — East Anglicans were probably driven are instanced in the several male and female "servants" who accompanied Richard Harlakenden when he and his family embarked in the "Defence" at London, early in August, 1635, for New England. Eight servants are listed among his party, of whom "Samuell Shepheard" may have been the Reverend Thomas Shepard; and others of the eight were given a much higher social standing after they had landed.[16]

345 ## Chapter XI

The Religious Background and the New England Movement

The recorded instances of East Anglian emigrants — clerical and lay — who set out for New England specifically for religious reasons are comparatively few. Probably they amount to no more than the outstanding links in a mesh of religious connection, that, during the years before 1642, seems to have spread steadily over the three counties. A comparison of the areas of Laudian pressure with those whence there was emigration to New Eng. leads to this conclusion. It is suggested even more strongly by some of the evidence given in Parliament's proceedings after 1641 against Laud and Wren, and by incidents surrounding Laud's imprisonment. The detail and regularity with which the successive developments of episcopal activity in the two dioceses of London and Norwich were reported to the elder Winthrop and his family after they had left the country leave no doubt that religious considerations, in particular Laud's policy, were central in thought of many in East Anglia when they decided for New England.

Jackson, Michigan

Dear Sir:

My wife's great grandfather was Jefferson C. Plumb, who died in Leoni, Michigan, in 1894, but we do not have the exact date.

Would you have a record of his death? If so, we should like to receive a complete copy.

I am enclosing a check of $1.00 for the fee.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Sir:

My wife's great grandfather was Jefferson G. Plumb, who lived in Jackson about 1855 and died in Leoni in 1914. We are trying to secure additional information about him and his family.

Do you have much in the way of early historical materials on Jackson County in your library? Were there any newspapers published in Jackson at that time? If so, where would there be a file or microfilm copies?

Mr. Plumb is supposed to have been connected with the Jackson Public Schools about 1855 as a principal or teacher. He was made head of what was called a Select School in 1857-8. To whom would I write regarding the archives of the public schools there?

Mr. Plumb's sons also lived on a farm in or near Leoni from 1855 to 1914. He married Gertrude B. Hager in 1872 and had a son, Charles G. Plumb, who was still living at home in 1894. Do your city or telephone directories show any Plumbs or Hagers still living in Jackson or Leoni or Jackson County?

Do you have a way of discovering whether there is an old cemetery in or near Leoni? If there is, could you find out how I could address the person in charge of it?

If you can answer any or all of these questions I should be most grateful. An early reply would be appreciated, as we are leaving on a trip August 12.

Yours very truly,

David L. Witheridge

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

Enclosed is information concerning Jefferson C. Plumb. This is all I could find concerning him in our county histories.

Yes, we did have newspapers printed at that time and we have them on microfilm but it would take a long time to go through all of these unless we had more definite dates such as date of death. Was it in January, May or June of 1894, etc. (Jan., 29, 1893)

You might write Mr. Fred Yoss, 818 Justin, Vandercook Lake, Jackson, Michigan concerning the archives of the school. He did make a study of Jackson Schools at one time. I do know he is leaving on an extended trip to Europe sometime and will be gone for months.

The city directory and telephone books give these names whom you might contact:

Charles D. Plumb	5000 Seymour, Jackson, Michigan
Harold Plumb	210 N. Durand, Jackson, Michigan

I tried to call the Charles Plumb's but received no answer. Mrs. Harold Plumb doubted very much if they were relatives but would aall tomorrow.

Forrest Sager	3980 Donnely Rd., Gilletts Lake, Jackson
Grace Sager	1109 Kenwood Court, Jackson (Mrs. Dan.)
Orin Sager	333 E. Prospect, Jackson

There is an old cemetery just outside of the little village of Leoni and you may write:

Mr. Marion Schalfant 913 Fifth St., Michigan Center, Mich.

Barbara Yeagley

Dear Miss Yeagley:

Your letter with the information about Jefferson C. Plumb was very welcome indeed. I appreciate your careful search and prompt reply.

Most significant of all were the names of Mr. Plumb's parents, Friesman P. and Abigail (Clawson) Plumb. These we had never known before, and now we have two new trails to track down.

I have written to Mr. Fred Yoas about the history and archives of the schools and hope he will be able to answer before he leaves for Europe.

I have also written to Charles D. Plumb to see if by any chance he is a descendant.

During the coming week we are coming to Michigan for a visit and plan to be in Jackson on the morning of Tuesday, August 18. We shall not be there long, but we hope at least to visit the cemetery at Leoni. I wrote to Mr. Schlafent to see if he has any burial records of the Jefferson Plumb family.

I hope that we shall also have time to stop at the library and meet you. In particular, we might look at some newspapers in your microfilm file. We find, for example, that the exact date of Mr. Plumb's death was December 20, 1893. Perhaps there would be something near that date. There also might be something about his work with the schools in the period of 1880-5.

You have already given us several new leads, and I am looking forward to thanking you in person and perhaps having your help in other ways in the future.

Yours sincerely,

David L. Witheridge

Jefferson C. Plumb: was born in Sunbury, Delaware Co., O., Jan. 31, 1818. His parents were Prisman P. and Abigail (Slawson) Plumb, the former a native of Delaware, the latter of New York State, and of English-German ancestry. He was educated in the common schools, afterward attending Shaw's Academy at Euclid, Ohio, two terms: during the period of his studies, he was reading medicine and studying the same under the instruction of Dr. Elijah Burton; took a course of lectures at Willoughby Institute; went to Ypsilanti in 1841, where he practiced medicine; also taught school two years; located in various places in Michigan, where he was engaged in the practice of his profession; lectured on physiology and chemistry; was Professor of Natural Sciences and Higher Mathematics in Ypsilanti Seminary, in connection with Prof. Estabrook, where he remained eight or ten years. In the fall of 1866 he was authorized to select a competent professor to fill the chair he had lately vacated in the Ypsilanti Seminary; was placed in charge of the Jackson schools on a salary of $2,000 per year; was tendered further lucrative positions, but in deference to Prof. Lowell, decided to decline them; resumed his old position at Ypsilanti at a liberal salary, where, during a chemical experiment, a severe affliction befel him in the loss of an eye. In 1868, when his eyesight was somewhat restored, his former patrons, in Jackson established a select school of which he took charge, and conducted it in the most successful manner, two years. In 1868 he purchased the farm of 160 acres, where he now resides.

When four yeqrs old Mr. P. was injured by falling from a fence which caused paralysis of the hip, injuring the nerves of motion, leaving him a cripple for life. He was married in Ypsilanti in 1843, to Laura M. Knapp; they were the parents of 6 children, but one of whom is living - Frank O., now in mercantile business in Saginaw. Mr. Plumb was married in 1872 to Gertrude B. Sager; this union is blessed with 1 son - Charles G., born Feb. 17, 1873.

Dear Jim,

At long last I am sending you the materials that will show you how Elizabeth is related to Dr. Thomas Plume of Maldon. You will see that I am sending back a copy of the pedigree chart you so kindly made, and I have circled in red the John Plume of Ridgewell, who was her ancestor who came to America. As you see, he was a first cousin of Dr. Thomas Plume's father.

H. B. Plumb's book has about 100 pages, so I am unable to send a copy of the whole book; but I have Xeroxed all the pages that show what he has on the descendents of John Plumbe in England (pp. 8-16), then a few generations in America (pp. 17-22), plus a couple of pages (pp. 28, 35) that tie into Elizabeth's ancestry, ending with Parysmandus Plumb. I've underlined her ancestors in red.

I'm also enclosing Elizabeth's ancestral chart that shows how she descends from Parysmandus. (After her mother's death, she was adopted by her grandfather and therefore became Elizabeth Plumb.) There is also a family record sheet on Parysmandus, which adds some information to that which is given in W. B. Plumb's book.

We were very grateful to receive all the enclosures in your last letter, as they included some very interesting information about Dr. Thomas Plume and other Plumes; and they extended our knowledge about a number of the families into which the Plumes married. The only items we already had (from our 1980 visit to the Essex Record Office) were the Plume pedigrees from the 1634 and 1664-1668 Visitations and the pages on Great Yeldham from Morant's History of Essex. Everything else was new to us, very enjoyable to read, and valuable, of course, in our family history.

Thank you again.

We also appreciate your corresponding with several others on our behalf, even though it has produced no positive results so far, however, we believe these contacts will be helpful as we continue. As I said in a previous letter, we are acquainted with Mrs. Shacklock, having met her at the Plume Library in 1980, and she and Elizabeth write to each other every few months. In fact, in her last letter she mentioned your approach to the Vicar of All Saints Church in Maldon and suggested that we might wait to get in touch with you!

Lacking any of John Plumbe's descendants in that part of England by the name of Plume/Plumb, I'd now like to pursue the Symonds line to see if we could discover any descendants of Richard and Elizabeth (Plumb) Symonds, whose effigy is on the wall of the Great Yeldham Church. That was a very interesting article you sent out of Some Essex Grasses. It stated that his descendants remained in possession of the estate (The Pool) for nearly a century and that one of his descendants, Richard Symonds, "made the heraldic and genealogical 'Collections' relating to Essex (3 vols.) now in Herald's College." Perhaps someone at the Essex Record Office would have further information on this family.

I'd also be grateful if you could send me the name and address of someone in the Essex Family History Society (assuming there is one) to whom I could write to see if there are any others researching the lines in which we are interested (such as Plumb/Plume, Purcas, Cracksbone, Symonds, etc.).

I know you will find the enclosed material interesting, as will those at the Essex Record Office when they see it. I greatly appreciate your contacting us in the first place and your continued help in our searching.

Yours sincerely,

David Witheridge

August 17, 1981

Dear Mrs. White:

We were very happy to meet you in June when we were visiting John and Betty Jackson. He always love to meet distant relatives, and we know you are some kind of distant cousin of mine, if your Plumb family ties into the family outlined by H.B. Plumb in his 1912 book on the Plumb Family. Her cousin Jane Potter had access to a copy of that book, and she is the one who first told us about it.

According to our old notation we have, we think, you are a descendant of David Plumb of Lyme, Conn. who was a son of Walter and a grandson of Samuel. Is that right? If you can give us any more information about these ancestors of yours we can probably figure out how they tie into H.B. Plumb's book. You may have to wait until you get back to Jackson to find some of this information.

I think we told you that we spent two months in Britain last summer, and mostly that month we spent in Kent where our Plumb ancestors lived in the 16th and 17th centuries.

One of the high points of our trip last summer was finding and being invited to go into Haynes Hall in East Peckham. It was owned and lived in by some of our Plumb ancestors, and the manor was then called Great Plumes (1512 - 1610) owned by Robert Plumes (1545 - 1625). This second Robert was eldest son of Robert Plumes (1517 - 1559) and grandson of John Plumes (1494 - 1543). This John was the one who first left Kent and settled in Lyme, Conn. in 1635. Although he died there in 1659, he returned to England and lived in Rodgers Hall in Peckham as an adult, he had lived in Haynes Hall as a boy.

We ordering a copy of one of the pictures we took of Sayres Hall, but we plan to send some others when we have copies made. The problem is, we only took slides on our trip, and will have to have prints made, which take longer than prints from negatives

When we send the pictures of Sayres Hall, will also send a couple of Ridgewell Hall We took pictures of it, but didn't go inside

Another interesting experience we had was a visit to the Plume Library in Maldon, Essex. This was founded by Rev. Thomas Plume, a clergyman who died in 1704. He also endowed a Professorship of Experimental Philosophy (or science) at Cambridge University Mr. Plume is a relative of ours, though not a direct ancestor. His father was a first cousin of our ancestor, John — the one who came to this country

We had a delightful visit with Mrs. Chadwick, the director of the Plume Library and she gave us a booklet about it — copyrighted. She also gave us a small photograph of a portrait of Rev. Thomas Plume and copies of two different coats of arms used by the Plume family in those days We have framed these and taken a picture of them and will send you a copy when we send the others

Please forgive my erratic writing! I think it is legible, but certainly not decorative. Probably I should have typed it because we wanted a carbon so we can remember what we told you about when and when I wrote over carbon paper it's a disaster. We called the Johnsons the other day and they said you were still at Takoma We hope you've had a lovely summer and that we may hear from you for Xmas

Sincerely yours,
Elizabeth Plumb Wethridge

Dear Mrs. Witheridge,

I apologize for taking so long to answer your interesting letter of August. As you surmised, I had no genealogical information in Lakeside, and unfortunately have not had time to unearth it here in Washington yet. It's still in moving cartons in the attic, waiting to be unpacked from a move last January when we sold our Hinsdale, Ill. house and had to empty it.

I seem to be so involved with activities here that finding

Dear Virginia,

A long time has elapsed since we received your 1981 letter to Elizabeth about your common Plumb ancestry. I am writing this letter because I am the one who does most of the genealogy, though Elizabeth often helps in recording information in libraries and cemeteries and in corresponding with relatives.

Much has happened in our Plumb searchings since our last contact with you. At first we were waiting for another letter from you after you had had a chance to find your Plumb materials. Later we decided to write to the Public Library in Stratton, asking if they could send us information about the Plumb family in Stratton. They were able to send us biographical articles about Ralph and Fawcett Plumb, and they gave us the address of Samuel W. Plumb (Jr.), who is still living there (112 E. Randall St., Stratton, Neb. 69043).

So we wrote to Sam asking how he is related to Ralph and Fawcett Plumb and how they all tie into the Plumb line described in H. C. Plumb's book on The Plumb Family. We soon had a most friendly letter from Sam stating that his grandfather, Samuel (1812-1870) was a brother of Ralph; and his father, of course, was Samuel Walter, Jr. (the one you referred to as "Walter" in your letter). So Sam (b. 3/6/99) is the one you knew in your childhood days.

From the charts that Sam sent us, it appears that his father, Samuel Walter, was the first cousin of your grandfather, Fawcett, not of your father. So Sam is the second cousin of your father, and you are his second cousin once removed, and the third cousin of his daughter, Patricia Plumb Breen (Mrs. Thomas R.).

According to the information Sam sent us, your grandfather Fawcett's father was Francis, not Ralph; so Fawcett was Ralph's nephew, not his son. That also agrees with information we received from the Streator Library.

In July we planned a trip east to Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New England, with stops in Mattoon, Ill., and Chicago on the way back. So we wrote to Sam, asking if we could have lunch with him on the way from Mattoon to Chicago. He replied that the date we were coming would work out fine, so we met him and had a delightful time together. His daughter was busy, so we couldn't meet her and her family, but he later sent us their picture. They have two lovely children. Sam also gave us a book on the history of Streator. Meeting him was one of the highlights of our trip.

Some of the material Sam sent us was from the book we mentioned, The Plumb Family, by W. B. Plumb. At first, I couldn't identify the pages, but then at the Minnesota Historical Society Library I discovered there were two editions. His pages were from the first edition in 1870 and mine were from the second in 1893. I had also located references to the early Plumbs in this country in Genealogical + Family History of the State of Connecticut, Vol. 2, Wm. R. Cutler, editor, 1911, at the Minnesota Historical Society.

These books carry your line and Sam's back to John and Johane Plumbe of Dorling in Essex County, England. Elizabeth's line also goes back to Essex, but unfortunately no one has been able to tie her ancestors and yours together with certainty. Your ancestor, John, who lived in Tarling, was born in 1510. Elizabeth's earliest identifiable ancestor was another John, who was born about 1505 and lived in Toppesfield. It seems quite reasonable to assume they were related, as those two towns are less than 15 miles apart. At this point I'm assuming they were first cousins, though they might have been second or third cousins at the most.

If the two original Johns were first cousins I have figured out that you and Elizabeth's mother are 13th cousins. That means that you and Elizabeth are 13th cousins once removed. (Elizabeth and Sam are 12th cousins twice removed.)

When Elizabeth wrote to you in 1981, she promised to send some pictures of Spaynes Hall in Great Yeldham, owned by the Plumbs in the late 1500's and early 1600's. Unfortunately, these have been sitting around waiting for our next letter to you. We hope you enjoy seeing these views of the house actually lived in by Plumb relatives of yours. Ridgewall Hall is another house in which the Plumb family lived.

You are also related to Dr. Thomas Plume, who founded and endowed the Plume Library in Maldon, Essex. We're also enclosing interior and exterior pictures of the library and of Dr. Plume and his coats of arms.

We do hope you will forgive us for not writing sooner. We intended to write soon after meeting Sam in Silvaton, but you know how many things can interfere! We look forward to hearing from you when you have time.

Most sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Witteridge,

Thank you so much for your long letter reporting on your research into Plumb genealogy. I'm so glad you are doing all this, because I don't have the time yet to delve into it. I am up to my ears in a new project to raise money for the Smithsonian which is turning out to be a full-time job. I'm sorry if you waited for me to plunge into my attic in search of material. I guess my genealogical travels will have to wait a while til I have to slow down in my other activities.

I did know Sam Plumb in Arvada. He was my second cousin (once removed) but I knew his

2) ~~Frank~~ Brother Edward better. Edward was a musician and spent many years as an orchestral arranger for Walt Disney. I believe he worked on "Fantasia" too. Their mother had a marvelous ear. She could whistle any bird call, and used to take me & my friends walking along the river bank & through fields, attracting all sorts of birds with her calls.

But since I virtually left Decatur after 8th grade, I didn't know my cousins well after that.

My grandfather, Fawcett, was adopted by Ralph, as I understand it. Just why, I don't know, unless Ralph was childless.

Thanks so much for the pictures of Haynes Hall and Ridgewell Hall, as well as the Plume Library. I hope someday we may be able to see these in person. Philip has ancestors in England also, so perhaps we'll make a pilgrimage one day. When he was a teenager he accompanied his family to Abingdon where they had tea with his relatives.

Do keep up the good work! Perhaps I'll want to come and copy it all down someday. In any case, I am keeping your letters and pictures to add to my store awaiting more leisure.

Good luck and best wishes to my 13th cousin (even though once removed) and her husband.

Sincerely,
Virginia

Dear David.

My correspondence is in something of a disarray after an exceptionally hectic finish to the year and I'm not sure if I properly answered your last letter.

However if it's worth saying thankyou once it is certainly worth saying thankyou twice for the copies you kindly sent me of the relevant parts of H.B. Plumb's book

I have nothing but admiration for the indefatigable perseverance of the man bearing in mind the difficulties he faced in the 1880s + 1890s: -

a) distance
b) transport
c) location of records

etc etc.

I frankly doubt if the book could be much improved on even today. For example the early Rolls of Tunworth are still missing so his guesses as to relationships in the early years are as relevant & valid today as they were almost a hundred years ago.

Mrs. Marjorie Ives in Meriden, Connecticut sent me a very interesting letter about her "Plumb" line descending from John [b 1631 at Topsfield] son of George [b. 1607 Tunworth] - I'm not sure if she has seen HBP's book but I sent her photocopies of a couple of relevant pages. I also suggested that she should contact you & compare notes.

Her full address, should you need it, is:
Mrs MARJORIE IVES, 1 IVES AVENUE, MERIDEN CT 06450.

Turning now to your associated lines. I have checked the relevant 'Member Interests' lists of Essex, London, Middlesex Family History Societies & set out, on the next sheet, the only relevant entries today.

I shall place a suitable 'Member's Query' in the

There is not - I am fairly sure - anything else relevant specifically to Plume in the Essex Record Office; there probably is as regards Powers, Cracklebone etc — though nothing collated — & hopefully, this will enlarge.

I have already had preliminary searches in the printed records of the Inns of Court in London but as yet no dates to date.

As more information becomes available, I'll contact you.

Dear David.

Many thanks for your very interesting letter. I'd never heard of the Newberry Library before. Is there any particular reason Illinois should be strong on genealogy? Who was Newberry? You must have been very pleased with Rowsell's will! It's encouraging to make a stride forward like that isn't it? It makes all the "slogging" seem worthwhile.

I'm sorry I have nothing to add to Plume for the moment. My promised enquiries were somewhat delayed due to illness & work pressure but I have caught up now & should have something to tell you — if only negative! — soon.

As regards AMOS/AMYCE etc. ——

(i) Mrs. Vivian. W. Robertson, 4915 S 4015 W, Salt Lake City Utah 84118 is researching AMOS Essex (19).

(ii) There were Amyce/Amys/Amies in Wakes Colne & Manningtree in (16) per the printed Wills index. I didn't have your letter with me when I looked before the holiday so I shall check next week for "Roger" "Joseph" & "Israel".

(iii) There are quite a number of AMES, AMOS & a couple of AMYES in the current Essex telephone directories.

(iv) Mr. H.W. AMES is researching both AMES - generally - & London where I was able to help him.
AMIES - Manningtree (16).
AMYCE - Wakes Colne (16).
His address 28 THE DOWNS, HERNE BAY Kent (*) you'll find him very helpful.

(v) No info. yet on Somerset — but I'll bear it in mind. Perhaps Mr. Ames can help?

Notes: (1) This document bears an "Am" series number (Amos family), (2) The reference in the first paragraph is to document P78, which is missing unfortunately.

(*) I have jotted on your Amyce info. & his address. I'll write to him as well! Please let me know if you manage to contact each other.

(ii) Wonder if AMYAS LEIGH in "Westward Ho!"?

Lay Subsidy Rolls — they are not shown in the index to the "Essex" Collections in the Chelmsford Library so I shall try to contact the Record Office soon & see what's available. Thx.

An idle thought — Kingsley Amis & Martin Amis are two very well known British Authors, also I think there is a well known footballer called Amis. That's all for now. Kind regards to you both. Tim. Lobbs.

Nothing to add to Plume yet but I thought you would like to know I had a brief letter back from Mr Ames.

"... I shall be pleased to help if I can.
"I have some information about Roger "Amyce (Amys. Ames. Amis. Amias et al)
"of Wales & his immediate family,
"including a copy of his will. I also know
"about other prominent people named
"Amos etc who lived in Olde English
"Counties during (16.) ... I shall have "to ask my wife/edge for some details
"that could enable William Amos"
"to be traced in the records over here.

He doesn't have a great deal of Essex dates on Amys etc. So I shall try the Essex Record office & pass what I find on to him.

May I ask a favour please? In Minneapolis there are about 20 people called "Kipp". I'm pretty sure this is Dutch or German but could you please look in the Minn. Family History index (or whatever) of members interests & tell if anyone has/is researched/researching the name. My own interest is: KIPPS (ie with an 's') which is the English

Dear Tim,

I see that it was way back in May when I received your two letters about the Amos/Amyes family. Thank you for your information and assistance.

Mr. H. K. Amos of Herne Bay, Kent, wrote to me, and we have had several letters back and forth. So far he has been unable to help us find Elizabeth's ancestors in England, but his knowledge and information may yet be useful.

At about the same time I got some material from Mr. Victor Ekins, County Archivist at the Essex Record Office. (You probably know him.) Elizabeth had written to our friend, Sir John Ruggles-Brise, of Finchingfield. You may have mentioned that we met him when we were there in 1980. Elizabeth told him of her Amos ancestry and our discovery of the Roger Amyes family in Essex through the Eton College connection. She asked if he knew of any Amos or Amyes family there at the present time. Sir John apparently sent the letter on to Mr. Ekins, who sent us a list of the Amos/Amyes wills at the Essex Record Office and also an article about Broad Amys, son of Roger. I made copies of these and sent them to H. K. Amos for his records.

Now, regarding your Kipps family, I did some work on that a month or two ago, but I've been unable to report to you until now. First, I looked in a book of Ancestor charts published by the Minnesota Genealogical Society and found no Kipp or Kipps in the index. Then I checked the similar book of Ancestor charts published by the German Interest Group of the MGS, of which I am also a member. (My mother's parents were both born in Germany.) I did find there a Catharina Hjabe Kippe, born 24 June, 1767, in Germany, who is an ancestor of one of our members, Virginia Dragon. I called Miss Dragon and found that she knows nothing more about Catharine Kippe, except that she married her (Virginia's) ancestor, Hans Wenck. Therefore, I assumed that it would be of no value for you to write to her.

Next, I checked the Mormon "Four Generation Program, 1960-1976," at the local L.D.S. Branch Library. There were a few Kip entries from Germany, but no Kippe or Kipp entries of English or other non-German background.

Thirdly, I checked Two indexes at the Minneapolis Public Library. One is the American Genealogical-Biographical Index, Fremont Ridder, Ed., 1952-83 (about 50 volumes so far). I copied all the Kipp and Kipps entries, and I'm enclosing a copy. Of course, this is of no use without the Key and all the books referred to. So I copied from the Key the pertinent references to the entries for Kipps with an "s" and am enclosing this sheet. There may be a few of these books available at the Society of Genealogists in London. I know they have an American section or room. Now I find there are also many Kip entries in Ridder — 12 pages, in fact — but I'm not sending these to you at this point, though they may be relevant later.

I find that almost all of these books are available at the Minnesota Historical Society Library in our "twin city" of St. Paul, but I haven't had time to go there recently. What I really need to know is more about your Kippes relatives who came to America. I can then try to locate something that might pertain to them. I can also pursue the possibility of some present-day descendants in their area.

The other index I checked at the Minneapolis Public Library is the Newberry Library Genealogical Index. This is an amazing set of four large volumes begun by their cataloging department in 1896 and finished in 1918 in card form. In 1960 it was printed in book form and sold to libraries all over the country. I've copied two pages which include the Kip and Kipp entries. The only entry with an "s" on the end is a note under Kips to "see Kip," so we would have to check the Kip and Kipp references for any of your relatives. I know the copies are hard to read, but even the originals are blurred and indistinct in many places. However, I thought you would like to see just what this index includes. I find I can also get most of these books at our Minnesota Historical Society Library which has a marvelous collection on genealogy and local history for much of this country and England. When I know where and when your relatives lived in America, I can look up some of these references and see if they are relevant.

You wondered how such a good genealogy library as the Newberry got located in Illinois. Until recently, of course, Chicago was the second largest city in the country (Los Angeles is now), and it is a great cultural, as well as industrial, center. On one of the sheets in my file I find that the Newberry Library was established in 1887 through a bequest of Walter Loomis Newberry, a pioneer Chicago merchant who died in 1868. It is a free public reference library supported by the original bequest and by continuing private gifts and bequests. By agreement with the Chicago Public Library and with the John Crerar Library (a science library in Chicago), the Newberry Library specializes in the humanities, especially rare and research materials. It contains about one million books and four million manuscripts. They say they have one of the most complete collections of local history and genealogy in the country.

There are other indexes of people researching various family lines, but I haven't tried to pursue this for you yet. One such index is at The New England Historic Genealogical Society, 101 Newbury Street Boston, Massachusetts 02116. I have never tried to use their index of family researchers, but you might want to write to them.

My letters always seem to run to great lengths, but I hope you may find this information interesting and even a bit useful. Be sure to let me know more about your American Kipps relations.

Yours sincerely,

David (and Elizabeth)

He was of Great Yeldham, Essex. He owned much land in Great Yeldham, Little Yeldham, Toppersfield, Waller Belchamp, Bulmer, Castle Hedingham, Hedingham Sible, and Halsted in County Essex, and Clare and other parishes in Suffolk. He gave Spaynes and Butlers Manors and much other lands to Robert, the eldest son. He gave Yeldham Manor to Thomas and Hawkdon Hall in Suffolk to Edward.

Children of Robert and Elizabeth (Purcas) Plumb:

1. Margaret Plumb, b. abt. 1556; mar. Mr. Raye.
2. Robert Plumb, b. abt. 1558; d. 14 Aug. 1628; mar. abt. 1586, Grace Crackbone.

8. A son Plumb, b. abt. 1575; d. 27 May 1575.

Child of Robert and (Mrs. Etheldred Fuller) Plumb:

9. Joseph Plumb, b. 25 Feb. 1601/02; d. 29 May 1602.

3. Robert Plume, Gentleman, born about 1558; died 14 August 1628; married about 1586, Grace Crackbone, died 22 July 1615. He was of Spaynes Hall, Great Yeldham, Co. Essex. He was son of Robert and Elizabeth (Purcas) Plume. He was born, married and resided in Great Yeldham, County Essex.

CHILDREN OF ROBERT AND GRACE (CRACKBONE) PLUME:

1. ROBERT PLUME, b. 1587; d. 15 Oct. 1657; mar. 1616 (1) Frances Gausell; mar. (2) Honor Wolrich.
2. MARTHA PLUME, b. 20 March 1592/93; d. 25 April 1593.
3. JOHN PLUME, b. 28 July 1594; mar. abt. 1616, Dorothy.
4. THOMAS PLUME, b. abt. 1596; d. 7 Oct. 1599.
5. MARY PLUME, b. abt. 1598; d. 30 Nov. 1599.
6. ETHELRED PLUME, b. 1 April 1599; mar. Philip Sparrow.
7. FRANCES PLUME, b. 1 Nov. 1601; mar. John Uptcher.
8. HANNAH PLUME, b. 26 Aug. 1604; mar. William Sadlier.

4. JOHN PLUME, born 28 July 1594; died July 1648; married about 1616, Dorothy, died after 1669. He was born in Spaynes Hall, Great Yeldham Parish, resided after marriage in Ridgewell Hall, where he is reported by the visitation of Essex of 1634. In 1635 he is found in Wethersfield, Conn. He died in Branford, Conn., in July 1648. The only children known that survived him were: Robert, Samuel, and Dorcas. As no Dorcas found on the register it is to be assumed that she was born later than 1634, the last date he was known to be living at Ridgewell Hall. She must have been born in Wethersfield. John Plume appears on the Colonial records of Connecticut at a court held at Watertown (Wethersfield); 1636 is appointed an appraiser; 9 February 1637 Mr. Plume is a member of the Court; 8 March 1637 the business of this court was the appointment of persons to buy corn from the Indians as the people were in a starving condition; they were to pay 4, 5, and 6 shillings a bushel. Mr. Plume appointed to receive the corn for Wethersfield. He was a member of the court off and on and held various other offices till 1644. He was a candidate for Assistant 27 March 1643, but was defeated. On 5 February 1644/5, he was appointed to attend to the clearance of vessels at Wethersfield; on the 2nd day, 5th month, 1644 (which was July), he makes sale of land in Wethersfield and disappears from Wethersfield. He removed to Branford the same year 1644; he was probably one of the soldiers in Capt. Mason's little army of 77 men that marched, attacked, surprised and totally defeated the Pequots at Pequot Hill (in Groton afterwards) in 1637. Inventory was 1 August 1648.

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND DOROTHY PLUME:

1. ROBERT PLUME, b. 30 Dec. 1617; d. 12 May 1655; mar. 9 Jan. 1642, Mary Baldwin.
2. JOHN PLUME, JR., b. 27 May 1619; mar. Miss Banbury.

PRESTON

1. Adam Preston, of Giggleswick, Yorkshire, England; married 2 June 1583, Isabel Braithwhett (Braithwait).

Children of Adam and Isabel (Braithwait) Preston, bapt. at Giggleswick:

1. Margaret Preston, bapt. 24 Aug. 1583.
2. Thomas Preston, bapt. 20 Aug. 1585.
3. Janet Preston, bapt. 1 Sept. 1588.
4. Katherina Preston, bapt. 13 Aug. 1589.
5. William Preston, bapt. 28 Jan. 1590/91.
6. Richard Preston, bapt. 30 Sept. 1594.

2. William Preston, son of Adam and Isabel (Braithwait) Preston, baptised at Giggleswick, in Craven in Yorkshire, England, 28 January 1590/1. He settled as a young man in Chesham, County Bucks, where he married (1) 11 October 1613, Elizabeth Sale, and lived for over twenty years. After his wife's death and burial on 22 February 1633/34, he came with his second wife, Mary, and some of his children, on the "Truelove" in September 1635, his age being stated as 44. The will of William Preston of New Haven made 9 July 1647, was entered in the first volume of Vital Records (see New Haven Colony Records, Vol. 1, pp. 323-4).

Donald Lines Jacobus in the American Genealogist, vol. XIV, no. 2, pp. 134-5-6-7 says:

The will of William Preston of New Haven, made 9 July 1647, was entered in the first volume of Vital Records (see printed copy, Vol. 1, p. 104), and an excellent copy of it was published as a footnote in Hoadley's "New Haven Colony Records," Vol. 1, pp. 323-4. One clause reads: "I have an estate in Old England, and for part of my house and land and other goods given by my father to my elder brother and myself, wherein a feofment of law calling to councell and left in the hands of two foefees, namely, Mr. William Lawson and Mr. William

Dear Sirs:

I have been using the following microfilm at the Minneapolis Branch Library: Film #1032969, Item 3, "Ancestry and Descendants of Merlin Plumb," Vol. 1. My wife is a descendant of Merlin Plumb's brother, so she has the same ancestry as listed in this film.

Unfortunately, when the original family history was microfilmed, the notes and references on the back of many pages were not copied. We need this information to corroborate and expand the information.

I have identified the following sheets where information exists on the back, but there could be others: Pedigree Charts 10, 20, 22, 26, 28, 32, 37, 40, 47, 49, 52, 75, 83, 85, 86, 87.

Would the Genealogical Society arrange to film the material on the back of these pages and add the new frames to the present films for the use of patrons? It would seem that the microfilms are incomplete as they now stand.

In any event, I need this information and will pay for copies of what is on the back of the sheets. What is the quickest way to get this?

I note that the original microfilm was made at the Mesa Arizona Genealogical Library, so I suppose the additional information will have to be secured there.

Thank you very much for your attention to my request.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

In looking at the film, I must agree that there is some information that is missing. However, we do not have the original material in our library. You may be able to get copies of the backs of the sheets you desire by writing to the Mesa Arizona Genealogical Library.

I am sorry that I am unable to help you further.

I hope this information will help you, and I wish you success.

Dear Mr. Witheridge,

Your letter of Sep 25, 1984 concerning information on the backs of pedigree charts of the ancesters of Merlin Plumb has been assigned to me. I am not only a volunteer worker at the Mesa Genealogy Ligrary but also a direct descendant of Merlin Plumb. He is my great grandfather.

Unfortunately the original record from which micro film #1032969 was taken is no longer part of the Mesa Library holdings. But, Edith Thatcher the genealogist of the above record is still alive. She is in her 80's. I visited her and found she has done considerable research since that particular record was micro filmed. She has also rearranged her book so the older page numbers no longer apply.

I put on the film and recorded some of the names on the sheets you had numbered. Then I found those names in Edith's current book and ran a zerox copy, front and back. Some sheets of film # 1032969 seemed to have extended the lines on the back when there was only one or two more names. I tried to find those particular sheets and send you the extended lines.

Edith's book now contains 333 pedigree sheets plus 15 sheets of index and explanation. Many are nobility. All are direct ancesters of Merlin Plumb. If you are interested I can have the whole book, minus the sheets I am sending now, zeroxed for you at 7¢ per sheet. There would be UPS postage in addition. Let me know if you are interested. It is a very impressive book of genealogy and has many notes showing sources.

If you extend any of the lines in your research I'd be very interested in your results and would expect to reinburse you for any expense.

This year I am concentrating my efforts on histories and pictures. Does your wife have any pictures of Merlin Plumb, his family, or his ancesters?

Sincerely,

Theda P. Adams

Dear "Cousin Sheila":

My wife Elizabeth and I were very happy to receive your letter of October 4th with the 38 sheets you Xeroxed from Edith Hatcher's last edition of her book on Marlin Plumb's ancestors.

We were especially intrigued to discover that you are the great granddaughter of Marlin Plumb. We assume you mean the one who was born 14 Aug. 1826, and not his father, who was also Marlin Plumb. Elizabeth is the great-great granddaughter of Corydon Plumb, who was the brother of the elder Marlin and uncle of your great grandfather Marlin; so I figure that you and Elizabeth are fourth cousins.

Yes, we do want a copy of the complete book and would be very grateful if you would Xerox the pages you have not already sent, including any notes on the backs of the pages. If you can tell me what the total cost will be, including shipping charge, I will send you a check in advance. Otherwise, I'll send a check when I get your statement. (Enclosed is $2.14 in stamps for what I owe you on the last deal.)

The original book contained a large section of family group sheets following the pedigree charts. Are these no longer included in the revised edition? I copied a number of these by hand from the original film and would be interested in having them all if available.

We do have some other material on the Plumb ancestors and will tell you about this in another letter, but I wanted to get this letter off to acknowledge the photocopies you sent and to order the rest of the book. I'll also tell you more about us when I write again.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Whitridge

Dear cousins David and Elizabeth,

What fun to find two more cousins. In my younger years my times of greatest fun was when cousins came to visit. Lately I have gotten so involved with my own family of 9 children and now 30 grandchildren that even those cousins living in Mesa are seldom seen. Two weeks ago we decided to have a cousins party. Only 6 were able to come but many of the others expressed great interest and with more notice will make the next party. We've decided to make this an annual event. We will probably have the next party in the spring. You will receive notice.

I'd love to know more about both of you. As an exchange of information here is a brief sketch of myself. I am the oldest of 8 children, 2 girls and 6 boys. Both my parents and all grandparents are dead. I am 63 and my husband, Louis J. Adams, is 76. We have been married 25 years. Both of us were married previously to mates that died. I brought 6 children to the marriage and Louis brought 3 children to our marriage. We have been able to combined our families into one big, loving, homogenous group. Two of our children married mates with children to add to the confusion. We accept and love all the grandchildren, and now great-grandchildren are coming, without worrying about the exact relationship.

Louis taught vocational Agriculture in high school in Utah. He decided to come to Arizona and became manager and part owner of a dairy and farming operation. They had about 700 head of cows, dairy and beef. When I first met him after his wife had died he was running the dairy.

I grew up in Arizona, graduated from the U of A in civil engineering. My children's father received his M.D. from Northwestern University. He had been practicing only a year when he was killed in a car accident.

Three of our nine children are not married. The son, age 36 , lives with us. One daughter age 32 lives in New York City and one daughter age 34 lives in Los Angeles. Four of our married children live in this valley so we enjoy many grandchildren.

Of our nine children eight are college graduates and one is a bricklayer. I think you would call us middle class America. We have three Democrats and 8 Republicans. All of us are very opinionated when it comes to politics and we have some loud discussions. We who are Republicans are riding high this year. Regardless of party we all feel very blessed to live in this great land.

We are all active Mormons but know there is much truth in most churches. We respect others beliefs and I personally am impressed with the good done by friends who are members of other churches.

I guess that covers the most important things of life, family, church and politics.

Edith will be out of town until after Christmas. I am sure there are family group sheets to accompany the pedigree charts. I will get them when she returns and make you a copy.

Sincerely

In reading this it sounds like quite a large sheet - we have problems too but they aren't very big. Let me hear about you —

Dear Stella,

The "book" arrived safely, and we are very happy to have it all. There is so much to study and analyze and comment upon that I simply cannot do justice to it at this time. I note that there are also some unfinished questions from your first letter to deal with. These I shall have to discuss later because Elizabeth and I are already involved in Christmas shopping and the writing of cards.

I do want to send you this check immediately. However, you didn't have the shipping charge, and there was nothing on the outside of the box to indicate what this was; so I'll have to send that later when you let me know.

I will tell you briefly that Elizabeth and I grew up in Saginaw, Michigan, where we were both members of the same Baptist church. She was a kindergarten teacher, having graduated from Central Michigan University. I started out as a heating and ventilating engineer, graduating from the University of Michigan. After four years as an engineer I decided to enter the ministry and attended Colgate Rochester Divinity School in Rochester, New York. We were married just before my senior year, and Elizabeth also took Old Testament and New Testament courses during that year.

Then we spent six happy years in Chicago, where I obtained a master's degree in church history at the University of Chicago Divinity School and served as the assistant minister of the Hyde Park Baptist Church. After three years as pastor of a Baptist church in Wyanga, Illinois, I came to Minneapolis as executive director of the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches, continuing in that position for 29 years until I retired at the end of 1974.

I am now 70 years old, and Elizabeth is 71.

After we married in Minneapolis, Elizabeth began writing stories. She is the author of seven books for children and young people, three published by Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company. Lately she has been doing a lot of speaking engagements in the schools about the writing of books.

We have two sons: Jim, who is 38 this month and is married. He works in a store in Minneapolis and lives in an apartment about four blocks from us, so we see him every couple of weeks. Tom will be 37 tomorrow, but has no children. He lives in Chicago and is a psychiatric social worker. He and his wife both work for Thresholds, a psychiatric rehabilitation program, and they are both working on their Ph.D.s at Northwestern University.

I'm sorry to have to tell you that we all voted for Mondale! (You might have guessed that, since Minnesota was the only state that went for him.) As a matter of fact, the Mondale family lived in our block just four houses from us when he was Attorney General of Minnesota; and they still are members of the church we attend. (It is a merger of Presbyterian and Baptist churches.)

Now I will just say Merry Christmas and a happy New Year. When (or if) things quiet down after the first of the year I'll write again with more about the Blunk family and ancestry.

Yours sincerely,

David & Elizabeth Witteridge

P.S. – Over

P.S. I notice that you mention copying the family group sheets that accompany the pedigree charts and sending them to me. I should say that I would only be interested in the family group sheets that apply to Caleb Plumb and Eleanor Welch and their ancestors (#24 and #25 on chart #1), as the others are not ancestors of Elizabeth. I realize this greatly complicates the process, so you may not want to undertake it. Please let me know.

D.E.W.

Apologies for the illegibity on the previous page. To make DEW's faint writing legible, I had to use the darkest setting on my printer — but that made page 3 show through!

Dear Theda,

I know you have been very busy, especially during the holiday season, with many family and church activities, so I haven't really expected a letter from you. But I have noticed each month as I have reconciled my checking account that the check I sent in payment for the Merlin Plumb "book" has not been returned. (At least, it hadn't been when the last statement was made out.) So I am wondering if perchance my letter of December 8th went astray and the $24.22 check with it. Please let me know.

I have been deeply involved recently in pursuing some of the family lines that have come to light in the Merlin Plumb book. In particular I had ordered from Salt Lake City a microfilm of the 3-vol. History of Cheshire, by George Ormerod, which deals with many of the early families. Unfortunately, I found that the machine in our local branch library for making copies of pages from microfilms is very inadequate. It isn't only that they come out in reverse--white on black--but we can't get a good sharp focus over the entire page, which is most disconcerting.

It so happened that at our January meeting of the English Interest Group of the Minnesota Genealogical Society someone mentioned that the Minneapolis Public Library has this 3-vol. history, and I could hardly believe it. Sure enough, I have used it several times and have had many pages copied (black on white) by the library duplicating service. This enables me to expand much of the information contained in Edith Thatcher's book. Some of the lines I've been working on are Cholmondeley, Despenser, Brereton, Egerton, Vernon, Mainwaring, Norton, Bulkeley, and so on.

One of the other relationships I have pinned down is how Elizabeth is related to President John Quincy Adams, as you also are, through your common ancestor, William Norton, who married Dionise Cholmeley in 1583. Elizabeth is his 6th cousin four times removed. By the way, is your husband also related to this Adams family?

But I can't go on further today. I mainly wanted to be sure you got my last letter with its check. I look forward to getting either a note from you or the canceled check!

Yours sincerely,

David

Dear David,

I am embarrassed about the check. I put your letter aside thinking I would answer it when I had the genealogy sheets ready and forgot to take the check out. I cashed it yesterday.

It has been rather a time consuming project to get the family group sheets. Edith loaned me two of her books and to date I have only managed to copy sheets from one book. Our library is filled to capacity this time of year with all the winter visitors spending their time there. We welcome their presence but cannot expect to tie up the copy machines for any length of time.

I've made a list of the family sheets you want from the pedigree chart and will send them along to you as I get copies made.

I hope you enjoy my water melon paper. Water melon happens to be my favorite food on the face of the earth. So, every birthday, or other occasion for gifts someone gives me something with water melons. I get very amused as the years go by to see what the children and grandchildren can come up with.

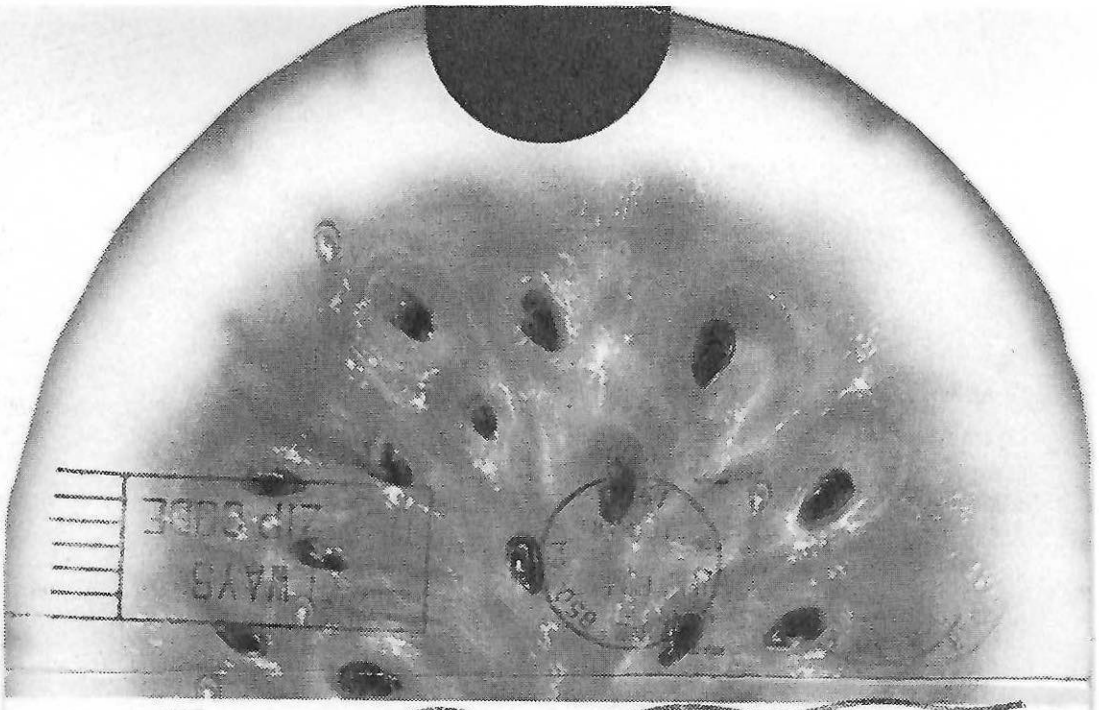
If you are able to extend any of our lines I am very interested in copies and will reinburse you for cost of copies and postage.

Louis' great grandfather, William Adams came directly from Ireland in the 1830's. He does not tie into the John Quincy Adams line. It is nice when one ties into someone famous because there is usually many sources from which to gain information.

I wish I could send you some of our weather. A little rain last week but today is beautifully sunny and 72°. All the trees are in bloom and the grass is green. We have flowers blooming everywhere. I can see why thousands of people come here to spend Jan - April. Of course we permnant residents have 118° weather through July and August. That is not fun - I hate the heat.

Sorry again about the check,

Sincerely,



Theda P. Adams

Dear Theda,

Thank you for your letter of March 16th. I certainly understand your losing my check in your genealogical materials. I have so much coming and going all the time that I am usually weeks or months behind in everything. No matter what I do, I have little piles here and there that I have to get back to. Finding Edith Thatcher's book constituted a major explosion in my information on the Plumb ancestors and relatives and greatly expanded my work waiting to be done.

What I am writing about today is the interesting relationship I have discovered between my family and the family of Edith Thatcher's husband back in Combe Martin and Berrynarbor, Devon. As you can see on the enclosed family group sheets, Marion Plumb Thatcher's grandmother, Prudence Harding Thomas, had a sister Matilda, who married Edwin Witheridge, a brother of my great grandfather, John Witheridge. So, although we are not directly related, our ancestors were closely related by marriage back in Dexon. It's a small world!

As a matter of fact, my Witheridge ancestors lived over 300 years in the two small towns of Berrynarbor and Combe Martin, which are only two or three miles apart on the Bristol Channel. My Witheridge line goes back to about 1500. I have an amazing amount of material on the families of those towns. I have identified 19 family lines there from which I am descended, and 113 other families into which they married. So I am probably related directly or by marriage to almost everyone whose ancestors lived in Berrynarbor and Combe Martin for many generations. Unfortunately, the LDS has not microfilmed either the Parish Register or the Bishop's Transcript for Combe Martin, so I have been greatly hampered in that respect.

I have information on a number of Thomases, Hardings, and Drapers there, but so far have not been able to extend the information on the James Thomas-Mary Harding family beyond what is on this sheet. Perhaps Edith has more. I, of course, have not seen her family group sheet on this family.

Would you please give these Xeroxed sheets to Edith, along with this letter or a copy of it? I think she will enjoy finding someone with ancestors from the same place her husband's family came from. If she has anything further on this line, I'd be very happy to receive it. After I see what she has, I may well have other pertinent data among all my materials on Berrynarbor and Combe Martin. I hope she will be able to write me some day about this connection.

I'm sorry I haven't had time to sort out and send the information I have that goes beyond the Merlin Plumb book, but some day I promise to do so.

The best of everything to you and your family.

Sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Theda,

Thank you very much for sending the family group sheets. I wanted to let you know right away that they arrived safely, and I also wanted to send the enclosed check.

When these new pages arrived, we had just returned from a two-week trip over to Michigan and then up into Canada at Sault Ste. Marie and across to Winnipeg, which is just north of Minnesota.

Now that we're getting settled again and caught up after our trip, I'll be going over the sheets and comparing them with what I have. Then I'll be writing you again. Thanks again for all you have done for us.

Sincerely,
David & Elizabeth

Dear Theda,

It's hard to believe that my last letter to you--actually just a note--was written last June. It certainly sounded then as though I'd be writing another, much longer letter very soon. Well, I guess I did warn you that I'm often months behind in my correspondence. As I said before, this Merlin Plumb discovery amounted to a major explosion in my genealogical material--a quantum leap, you might say. Since receiving it, I've been going off in many directions at the same time trying to clarify and corroborate the material.

However, this is just one part of my wife's ancestry. At the same time I have her other lines and many of my own to struggle with. For example, a Witheridge relative of mine in England sent me a death notice from a London newspaper reporting the death of a Thomas Witheridge Gubb in Capetown, South Africa. Through the Capetown Public Library I got in touch with the family and discovered that their ancestors did indeed come from the very same town in Devon that my family (and Marion Plumb Thatcher's Thomas and Harding families) came from--Combe Martin. At one point they were wealthy owners of ships that plied back and forth between England and South Africa and had hired a genealogist to develop a pedigree, which he entitled, "Pedigree of Witheridge, of Berry Narbor and Combe Martin in North Devon, Shewing descent of Gubb Family from the same."

You can imagine my excitement to get that and start checking it against my own records. I discovered that it tied right back into what I had figured out from the parish registers, but it added much from wills that are now unavailable, having been destroyed by the bombing of Exeter Cathedral during World War II. Combining his material with mine, I drew up a new and expanded chart. All of this took many weeks of my time, of course.

Then I had another big project. Blackmore is another of my Combe Martin lines. One of my aunts reported that our family was somehow related to R. D. Blackmore, the author of Lorna Doone, who also stemmed from that part of Devon. Through the Devon Family History Society I had been in touch with a number of others whose Blackmore lines were also supposed to be tied into R. D. Blackmore's, but nobody could seem to make the connection. Then several months ago I received a letter from a woman in England whom I had last written to a whole year earlier! (I'm apparently not the only one who does this.) She sent the records of all the Blackmore baptisms, marriages, and burials from the Kentisbury and Parracombe parish registers, and that started me going again on that project. Putting those parish records together with about a dozen wills that had been sent to me by another relative, I was able to construct a pedigree chart that shows that I do indeed come from the same Blackmore family as R. D. Blackmore. But, of course, that too took several weeks. And so it went.

I won't bore you with all the other versions I have had from the Merlin Plumb materials, but I thought you'd be interested in those two. All the time, nevertheless, I have been working hard on seeking more information about the ancestral families laid out in Edith Thatcher's book. We have three excellent libraries here with extensive genealogical collections: the University of Minnesota, the Minnesota Historical Society, and the Minneapolis Public Library. Every few weeks I spend a day at one of these or at the L.D.S. Branch Library, and I have made photocopies of much of the pertinent material. Elizabeth and I both enjoy reading about the lives and experiences of these people mentioned on the pedigree charts. This brings them to life for us and gives us an intense interest in history and current events in many parts of the globe. We know this must be true for you, too.

Now let me turn to the batch of materials I'm enclosing with this letter. Elizabeth and I hope you will enjoy having and reading these articles about some of your ancestors and hers. I'll go through them one by one.

The first is a complete copy of a little book, The Bridge on the Wepawaug, which we bought several years ago when we visited Milford, Conn., where the Plumb and Baldwin families settled. It was quite a thrill to be there and to see the bridge with its memorial stones and fascinating history. In this and all the other materials I am sending, I have underlined your direct ancestors (and Elizabeth's) in red, as far as I can determine.

Next are some sections from The Hickok Genealogy, by Charles Nelson Hickok, dealing specifically with your ancestral lines. These articles are self-explanatory; and, although they may not contain much that you do not have, they lay it out in a clear fashion.

I'm sending a portion of the Ordnance Survey map that shows the part of Buckinghamshire where the Baldwin family originated. Dundridge Manor is practically in the middle of the sheet near St. Leonards.

Next is some material about the Baldwins from the New England Historical and Genealogical Register: a long article from 1868 and a short one from 1959. I notice that the more recent article gives a different beginning to the "known" ancestry than Edith does. She says that the father and grandfather of the Richard Baldwin who married Ellen Apuke were William (or Richard) Baldwin (b. ca. 1472) and William Baldwin (b. ca. 1445) respectively. The author of the 1959 article gives Robert Baldwyn as the father of the Richard Baldwin who married Ellen Apuke. He does not know who was the father of Robert Baldwyn, but he gives information about other Baldwyns who were probably at least relatives back to about 1300.

Then there is a single sheet giving a short Norton pedigree from the Visitation of London, 1633-5. This is followed by a pedigree showing the Delverge and Wingate ancestry of this Norton family as given in the Visitations of Bedfordshire, 1566, 1582, and 1634.

Next are two articles about the Cholmondeley family. (You are probably aware that this is pronounced "Chumley.") One is from Collins's Peerage of England, by Sir Egerton Brydges, and the other is from The History of Cheshire, by George Ormerod. Only a few of these Cholmondeleys are your ancestors, but the rest are relatives, of course.

The other three documents are about the Earls of Chester and are from George Ormerod's History of Chester, Vol. 1. As shown on p. 50, the Cholmondeleys tied in through Felice, the natural (illeg.) daughter of Randle de Blundeville. This means that the father of Felice--Randle de Blundeville (#6 on Pedigree Chart #29)--was the son of Hugh II Kevelioc, who should thus be listed as #12 on Chart 29, and his ancestry be continued as that of #2 on Chart 122.

Another place where your line ties into the Earls of Chester is through Hugh II Kevelioc's daughter Maud, who married David, Earl of Huntingdon, as shown on Chart 38. A third connection is through Hugh II Kevelioc's daughter Agnes, who married William de Ferrers, as shown on Chart 140. This all gets very complex, as you can see. I'm sure there are some discrepancies and uncertainties that I have not yet tried to work on.

Well, that's all I have to send you right now. I hope these items about your ancestors are of interest to you, even though they don't include very much in terms of extending the lines beyond what you already had. I have a great many other items, but I haven't had time to go through them and decide what might be of interest or use to you. If you should prefer not to receive the type of things I'm sending, please let me know, and I'll only send specific extensions of family information beyond what's included in Edith's book.

I was interested to learn that your mother and grandmother were really the ones who started the Plumb family research that Edith later developed into the Merlin Plumb book. I can understand now why you and Edith have such a close relationship. Elizabeth and I will always be grateful for the gracious help you and she are giving us in our family search.

As I read your letters, I assume that you do not have a complete copy of Edith's Merlin Plumb books at your house. You probably have your own compilation of your Plumb ancestry and relatives, and I wonder if you would tell me what form this takes.

Another question I had was whether or not you have a complete copy of the H. B. Plumb book, The Plumbs, 1893. The only reference I find to it is incidentally in one of Edith's introductory pages. I first saw this at the Case Western Reserve Library at Cleveland. Later I found that they had a copy at our Minnesota Historical Society Library, and I had them Xerox the whole thing for us. Your Plumb information back into Essex seems to be based on that book; but, of course, the book covers much more and includes more detail.

About our family situation, the news is that we have just become grandparents. Tom and Virginia in Chicago have presented us with a grandson, David Ash Witheridge, born on February 25. However, he had to be delivered two months early, because Virginia was suffering from pre-eclampsia with high blood pressure and related symptoms. They have moved him to Children's Hospital with the most excellent care available, so we have confidence that he will do very well, and all systems are "go" at this time. Virginia is also doing as well as could be expected. But it was quite a surprise to all of us to have it happen so suddenly.

Our health during the winter hasn't been too bad--just a few colds. The weather has been severe, but it could have been worse. Now we are ready for spring. Although I haven't written for a long time, we think and speak of you often.

Sincerely,

P.S. We can now make copies for only 5¢ each, so at 99 sheets this comes to ~~$4.95~~. You can get the postage amount from the envelope. ($2.40)

Dear David and Elizabeth,

Your letter and all the exciting material came last week. We had company through the week so I laid it aside until I had time to do justice to a reply. You sent the very type of materials I am interested in obtaining.

For years we have had large books of names and dates but none of the people ment much to us. We have interesting histories of the ancesters who joined the Mormon Church and participated in the treck west. One ancester,Lewis Barney, came west in the first company with Brigham Young. Lewis kept a very interesting journal of the treck west. It is almost like reading a wild west novel-runaway horses, Indians, etc.

I have always wanted to know more of the first settlers in America and of the families in England. Any histories of people, communities or wills, land grants, etc pertaining to our people I would love to have. And I appreciate the time it takes you to sort them out and make copies.

Let me give you a little history of my grandmother and mother. My mothers' mother, Cynthia Deliah Barney did not attend high school. She had three daughters and one son, my mother Ada Barney was the youngest daughter. Mamma and her sisters were able to go to high school. They were poor people living on a substandard farm in SE Arizona. My grandparents moved to another substandard farm in western Utah. My mother remained in Arizona and married my father. This was in 1918.

My father was the oldest of a family of 6. Because my grandfather broke his back in a fall from the roof of a house Daddy became the sole support of the family when he was 12. Daddy was a hard working, strickly honest, very patriotic man.

I am sure you are aware that genealogy is important to members of the Mormon Church. We believe it is important for everyone to be baptized and thus we identify as many people as possible and do the baptism for them in our temples.

My parents and grandparents on my mothers side, all being faithful Mormons right after world war I began accumulating genealogy and going to the temples for the baptisms. My growing up days are filled with knowing that Thursdays my mother did nothing but cook the meals. The rest of the time she was copying genealogy. She and my father were the head of the genealogy for our church in Southern Arizona for many years.

Twice during the 1920's I can remember my mother taking us on the long trip, three days, to our grandparents farm. We would camp out along the way. Once Dad drove us up and then went home by bus. In six weeks he came again to drive us back to Arizona Another time he sent his youngest brother , who was in his 20's, to take care of us.

The trips to Utah were primarily to allow my mother and her sisters and mother to compare genealogy records and copy from each other. Remember in those days zerox was not yet invented. They worked on the Barney lines, my fathers , the Plumbs, lines and my aunts husbands lines. We children got acquainted with our cousins, aunts and uncles and had one great time.

My grandmother died in the 30's. My mother and her oldest sister continued in genealogy. The others lost interest.

I am giving you all this family history so you will understand a little of why we have few histories, no notes on sourses or bibliographies. Those sweet women once they had satisfied their own questions concerning a person, dates, etc. did not see the necessity of keeping notes on their searches, or the sources. Sometimes they noted the source, rather like an afterthought. Their main object was to identify people and get them baptized.

As other people have worked with the records, my sister, Edith Thatcher, and others all have been impressed with the validity of the original work. Seldom has a correction been necessary. When you consider my mother, aunts and grandmother lived in little towns without even a library; their finances were limited; and their education minimal; the records are a wonder.

You are in reality an answer to my hopes for pertinent information about localities and lives of my ancesters.

Now to answer other questions in your letter. I do not have Edith's books at my home. Although I have known her slightly through the years I was very surprised when she let me take the pedigree charts and family group sheets and copy them. She said I was the only person she has lent her books. She has a large book case of records. I do not know exactly what it contains. But I believe she too has not been too interested in histories.

We have a copy of the H.B. Plumb book, The Plumbs, 1893. Our copy has been used a great deal and is evidently about 50 years old. The first four pages and the last page are no longer complete. I have zeroxed what I have but would appreciate getting a copy of the complete pages listed below:I need both sides-

1-The Reason Why, Personal Explanation
2. A Statement of 1891
3. Some Connecticut History
4. Ancient Plumbs - England
5. Index -To the wives and husbands of Plumbs by their number on the American List of Plumbs

I am sorry not to be able to send you anything new at this time. I am sending the $7.35 which seems a small amount for the material you send. Thank you very much for your effort.

My life this past year has been mainly concerned with family. We bought a summer home in the mountains 2 1/2 hours from Mesa. It is 7700 foot elev and cool all summer. The first part of the summer we spent equiping that home and being lazy up there.

Then two new grandchildren came and my husband got ill. The grandchildren, both boys, are doing great and real little charmers.

My husband, who is 77, from August on did not feel his usual self. He has had some heart problems for years and we regularily go to a cardiologist. He continued feeling not sick but not well. Louis is a slim, very energetic man. This loss of energy and shortness of breath was a great concern. Finally the week before Christmas they determined the only solution was open-heart surgery, to replace a valve. Interestingly the tests showed the arteries were all clear as could be. Our doctor, a man in his 40's , said he'd never seen such good arteries. Some good news in the otherwise worrying news.

The operation was a success. Louis does not require oxgyen but still has not regained his stamina. I am like the mother hen continually acting as a buffer between him and outside sources who require more from him than he is physicaly able to give. He looks good and members of the library and clubs he belongs to do not understand his endurance is still about 25% of normal. Our family was a great support and continue to be.

My prayers are with you and your grandson. Special children are send to so many families in these the last days. I know your religious background gives you much to hang on to in times of stress. Don't you wonder how non-religious people ever manage? I pray that by now all is well with both Virginia and David.

Sincerely,

J Ikeda

Dear Theda,

Before I get into genealogy, I want to begin with some family matters. We were sorry to read about Louis's illness and heart surgery last year, and we hope he is much better now. Your new place in the mountains undoubtedly helped a lot to keep all of you well and happy.

Unfortunately, we have some sad news to convey. Our little grandson who was born two months early last February lived only 18 days. In spite of the excellent care he received, he never did gain enough strength to be removed from the "ventilator." He just started out too small and with so many things wrong from the beginning. It was a difficult time for all of us. However, the doctors tell Virginia there is no reason why another pregnancy won't be perfectly normal, so they will try again.

On the brighter side, just before Thanksgiving Tom finished all the requirements for his Ph.D. degree. Within a month Virginia also expects to complete hers. Then their lives will be more normal and relaxed.

Except for occasional colds, Elizabeth and I have had reasonably good health during the past year. Life has been hectic because we have had a great many unexpected house repairs, and the street in front of our house was torn up all summer for a paving job that extended seven blocks in one direction and four blocks in the other.

This has been an amazing winter here--hardly any snow at all, and many weeks of above normal temperatures. Now we hear that the coming month will also be above normal, but March is often our heaviest month for snow, so who knows?

Now to turn to genealogy and this mass of material that must have amazed you when it arrived. What started me on this letter was a picture postcard from a distant cousin of mine who lives in the far north of Wales. It showed Ruthin Castle as it looked back in 1830, and I decided to send you a copy because of the ancestors you and Elizabeth share--the Lords Grey of Ruthin. I also copied an excellent article for you on the Parish of Ruthin, including the castle and the church.

However, I wanted to discuss this connection of your Norton line to the Greys, and I know my materials were not yet well organized and documented, so I had to do what I thought was "a little work" on them. This turned out instead to be a major project that took several weeks.

In the process I have completed all my family group sheets on the Nortons, from the beginning down to the connection with the Plumbs. I decided to send you a copy of the complete set, including the sources and footnotes on the back of each sheet. This is the only way that you and Edith can properly compare what I have with your records. At this point I won't try to explain my arrangement of sheets or my numbering system, but if you want or need further information, please let me know.

Literally for years I have been trying, off and on, to verify the connection of the Nortons to the Greys through Maude Grey, the daughter of the Lord Grey of Ruthin. Several of the published records say "Maude, dau. of John, second Lord Grey of Ruthin (or Wilton) and Anne Ferrers." But none of the early records (mostly Visitations) give first names. They usually say only "dau. of the Lord Grey of Ruthin." The only one I have found with a first name is the Visitation of Buckinghamshire, which says "Anne da. of. . . Lord Gray of Ruthin."

On my own I had concluded that the John Grey (2nd Lord Grey of Wilton) who married Anne Ferrers could not have been the father of the woman who married Sir John Norton, because of a discrepancy in dates. The John Grey who married Anne Ferrers died in 1323, and the John Norton who married a Grey would have been born about 1410.

At the Minnesota Historical Society Library I was fortunate to find a copy of the American Genealogist article referred to by Edith as one that disagreed with the Maude Grey-John Grey-Anne Ferrers connection mentioned above. I found that the author's conclusion was based on the same fact as mine--about 100 years difference in time. I'm enclosing a copy of this article and two others by the same author, Herbert F. Geversmith, in the American Genealogist.

At this point I believe that Sir John Norton married Anne Grey about 1434, and that Anne Grey was the daughter of the man who was Lord Grey of Ruthin at the time of her birth (about 1410). This would have been Reginald (Reynold), 3rd Lord Grey of Ruthin. So far I haven't found any record of an Anne who was his daughter, so I'm still looking! In Geversmith's articles mentioned above he quotes a Harleian Manuscript that shows a John Norton of Battle, Sussex, who married a daughter of the Lord Grey of Ruthin. So there seems to be no doubt that such a marriage occurred, but which Lord Grey of Ruthin was it?

The ancestry of the Lords Grey of Ruthin goes back through the Lords Grey of Wilton to Henry de Grey of Thurrock, Essex, in 1194, as shown in several of the enclosed documents. These documents carry the Grey line back much farther than recorded in Edith Thatcher's Merlin Plumb book, though the exact connection, as I said, is not confirmed at this point.

I should point out that the large work (about a dozen volumes), The Complete Peerage (Rev. 1959), by G. E. Cokayne, is considered perhaps the most authoritative work on all the English lords from the beginning to recent times. You can tell that by the wealth of footnotes and careful documentation. I have access to it at the University of Minnesota Library.

Regarding another uncertainty--the father and ancestral line of Dionise Cholmeley, who married William Norton in 1583--I also show a difference from the record in the Merlin Plumb book. The Visitation of London merely says, "da. of _____ Cholmondley," whereas the Visitation of Buckinghamshire says, "Dionise da. of Hen. sister to Sir Hen. Cholmley of Cogles (in co.) Ld. Knight.2 So I am going with the one with greater detail and am trying to track down the records of Sir Henry Cholmley and his family. So far I have not been able to identify the documentation for the John Cholmeley given by Edith as the father of Dionise, and I would appreciate receiving more information on this. Similarly,

I'd like to know the source of the information that Isabel Hare was the mother of Dionise.

The most perplexing matter I've had to deal with, however, is the ancestry of John Norton of Branford, the father of Elizabeth Norton who married John Plumb. I haven't seen any information or documentation to prove that he was the John Norton who was baptized June 5, 1628, in St Michael's, Cornhill, London, the son of Richard Norton and Ellen Rowley. The whole pedigree for you and Elizabeth in England, of course, depends upon proving that connection (or another connection to the Sharpenhoe Nortons).

The parchment pedigree brought over from England was in the hands of the descendants of William Norton of Ipswich, son of William Norton and Alice Bowmest (Bonus). This William's connection with that family is corroborated by the name of his son (Bonus Norton) and by the mention of a brother Thomas living in London in the will of William's brother, Rev. John Norton of Ipswich and Boston.

Nowhere, however, does the parchment pedigree or the information about it by W. H. Whitmore in the New England Historical and Genealogical Quarterly specifically tie in John Norton of Branford to this pedigree. There are two articles about this John Norton as an ancestor of L.D.S. Pres. Wilford Woodruff in the Utah Genealogical and Historical Magazine (Vol. 22, 1931, pp. 81-85; Vol. 24, 1933, pp. 186-190). These articles seem to have only two 20th century genealogies as their source for the statement that he was the son of Richard Norton and Ellen Rowley: (1) Walter N. Norton, Some Descendants of John Norton of Branford, 1909; and (2) Bassett-Preston Ancestry, p. 203.

I haven't seen the latter reference, but the book by Walter Norton merely states that John Norton of Branford was the third son of Richard Norton and Ellen Rowley without giving the source of that information. When Walter Norton wrote that in 1909, he thought John of Branford was born about 1622. He also thought that John arrived in New England about 1645, which would have made him about 23 years old at that time. However, John, the son of Richard Norton and Ellen Rowley was baptized June 5, 1628, which would have made him only 17 when he arrived. At the age of 18 he would have been married, had his first child Elizabeth, and purchased land in Branford as one of the proprietors.

For two reasons, however, I've decided that this 17-year-old John could have been the John of Branford. For one thing, John of Branford lived until Nov. 5, 1709, at which time he would have been 81 years old, an advanced age for those days. The other bit of evidence of at least a possible relationship is in the will of Mary, the widow of the Rev. John Norton of Boston. She mentions a "cousin John Norton," who could have been John of Branford, as no other cousin John appears in records I have seen.

Before it is certain that John of Branford was the son of Richard and Ellen, more conclusive evidence must be found, such as the will of Richard or some other relative, a contemporary legal document or court record, or some other contemporary record. I hope you can help in this regard. Because John Norton of Branford is also an ancestor of Pres. Wilford Woodruff, I feel sure that others in the Mormon Church have done considerably more work on this Norton line since the articles appeared in 1931 and 1933. A request from you for such information would certainly get more attention than a similar request from me. The whole English ancestry of both Merlin Plumb and Pres. Wilford Woodruff depends on the documentation of this connection, so I hope you can get some assistance from Salt Lake City.

Now I'll mention the other items I'm sending. You will see that I've made a copy of the article by Archibald F. Bennett on "The Lineage of Wilford Woodruff" from the Utah Gen. and Hist. Mag., and the accompanying pedigree, in case you don't have these. I have also copied the pages from H. B. Plumb's book you asked for.

Because of their prominence in English history, I'm sending copies of some Norton biographical sketches: Thomas Norton, Robert Norton, and Rev. John Norton from the Dictionary of National Biography; and Thomas Norton from R. E. Chester Waters' book on the family of Chester of Chicheley. I've already mentioned the Visitation of Buckinghamshire; I'm also sending a short Norton pedigree from the Visitation of Bedfordshire.

I'm sending several things on the Adams family, assuming that John Norton of Branford is the son of Richard and Ellen Norton, which is all we can do at this point. The little longhand sketch shows how Pres. John Quincy Adams, Merlin Plumb, and Pres. Wilford Woodruff all are related through William Norton of Charsenhoe. There is also a chart showing how Elizabeth is related to John Quincy Adams. Then I came across a series of encyclopedia articles on the Adams family that give interesting information on them and show how they are related. I've highlighted the ones who are your relatives.

Then there are four articles that purportedly show the ancestry of John Quincy Adams (and yours) back through Saire de Quincy and Charlemagne to many royal lines. I copied and underlined these before I became convinced that the ancestry through Maude de Grey and Anne de Ferrers is incorrect, but I am sending them along anyway for you to do with what you will.

Finally, I have copied the large pages from The Treasure Houses of Britain. I wish I could have copied them in color. This book is very beautiful, and I hope you can see it some time. About a year ago there was an exhibition at the National Gallery of Art consisting of hundreds of paintings and other works of art brought together from castles, country homes, manor houses, and so on from throughout Britain. This is the so-called catalog showing every item with its description and history. Last spring there was a series of three or four programs on Public TV about these art works. We happened to see only two, I think, but were so impressed we managed to borrow the library copy of the book as soon as it arrived. Later Tom and Virginia gave me a copy for my birthday. It's a treasure.

Because of some of the names I caught on the TV programs, I know there were items relating to some of your relatives and Elizabeth's--not direct ancestors, of course, but distant relatives, nevertheless. We know you will be interested to see and read about these items. If you will look through the Cholmondeley documents I sent last time and the Grey documents enclosed, I'm sure you'll be able to see the connections with most if not all of these items.

Now I must draw this letter to a close. I certainly appreciate what you did for Elizabeth and me in copying and sending all the Merlin Plumb material. I hope this large packet of material and the problems I have presented will turn out to be a pleasant challenge to you and not an overwhelming burden. I anxiously await your response after you have been able to digest and analyze it all. By the way, the total cost of the copies was $15.95. I don't know the mailing cost, but maybe you can get that from the package. One last word. This picture was taken for our church directory, and we thought you'd like to have a copy. Perhaps you can send us one some time.

Yours sincerely,

P114 Log 976

Dear David and (Elizabeth) Virginia,

Sorry to hear about your grandson. Knowing that death is only a change from this life to the next must be a great comfort to you and your children at this time. Even with that knowledge the hurt and loss are still there. Our hearts are with you.

What a wealth of material, my. $15.95 plus $2.50 postage seems so little. Check enclosed. I am overwhelemed and it will be awhile before I can turn my attention to Plumb genealogy.

Right now I am envolved in Gutke lines, the maiden name of my first mother-in-law, all from Sweden. It is another record with few sources. Two maiden great aunts of my mother-in-law's went to Sweden in the 1920's and copied church records. They both spoke and wrote the language. I have their hand written copy of pedigree charts and family group sheets going back into the 1600's and am attempting to varify their work, find some missing marriage dates, etc.

At this point I know a few Swedish terms and recognize letters in the old Gothic script. I'm never quite sure of myself, but plan to keep at it until I satisfy myself I can do no more.

Louis and I are going to Logan Utah this summer for a Sons of the Utah Pioneers Convention. Louis is the President of the Mesa Chaper for 1987.

I am hoping to spend several days at the genealogy library in Salt Lake City. At that time I will take my connections to the Wilford Woodruff lines and see if I can copy the materials that are undoubtedly there. Then I'll send you copies.

Edith doesn't think clearly anymore and just "throws up her hands' whenever I mention proofs of connections. I believe she is past the useful age in genealogy. She still walks a block from her home to the store and is a sweet little lady.

Thank you for the sheets of the J.H. Plumb book. They will complete my copy and I am pleased to get them.

I appreciate the Ruthin Castle picture and the Grey and Norton Histories. Wouldn't it be fun sometime to travel to England and see those places connected with our ancesters? I have not visited England.

I appreciate the Norton family group sheets and will use them to check with mine. I assume that by the end of 1987 I will have finished what I am doing on the Gutke genealogy and can get back into my own lines.

This past year has been a different one for Louis and I, because his health is up and down. The doctor feels we are expecting too much to have him as well as he was in 1984 before his heart started failing. Two weeks in January he had pneumonia. It seems it is one thing after another. When he feels well he gardens and takes care of his other obligations. When he doesn't feel well he naps in his recliner and watches ball games. We have a dish on the house and can have ball games every night from someplace.

In Mesa we garden the year around. Louis has put in the summer garden of tomatoes and peppers. We are eating chard, carrots, lettuce beets and onions. I am looking into the back yard right now. There are oranges, tangelos, grapefruit and lemons hanging on the trees.

The grass is green and a plum and peach tree are in full bloom. This is the wonderful time of the year here. Long sleeves are all we need at night outside and the days only get up to about 75°.

Because we traveled very little in 1985 and 1986 our family has come to see us in droves this winter. Sometimes I feel we are running a hotel. In our combined families we have 15 brothers and 5 sisters, all married and with families. One of my brothers and one of my first husbands brothers lives in this area. All the rest are scattered from Florida to Oregon.

Since October we have had almost continuous company. A Nephew from Salt Lake City is here now. Next week Louis' first wife's sister and her husband will be here from Logan, Utah. They are still having snow. They will stay 6 days. The following week-end my brother his son and their wives are coming from San Diego, CA for the week-end. The second week of April our daughter from Los Angeles is coming to have her brothers make out her tax returns. And on and on.

We have a three bedroom house but when we remodeled in 1980 we put in a large family room and additional baths. We now have four baths. I have professional house cleaners come once a week and go through the place. So all I really worry about is all the food. I love to cook and can throw together a meal for 2 or 20 in record time without getting too up tight.

But, with all the cooking and visiting not much else is getting done. We feel loved and blessed that our families are so concerned to come and call us so often.

How nice of you to send a picture. I feel we are good friends through our correspondence and now we know you even better. I am enclosing an old picture of us. Louis looks about the same - this was taken in 1982 and we haven't taken another one since. I have quit coloring my hair so now am grey haired and unfortunately have added a few lbs. It gives you some idea of how we look.

Thank you again for all the material.

Sincerely

Theda Adams

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Douglas-Hughes
Swaynes Hall
Great Yeldham
Essex CO9 4HH
England

(Bengt)

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Douglas-Hughes:

It is nearly seven years since we visited you and had such a pleasant time in your lovely home. You may remember that Mrs. Witheridge (Elizabeth) is a descendant of the Plumb family that lived in Swaynes Hall in the early 1600's.

We had visited Sir John Cuppleo-Brise thinking that his Swains Hall was the one the Plumbs had owned. He told us there were three Swains Halls in Essex, one of them being in Great Yeldham, which was one of the parishes where the Plumbs had lived. He very kindly put us in touch with you, and we were fortunately able to arrange a convenient time to see you before we had to return to America. We have corresponded with Sir John several times a year and have continued to enjoy these contacts with Elizabeth's "home county" of Essex.

Lately I have been going over some of my genealogical materials regarding the Plumb family and their history in Essex. I recall that when we were with you, Douglas, you got out a book in which Swaynes Hall was described, along with the names and dates of the early owners of the property. The Plumb family was included in that listing, as I remember. We talked at the time about the possibility of having the material photocopied for us.

Would it be possible for you to make these copies and mail them to us some time at your convenience? We should be very grateful if you could do this. Enclosed is £5.00, which I hope will cover the cost of the copying and airmail postage. Thank you very much for your kind assistance.

Best wishes and good health to both of you.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Theda,

It's been ten months since your last letter arrived. We have had reasonably good health since then, and we hope it has been the same with both of you. Regarding genealogy, I have concentrated mainly on my mother's line, which is German. However, her parents came from Pommerania, which is now in Poland. This makes research there very difficult.

The reason I am writing right now is that Elizabeth and I are planning a trip to Britain this spring. We hope to go about May 15th and stay a month. We'll spend about a week in the London area and then rent a car for three weeks and drive through England, Wales, and Scotland. We have many friends and relatives there and hope to see a number of our ancestral locations.

One in particular you'd be interested in is Ruthin Castle. Fodor's 1988 tour guide, Great Britain, says: "At Ruthin, in the shadow of the Clwydian hills, the old red sandstone castle has been converted into a comfortable country hotel, renowned throughout Wales for the medieval banquets that take place nightly during most of the year." Wouldn't it be fun to stay there overnight in memory of the Lord Grey of Ruthin, whose daughter married Sir John Norton? That's what we're hoping to do.

It would be much more satisfying, however, if we could be certain of the connection of our John Norton of Branford, Conn., to the English Norton family of Shropenhoe, Bedfordshire. I've been wondering whether you were able to confer with someone in Salt Lake City about this last summer. I know you've been very busy with the Gutke line and haven't been able to do much on this situation. If you think there is someone or some department at Salt Lake City I should correspond with, I'll be glad to do so and explain my uncertainty about the parents of John Norton of Branford. In the meantime, I guess I should try to locate a will for John's father (Richard, d. 1665 in London) or his grandfather (William, d. 1622 in London).

Best wishes for a very good year!

Sincerely,

My Dear David.

I am very sorry indeed that your nice letter of August 13th has for so long gone unanswered.

Unhappily both Beryl and myself have been out of the country for some time earlier in the year and have required hospital recently which has disrupted our usual mode of life.

However, Beryl is completely well now and I am hoping to live, without too much trouble, with some of the internal parts which are not functioning properly.
I am rather like an old car which requires many new parts and really needs to be scrapped for an entirely new model.

So I think that I shall wait until they produce a really snappy one, that can play all games and looks very handsome, and then exchange.

So we hope that you will forgive our silence.

Strangely enough during the last few days some photo_copies of documents relating to this house, have come into my hands and I hope that they will throw further light on the history and previous occupants, owners of the property.
I shall be having the assistance of The Essex Records Office in deciphering the text and will send you a copy of the results.

Meanwhile I will send you, within a day or two, the photo' copy that you ask for in your letter

With all good wishes and with the hope that we shall see you both again.

Yours most sincerely,

Dear Douglas + Beryl,

Thank you for your kind letter of December 29th. We were sorry to hear that both of you have been ill, but we're glad you are now much better.

I'm writing now to say that we are planning a trip to Britain from the middle of May to the middle of June, and we hope we can see you again. I think we'll arrive in London May 14th and spend about a week in the London area. Then we plan to hire a car and drive through England, Wales, and Scotland for three weeks. We have many friends and relatives to visit and a number of ancestral locations to see.

I have just completed the first draft of our itinerary, and the way it works out we want to start with about three days in Essex. On the way from London on Saturday, May 21, we would go through Greenwich and Rochester, where Dr. Thomas Plume (founder of the library at Maldon) served as Vicar and Archdeacon, and Longfield, where he was buried.

We are wondering if you will be home on that day, as we would like to see you during the latter part of the afternoon. Would it be out of line, in fact, if we were to propose that we stay overnight with you that night? You can imagine what a thrill it would be for Elizabeth to sleep in the house where her ancestors lived so many centuries ago. Please be frank and tell us if that would be inconvenient for you. In that case, maybe you could suggest a suitable place nearby. We remember eating a few times at the White Hart, and we seem to remember they had some rooms for guests upstairs. Is that right?

On the next day, Sunday, we might attend worship at the Great Yeldham Church, and in the afternoon we hope to see Sir John at the other Spains Hall. Monday we plan to spend in Chelmsford and visiting the Shire Library in Maldon.

We look forward to hearing from you and also seeing the photocopies of the material about Spaynes Hall.

Yours sincerely,

David + Elizabeth Withering

Dear Douglas + Cheryl,

We have thought of you often since we arrived home from our trip to Britain, and we're wondering how you both are. We were sorry to hear about your hitting your leg, Douglas, and having to be in the hospital again, and we know you continue to have other physical problems. We are also aware that Cheryl has been under medical care from time to time, and that concerns us, too.

We are hoping that by now you are both improving, and we trust that the weather improved as the summer wore on, so that you could get around easily and enjoy being outside. Because of our tight schedule in England, there didn't seem to be any way we could be of help while we were there, but we certainly kept you in our thoughts. It troubles us not to know how you are progressing, and we would be very grateful if you could drop us a brief note in the enclosed envelope telling us how you are.

Our trip to Britain was very successful, and we accomplished almost everything we had planned. We drove 3,000 miles through England, Scotland, and Wales without a bit of car trouble. It was a great pleasure seeing our many relatives and friends. The whole country was full of beautiful flowers and lovely landscapes.

Yours very sincerely,

David + Elizabeth Witheridge

Dear Douglas & Beryl,

I feel quite confident that the letter I wrote to you on January 30 must have gone astray in the mail. I would have written again sooner, but I kept expecting your reply, and then I got very busy in the last few weeks and couldn't find time to ~~reply~~ write.

In that letter I said that we are planning a trip to Britain in May and June and hoping we can visit you again at Springs Hall. After a week in the London area beginning May 14, we'll be driving through England, Wales, and Scotland. We plan to spend about three days in Essex. On our way from London on Saturday, May 21, we would go through Greenwich, Tongfield, and Rochester where Dr. Thomas Plume (founder of the library at Maldon) lived at various times.

We are wondering if you will be home on that day, as we would like to see you during the latter part of the afternoon. We were even so bold as to suggest that we might stay overnight with you that night. It would be a great thrill for Elizabeth to sleep in the house where her ancestors lived many centuries ago. We know that both of you were ill a few months ago, so we know you will be honest and tell us if having guests would be too difficult at this time. I have recently discovered the Mill Hotel in Sudbury, and we can easily stay there on Saturday night.

On Sunday morning we have in mind attending worship at the Great Yeldham Church, and at 3:00 p.m. on Sunday we have a date to have tea with Sir John at the other Spains Hall. Monday we plan to spend in Chelmsford and at the Plume Library in Maldon. If late Saturday afternoon would be a bad time for us to visit you, perhaps

February 3, 1988

Dear David and Elizabeth,

I was glad to receive your letter and know of your summer plans. What fun to go to Great Britain with genealogy in mind. One of my daughters is planning on moving to London in the fall. Perhaps she will be able to further our English genealogy sometime in the future.

This has been a difficult year for me. In March 1987 I woke up one morning to find Louis sitting at his desk dead of a heart attack. Although he was still warm neither CPR or the paramedics could revive him- a good way for him to go but a shock for me.

It was such a shock because we had been to the doctor the week before and he assured Louis that his heart was doing very well. None of Louis' family have ever lived to be 80 years old. I thought with a new heart valve he would be the one to break that barrier. I'm sure the Lord directs these things we don't.

As you can imagine my life has been completely changed. With a sure knowledge of the atonment and resurrection of Jesus Christ I have not had any difficulty accepting Louis' death. I know death is just a passing from this life into the next. But the mechanics of a death are hard.

Knowing that time was my biggest ally I have spent this whole year accepting all invitations and have traveled most of the year. I even went to England for two weeks but it was a history tour and I just went along with the activities planned. Thank goodness for family and friends they surrounded me with invitations and love. If I wasn't going out of town I took several grandchildren and we went to our cabin in the mountains. Anything to keep from being in my house alone.

I spent Christmas in Los Angeles and San Diego and came home with the resolve to get on with my life. I am now back assisting at the genealogy library, teaching a Sunday School class and helping with grandchildren. I am even cleaning out Louis' desk, which I could not bear to attack before.

I could not contact her before because she had been on a mission) (her own church for the past 2 years she's now home and single.

My travels this summer did not include Salt Lake City. Perhaps next summer. But knowing you needed the proof of the Norton Line I called a cousin and ask her what she would suggest. The enclosed sheets are the source she says we base our ties to that line.

As to contacting someone in Salt Lake City I am not sure how you would go about it. There is not any place up there where the general authorities of our church have their genealogy. It is kept in the individual families. I had planned on going to the genealogy department and inquiring. Why don't you write to the Genealogy Department, 35 North West Temple, Salt Lake City, UT 84150. A year ago we could have gone this route if I had not been planning on spending several weeks in Salt Lake City and knew it would be faster to have someone in person inquiring than writing. Sorry to have forgotten all about this.

I hope you enjoy your visit to England, Whales, etc. Do keep in touch.

Sincerely,

Thelma

Dear Theda,

I have wanted to write to you many times since your last letter, but never could find time to do so. Before our trip to Britain last year I was deeply involved in preparation, including dozens of letters. We returned home with dreadful colds and found they were in the midst of a drought and heat wave here. Our energy level was thus very low for a long time.

In August of 1988 our daughter-in-law Virginia in Chicago developed pre-eclampsia, as she had done two years earlier, and they had to take her baby 2½ months early. Little Rebecca weighed only 2 lbs., 2 oz., and we were all greatly worried. But she developed beautifully, and now weighs about 16 lbs. and is almost ready to walk alone. Tom, Virginia, and Rebecca were here over Labor Day, and we enjoyed their visit immensely.

Now back to the sad news in your last letter. We were very sorry to hear about Louis' death, and we know you have had a difficult time since then. But we feel sure you have found the strength to adjust and build a new life. You are fortunate to have such a wonderful and caring family.

The rest of this letter will be a combination of good news and bad news. First the good news. Our trip to Britain was both enjoyable and successful in terms of seeing some ancestral locations referred to in the Merlin Plumb book.

I think I told you that we were hoping to visit Ruthin Castle in North Wales, at one time occupied by the Lord Grey of Ruthin, whose daughter married Sir John Norton. We did stay there overnight, and that was quite a thrill. Unfortunately we there on a Bank Holiday, and they were not serving their usual mediaeval banquet, but we had a good meal in their regular dining room. It was gloomy and rainy both in the evening and the next morning when we left, as this picture shows, so we didn't wander around the premises to see some of the ancient features.

Secondly, we made a special point of going to Sharpenhoe, the town where the Norton family lived and occupied the manor. We didn't know where the manor might have been, but we had an Ordnance Survey Map that showed a moat. We drove to where we thought that should be and came to a large but not ancient house. Around in back was a man painting a garage or out-building. I told him Elizabeth's connection to the Nortons of Sarpenhoe Manor, and I asked him about the moat and his house. He showed us the moat, but said an earlier house had burned down and the present one, called "The Bury," had been built some time in the last century. He explained that "bury" refers to a fortified place--in this case merely the moat. He pointed out a nearby hill called "The Clappers." We exchanged names and addresses, and we left delighted that we had seen Sharpenhoe, but not sure we had seen the site of the original manor.

See doc. Nt 2 in folder 1.53a

Not long after returning home, we got a letter from the owner, Roderick Burn-Callander, enclosing an auction catalog of paintings done in Bedfordshire, including a "Mansion belonging to the Smyths at Sharpenhoe"and a baptismal font in its garden. Also enclosed were two photographs of the paintings of the mansion and the font. Reference to pages from the Victoria History of Bedfordshire, in my file clearly showed that this was the early Sharpenhoe Manor, once owned and occupied by the Nortons and later held by the Smythe family. The most interesting statement (p. 364) was about the font discovered "in the moat of Sharpenhoe Bury, the old manor-house." Copies of these items are enclosed for your enjoyment and records.

See docs. Nt 49-52 in folder 1.53f

This summer we took a trip to Connecticut and decided to go to Farmington, near Hartford, where John Norton had lived during the latter part of his life. (His daughter Elizabeth married John Plumb.) In preparation I wrote to the Farmington Library, and one of the librarians kindly sent the enclosed materials. We were fascinated to find that John Norton's house, built before 1670, was still standing, and of course we went to see it and took the enclosed pictures. Unfortunately, the interior is not open to the public.

Now the bad news. After receiving all this interesting information about Sharpenhoe and the Norton family there, I now have definite proof that our John Norton of Branford and Farmington was not the son of Richard Norton of London as assumed by Edith Thatcher and many other genealogical writers. As you know, I have been struggling with this problem for several years. At your suggestion I did write to the Genealogy Department at Salt Lake City and received the enclosed answer just before our trip to Britain, so I wasn't able to pursue the matter for some time.

At the University of Minnesota I found a number of historical works on Bedfordshire and discovered a John Norton who was rector of the Barton-le-Clay parish, right next to Sharpenhoe (Streatly parish). His burial in the chancel on Aug. 18, 1662, was listed in extracts from the Barton-le-Clay parish register in Bedfordshire Notes and Queries, V.1, 1886. A monumental inscription quoted in V.3, 1893, said "Here lieth buried the Body of John Norton, Late minister of this Place, departed ye 15 of Aug. 1662, son of Richard Norton, Esq."

That led me to the pages about Barton-le-Clay I had copied earlier from the Victoria History of Bedfordshire. There I found (p. 312) that on the death of the rector, Dr. Moore, in 1652, "Richard Norton, who had purchased the manor, conceiving the advowson to be appendant, presented his son John to the rectory." On p. 310 it says that "In 1628 a grant of the manor was made to Edward Ditchfield and others as trustees for the city of London, who probably sold it to Richard Norton, who was lord of the (Barton) manor in 1634." This made it seem likely that this was the Richard Norton of London.

Further confirmation appears in the alumni directory of Cambridge University (Alumni Cantabrigiensis) where John Norton was listed as admitted, aged 16, to Sidney College on 2 April, 1646. He is described as the son of Richard Norton of London, linen-draper, schooled at Sharpenhoe and as having matriculated in 1646, and received his B.A. in 1649/50 and M.A. in 1653 (so he could not have been in America at that time). An archivist at the Bedfordshire County Record Office also agrees that the Rev. John Norton of Barton-le-Clay was the son of Richard Norton of London and sent me a pedigree chart showing this, based on records in that office.

So we are left with the sad fact that the English ancestry of John Norton of Branford laid out by Edith Thatcher and others is not correct, and that we are faced with the necessity of starting from scratch to find them. I hope we may eventually find that he descends from the Sharpenhoe family in some other way, but at this point we have absolutely no information about his parents.

Whether or not the Sharpenhoe Nortons were your ancestors and Elizabeth's, there is no doubt, of course, that John Norton of Branford and Farmington was. So the pictures of the 1670 house are definitely pictures of one of your ancestral homes.

This has again turned into a very long letter, so you can see why I put off starting it for such a long time. You probably aren't doing much with genealogy at this time, so you may not even appreciate getting all this material! However, we feel you should have it, as you are the only one of Elizabeth's relatives who has worked on this line and is familiar with it. (Elizabeth says to give you a special greeting from her!)

Yours very sincerely,

David

Dear Rev. D. E. Witheridge,

I was looking thru my Devon Family History Society Members Interest 1990 and Plumb.

I have some information on some Plumbs from Essex.

My Edward Plumb B: 30 June, 1810 Hudson, New York, removed to Medafield Township in Wisconsin + died there. His wife Laura Hoyt Plumb B: 11 July, 1815 N.H. Edward Plumb is my Great Great Grandfather. I am back in Essex.

Hope I can be of help.

Sincerely

Dear Cousin Dallas,

Thank you for your letter about your Plumb ancestry. My wife Elizabeth is the one who descends from the Plumb family of Essex, though I am the one who carries on the genealogical research.

Most of what we know about the Plumb family comes from a source that you are probably familiar with: N. B. Plumb's book, The Plumb Family, 1635-1800 (First Edition, 1890; Second Edition, 1893). I have a photocopy of the Second Edition, made at the Minnesota Historical Society Library. We also added further information from parish registers and other sources when we were in England.

I looked up your great-great-grandparents, Edward Plumb and Laura Voigt, in N. B. Plumb's book, and I found that Elizabeth's great-grandfather, Jefferson C. Plumb was a fourth cousin of Edward Plumb, so that makes you and Elizabeth 7th cousins once removed.

Without knowing what you have about the Plumb family in Essex, I don't quite know how to compare what you have with what we have. If you are interested in pursuing this further, I'd be pleased to hear from you again with additional information about what you have on the Plumb family in Essex.

It seems that none of the other family names you mentioned are found in either Elizabeth's ancestry or mine.

I might just say in closing that both Elizabeth and I grew up in Saginaw, Michigan. She was a kindergarten teacher before we were married and later was the author of seven published books for children and young people. I started out as a heating and ventilating engineer and later became a Baptist minister. I retired eleven years ago after serving 19 years as Executive Director of the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches. We have two sons, Jim, 41, is unmarried and lives in Minneapolis. Tom, 38, is married and lives in Chicago. He and his wife Virginia have a darling 3½-year old daughter, Rebecca.

Elizabeth joins me in sending you our best wishes. We look forward to hearing from you again.

Yours sincerely,

David + Elizabeth Witheridge

24th June 1982

Dear Mr & Mrs Witheridge,

I am ashamed to see that your last letter to me was dated February 25th. I am sorry that I have not replied to you before.

You very kindly offered to donate one your children's books to the library, and I think that it is a lovely idea. Many of the books in this collection are not nearly as serious as their bindings would have them appear, so I am sure that we can make a place for one of your books, suitably inscribed of course, so that future generations will know exactly why it is here.

Already it is June and halfway through the year, but of course this is a special month for you and your family and now you have a new daughter-in-law. I hope that you all had a happy time on the 5th June.

We have attended two family weddings, one in Somerset, the other in Devonshire. It was very pleasant to meet all the members of the family together. The wedding in Somerset was solemnized in a tiny church which stands right on top of a hill. It is the custom in that locality for the local children to tie up the church gates until the bride and groom have thrown them some pennies. In May my husband's niece was married to a Scottish farmer, who together with his relations, attended the wedding dressed in their kilts and ruffles. It was a very lively wedding reception that followed.

Marjorie Ives (q.v.)

You may be interested to hear that recently we had a lady in the library who, like you, was trying to trace her forebears. She is also a member of the Plume (Plumb) family and lives in Meridan, Conn. U.S.A.

After some weeks of beautiful sunshine, we are now having heavy rain and cloudy skies, which is a pity, for the soft fruit is ready now, and will be spoiled by the rain.

With very best wishes,

Margaret Shacklock

Dear Mrs Witheridge,

Just briefly to thank you for your letter and the promise of your book 'Never Younger, Jeannie.' We are looking forward to reading it ourselves, being children at heart!

The American lady who was trying to trace her family to John Plume 1634, is:

Marjorie
Mrs M. Ives,
1 Ives Avenue,
Meriden, Connecticut, 06450
U.S.A.

Just recently, the Vicar of All Saints Church, Maldon, has received an enquiry from a gentleman who wishes to trace the whereabouts of the present-day descendants of the Plume family, particularly the American branch. Knowing your interest, I therefore promised to write to you to ask if you would care to correspond with him on this subject. His address is as follows:

Mr Tim Roberts,
67 Falmouth Road,
Chelmsford,
Essex.

A. [illegible] Peterborough (a Canon of Canterbury) of Rochester from 1679 to 1704. He made [illegible] some "Enquiries", some at Cambridge, for a Plume, in spite of being a staunch Royalist, made out the period of the Commonwealth; in 1662 he signed the Act of Uniformity at the time of the Restoration. Then, (at a time when 2,000 to 2,500 ministers were ejected from the Church for nonconformity) in spite of the fact that his father was a Presbyterian minister, Plume again survived this difficult period. Again in spite of the fact that he was given the living of East Greenwich in 1658 (until his death in 1704) by Richard Cromwell (son of Oliver Cromwell, the first Lord Protector) as a concession to the Royalists. Greenwich was a fashionable parish for "Society", and we find it to be a very profitable post as well! The records show that £2 to £3 a week was taken in Offertory Receipts and special gifts at religious festivals during the year contributed for example on Christmas, 1663, gifts from "Six John Bewnalow, £20; the Lady Grey, £20; the Lord Seymour, £5; the Lady Spencer, £5.)"£5, and so on. Furthermore he was Rector of Little Easton from 1665 to his death, and Rector of Merston Kent, from 1662 to his death. The latter was a crown living and in fact a sinecure, there was no church, no building, no population even! In fact the records state he was Rector from 1662 until 1726, i.e. twenty four years after he died. #6.

As to the parts of his Will not yet covered, these relate mainly to charities and the Church, e.g. £20 to buy plate for the Communion Table in All Saints Church, Maldon for the same Church: £4 per year for daily prayer, and £400 for augmenting the vicarige. A sum was given towards the repairing of Rochester Cathedral, and trust monies were laid aside for relieving poor Ministers and their widows and children in the Dengy Hundred, Essex. On the charities side, he left four brick houses in Deptford for Almshouses, and £2,000 for the erection of a Workhouse at Maldon. #3 and £200 for providing the basic materials to "establish the trade of weaving sackcloth to the end that the poor might be maintained comfortably forever by their labour." #13d The Workhouse provisions were not in advance for his time, unlike the Library, and was later sold under the Poor Law Amendments Act. Also £20 to the poor of Rochester; £50 to the City of Rochester as a fund for loans to poor tradesmen, interest free; and somewhat surprisingly, "£100 to the placing 10 maids in marriage being above 24 years old, of civil life and who have lived in one service above 7 years, 5 whereof were to be in East Greenwich." #6 This request is not surprising in itself, is particularly so considering Plume was a bachelor, and from textual evidence of his notebook, Clark concludes he was "deeply convinced of the burdens incidental to the estate of matrimony." #15 The will ends, "But all the rest I give to Charity, that is, my whole Estate, not otherwise disposed of, by this Will."

As to provisions for himself after death, these were very simple indeed. He died on the 20th November, 1704, at the age of 74, at Greenwich. His will stipulated that he was to be buried in the churchyard of Longfield Court, near Dartford, (the official country residence of the Archdeacon of Rochester since the 15th century), by the south wall of the Church. He was to be buried in a brick grave, with an ordinary black coffin, with a fair, black stone over his grave, with an inscription in Latin, that he wrote himself. This in translation is "Under here lies the Archdeacon of Rochester. The greatest of sinners, would that he were also the greatest of penitents. Seek his name in the book of life. There will come a day which puts me back in the light." He also desired a small attendance at his funeral. All his wishes were carried out on 24th November, 1704, faithfully.

But what of Plume's lifetime and background? Apart from the above facts interspersed in this text as an attempt to explain certain acts of the man, the following is known: Of his ancestors he came from a long line of highly respected, Presbyterian, Essex gentlemen farmers and men of property. Our Thomas Plume's great grandfather, Robert (junior), bought Yeldham Hall in 1590; his son, Thomas (Thomas I i.e. our Thomas's grandfather) remained at Yeldham Hall until he died in 1615. Thomas (I) had three sons, of whom the second, Thomas (II, i.e. our Thomas's father) settled in Maldon in 1620. Our Thomas's father (b. 1593), is recorded in the Boroughs Session Books as being a man of substantial property. 5.

highly respected, and a noted Presbyterian lay preacher, though his son became a minister of the High Church. He was educated at Christ's College, Cambridge, as was also his son to follow. He was notable for the part he played in local affairs, in 1620 he moved to Maldon, in 1622 he was admitted as Burgess and Freeman of the Borough, in 1625 he was elected as an Alderman, in 1627 according to Piper*5, though Fitch has the date 1632*6, he was elected as a Bailiff for the first time, and also for the years 1633, 1637, 1641, 1645, and 1649. He was also a Justice of the Peace from at least 1631. This highly respectable, though somewhat sombre character of his father must have influenced our own Thomas's character, as also his fathers marriage history. His father's first marriage to Deborah (or "Debora") contracted presumably outside the town of Maldon, produced (according to the register at All Saint's Church, Maldon) in 1623, a daughter, Elizabeth. At this date the father would be aged 40 years. In 1624, a son Benjamin was born, and was baptised the same day as his mother was buried (presumably dying in childbirth).

The next year he married again, to Elizabeth, who bore him a son, Samuel, in 1626, and a daughter in 1628. The next entry we find is the baptism of our Thomas in 1630, son of Thomas and Hellen Plume. We can only presume that his second wife, Elizabeth had between 1628 and 1630 died, and Thomas Plume had taken a third wife, Hellen, and bore our Thomas in 1630!

Piper states that Thomas Plume, the elder, died in 1650. However Fitch*6 notes that the Borough minutes record that on the 9th. January in 1654 (N.S.), Thomas Plume was removed from the office of Alderman because of illness and the fact that he had moved his place of habitation to outside the Borough. This means that in 1654, at the age of 70 years, he was still alive. Unfortunately there is no record of his death in existence.

Further to the mystery of Elizabeth Plume, Thomas Plume's second wife, we find (according to Fitch*4) an entry, "John Head, Vicar of All Saints and St. Peters, Maldon, was by the good guidance of God, marryed unto Mrs. Elizabeth Plume (N.S.), of All Saints parish, above sayd upon the twelth day of May, in the yeare of our Lord, 1663". If this "Mrs. Elizabeth Plume" was the ex-wife of Thomas Plume, it raises some very interesting questions! Had Thomas Plume divorced Elizabeth between 1628 and 1630, and married Hellen? If not then our Thomas was either the product of a bigamous marriage, or more likely illegitimate in all but name! Or perhaps the record was only incorrect in recording "Mrs." instead of "Miss", and this Elizabeth Plume was in reality the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth, born in 1628. The register omits the name of this child, and by 1663 she may have been commonly referred to as "Mrs.", as many "elderly" spinsters were. Unfortunately I have not had time to follow this line of research up, and have only used the second hand accounts of Fitch and Piper.

Our Thomas's father must have been 47 years old when he was born. This age gap alone must have affected our Thomas's character, and perhaps his father's matrimonial history can partially explain his attitude towards marriage.

The first record we have of our Thomas Plume (hereafter simply referred to as "Thomas" or "Plume") is according to Fitch*6 in the register of All Saint's Church, under Baptisms, "1630. Thomas, son of Thomas and Hellen Plume 18th. August"; Piper*5 states that the date is the 7th. August. Anyway we know that Thomas had at least two brothers and two sisters; presuming that they survived their childhood years, as their is no record of their burial.

He was educated at Chelmsford Grammar School, where he studied Latin, Mathematics, Philosophy and Theology under Mr. Speak. The school register has unfortunately not survived to give his dates of entry and departure. On the latter however we find the date Plume entered Christ's College, Cambridge University, as a pensioner in February, 1645; the exact date was according to Notes; Plume Library*9, the 16th.; and according to Fitch*6, the 29th. This was at the age of 14½ years (NOT 15 YEARS)(5 & 9), not unusual in his time. He studied under Mr. More (Snr.), took his matriculation in July, 1646; then his B.A. degree, followed with his M.A. in 1649, at the age of 19 years old. Between 1649 and 1658, (when he was appointed the Vicar of Greenwich), there are his, and a complete absence of his joining in any non - studious activity. Indeed his notebooks show he kept a meticulous account of his spending, and there is no written evidence as to his spending any money on pleasure activities at all. His thrifty character shows itself here as well, for example he used every inch of paper up, also he records he made small loans to friends, but never requested any himself. The English Civil War (1642 - 9), was at its worst when he entered University in 1645. Plume at this tender age of 14 - 15, believed all the stories of atrocities committed by the New Model Army, especially after the battle of Naseby in 1645, when the Royalists were decisively beaten. Plume for perhaps the only time in his life showed great emotion, even writing a few very bad poems! Plume cannot be noted really for original thinking at any point in his life, but these emotions stayed with him in the form of a prejudice (very profitable, so it turned out) for the rest of his life, in the form of being an extreme Royalist.

His later academic career consisted of becoming a Bachelor of Divinity, "per literas regias" in 1661; and a Doctor of Divinity in 1673. His ecclesiastical career has been mentioned previously, this just leaves some personal notes about him. First, it may be of interest to note that in spite of his sober character he was not completely anti - drink, the water may have been bad in the 17th. C., but we find that one of his bills, £11 is for one firkin of beer (1 F. ½ barrel = approximately 72 pints) for his household, if not for himself.

In his numerous MSS at the Plume Library, Mrs. Piper ✱5 has concluded of Plume personally, that he had a "pride in being English" and a "dislike of all non-conformists, Welsh, Gaelic, and Dutch". This ties in with the Revd. A. Clark's researches ✱15 into a pocket book found among the MSS and attributed to Plume by textual evidence. The pocket book, MS Number 25, is 5⅝" x 3½" x ¾", leather bound, with two metal clasps. There is no name in the book, but notes on the flyleaf, c. 1680, are definitely by Plume. It consists of 272 pages, all closely written, as was Plume's practice. The writer was a Royalist, witha pronounced dislike of Scots and Irish; it is very antagonistic to Presbyterianism, which Plume was in spite of (or because of) the fact his father was a Presbyterian Minister, plus it must be borne in mind that he signed the Act of Uniformity in 1662. Much of it is personal anecdotes, many on historical characters of national interest. There are numerous notes on the character of Ben Jonson (d. 1637), the dramatist also notes on Milton "display bitter cavalier hatred of the Commonwealth's apologist." The Civil War is well represented, and the jotting down of numerous pithy sayings, plus a number of jests and puns (partly Latin, partly English), would also point to Plume being the author.

Finally in summing up Plume I think we can state that in spite of his position in society he made little impact on it, if anything it is very noticable how society moulded the man. He is remembered mainly for his benefactions in his will. One of his few recorded original ideas (probably just considered at the time as being of very minor importance), viz. the provision to buy new books annually for the library, in retrospect was probably his greatest. It is mainly by this provision that his library has survived to the present day, and his library is his main gift to our own time.

DOCTOR PLUME AND THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL OF HIS HOME 1704-1770

The Venerable Thomas Plume D.D. Archdeacon of Rochester, was one of the most remarkable men ever born in Maldon; and one of the town's greatest benefactors. His character, his beliefs and his career were completely different to any which could have been forecast from his home and his educational background.[17] Although his father was a locally prominent Presbyterian, he belonged to the exclusive High Church section of the Church of England. The broad-minded (and broad-humoured) detachment of the many stories and pieces of gossip in his notebooks, the rationalism of his religious outlook, and his interest in astronomy and experimental science was far removed from the fundamentalist, Hebraic doctrine of the ministers of his native borough. Thomas Plume was out of place in the town of low, white-plastered mediaeval cottages, its gaunt churches and its Scripture quoting craftsmen. He rather walked a new, measured and urbane world among dignified houses and the broad terraces of Wren and Inigo Jones. He was used to the conversation of scholars and bishops, sometimes he had the company of Flamstead and Isaac Newton at Greenwich, Pepys and Evelyn drove down to hear his sermons.

Yet he does not seem to have been a man of great pride, and if the legacies of his will are a guide, he kept a great affection for his birth-place. To Maldon he gave a fine building in the new style, and his library room on its first floor epitomises the calm prosperous years which he spent at East Greenwich and at Longfield Court in Kent. Great folios of the Fathers and church histories in gilt leather covers stand beside polyglot Bibles and the new scientific works on astronomy; whilst on the shelves calf-bound books of modern history, sermons and the classics, medicine, and mathematics are mingled with the pale cream parchment covers of older books on theology. Over all presides the portrait of Archbishop Laud, one of the martyrs for Plume's churchmanship.

Even in the uneasy years of the Restoration of Charles II, Thomas Plume remained untroubled by a precise conscience or the vindictiveness of the home coming royalists although he had been presented with the vicarage of East Greenwich in 1658 by Richard Cromwell the son of the great Lord Protector, and although many of the clergy who had been undergraduates with him in Christ College were deprived of their livings for nonconformity in 1662. But whilst they suffered for their faith he collected books for the Bishop of Lichfield, and in a short while he was rewarded with the valuable rectory of Merston—where there was no village, no church and no congregation—and the rectory of Great Easton in Essex (both held in plurality). He became Archdeacon of Rochester in 1679, a Doctor of Divinity and a member of the newly formed Royal Society. During those early days when he was working for success he read a book by the great Dutch scientist Christian Huygens, Cosmotheoros, and Astronomy became his special interest—the Royal Observatory was at Greenwich—he collected many books on the science, and when he died in 1704 he bequeathed £1200 to establish the professorship of Astronomy and Experimental Philosophy at Cambridge.

PLUME CHARITY BOYS

Beside his interest in science Thomas Plume had a love of antiquity, even a veneration for any traditional link with the past which could make visible the continuity of his Church from generation to generation. This typical feature of High Anglican belief is expressed in the opening paragraph of his legacy of a new educational charity at Maldon.[48]

"The Farm of Iltney, in Munden, having been (as I have credibly heard) a Chantry-land given to Maldon but alienated by King Henry the Eighth, I now restore and give for ever to the town of Maldon, for the uses following:
"First: to keep in good repair the school and library room for ever.
"Second: to maintain a weekly lecture . . .
"And further, out of the profits of Iltney Lands I order the trustees to keep six poor boys out of Maldon or Munden and do allow each of these boys forty shillings per annum for each boy's schooling, and plain gray or green coats, breeches, stockings and shoes as far as it can be made to go with a Monmouth cap or hat . . . the remaining rent of Iltney farm shall augment the number of children to ten, or put some of them out apprentices."

This legacy was applied to the Grammar School, but when a National School was begun in 1817 it was argued that Dr. Plume had really intended to establish a separate Charity School in the town. Ten boys, however, was the largest number he stipulated in his Will, and not enough to form a new free school, although a pamphlet of 1713 does include the boys and the money laid out for them in a list of these schools.[49] It is true that they were clearly distinguished from the fee-paying children of the school and they alone wore the uniform prescribed by Dr. Plume. This uniform is very similar to the clothes of other charity school-children in England though of better quality. Sometimes it was green, and the Charity Commissioners record that then the boys were nicknamed "Grasshoppers", but at first the boys were clothed in grey. In 1731, for example, an order was given to Mr. Samuel Long to clothe six boys[50] "with a Coat, Wastcoat and Breeches with a grey Kersey Cloth the Body and Sleeves of the Wastcoat and the breeches to bee lin'd with Dowlass, two Dowlass Shirts, two pair of Stockings, two pair of Shoes, one Monmouth Cap and String at one pound ten shillings each Boy according to the said Mr. Long's Proposal and Agreement."

Normally a charity boy in England was provided with only one shirt and one pair of shoes and stockings, whilst the average cost of his whole uniform was about fifteen shillings,[51] so that by general standards the Plume Charity boys were well cared for. This was the opinion of Mr. Long, for when he was paid for the first half of his bill, he complained "of its being a very hard bargain", and he was allowed three half crowns more.

Yet although they were clothed and called Charity boys, they went to the Grammar School, and despite the ambiguity of his Will, it is clear that Dr. Plume and his trustees intended they should. One of his trustees was to be "the Schoolmaster", he referred to the Grammar School (which he had built) as "the school" ,and the meetings of the Plume Trust always took place, at first, in "the Grammar School". At a meeting there in 1717 they ordered a tailor to bring "the Clothes to the School in order to have them delivered to the Children,[52] in 1722 they ordered that the son of Laurence Mead of Munden be the next Child that shall be brought into the said Doctors Foundacion to be clothed and taught in the school at Maldon".[52]

Even John Danes may have had to teach the elementary subjects of "a common English education" and the presence of these boys in the Grammar School with the additional provision for their apprenticeship helped to create a situation which Dr. Plume did not, perhaps, foresee, and which he would not have liked. He had left to Christ College £100 "on condition they allow an annual exhibition of £6 towards the maintenance of one scholar educated at Maldon";[53] but only one boy could claim it. He was Samuel Meachem who in 1737 was admitted from Maldon School as a scholar of the college,[54] (and he was not one of Doctor Plume's Charity Boys). The lack of any other undergraduates at the universities is a sign that reading, writing, arithmetic and Holy Scripture were taking the place of the classics, as a preparation for apprenticeship. In 1732 the Trustees ordered

'yt two pounds five shillings bee laid out for six Bibles with the Apocrypha and Common Prayer Books with the Articles of the Church of England and that Mr. Knipe (Vicar of all Saints) bee pleased to buy them for the use of the six children upon Dr. Plume's foundacion."[55]

Witnesses declared to the Charity Commissioners in 1837 that only a few boys had received proper education in Grammar. They had the privilege of sitting closest to the fire at the "Latin Table".

This may be no reflection on the work of the masters for at least two of them, Francis Thompson and Robert Hay were, in Plume's words "scholars that knew books", but it reflects the quality or ambition in their pupils, who preferred to accept apprenticeships rather than risk the uncertainty of a career after a more advanced education.

AUTHOR'S NOTE

The suggestions offered in this paper have sharpened themselves considerably since 1979, when the Trustees of Dr Plume's Library invited me to deliver one of their Lectures and when I decided to offer public answers to questions which I had been asking of myself about this collection of books during some thirty years of sporadic but at times intensive use of the Library. As time has passed, more and more examples have accumulated to substantiate those answers (and to illustrate my comments) and I have to thank the Trustees for charging me with an interesting exercise in presenting the material in two quite distinct forms: first, as a lecture to an audience whose range of interests and whose familiarity with the Library's contents was not restricted to that of specialists in 17th-century history; secondly, in the following printed format. The lecture had to be the occasion for an illustrated enquiry with a fully participating audience—it was not designed as a formal reading—and its substance could not usefully be transcribed into a printed essay such as this; even the illustrative material has often had to be replaced with equivalents more suitable for the changed medium of presentation.

Readers who were also members of that audience in 1981 should not, therefore, be surprised at the changed construction but they will find that the questions and my answers are the same. I have, however, ventured to press home more positively here my conclusions and I must point out that they are not necessarily the opinion of the Trustees or of their Librarian.

My thanks are especially due to Canon A. J. Dunlop, Chairman of the Trustees; to Mr Victor Gray, County Archivist of Essex, for his encouragement in the completion of this study; to Mrs G. Shacklock, Thomas Plume's Librarian, for her continuous help in my exploration of the Library; and to the 1981 audience for their encouragement and comments. This is also the opportunity for me to express my gratitude to a former Librarian, the late Mr S. G. Deed, under whose magisterial guidance I first made acquaintance with the world of 16th- and 17th-century book production.

CONVENTIONS AND NOTES

All dates are given in the New Style. Book titles are printed thus: The Letters of Mounsieur de Balzac. The dates given are, unless otherwise indicated, those of the copies in the Plume Library. Where no place of printing is stated (of books published before 1900), it is to be taken to have been London. For books published after 1900 the publisher is given instead of the place of printing. All references, end-notes and bibliography have, for conciseness, been amalgamated and are indicated in the text by numbers in square brackets. Entries [1] to [10] form a list of the principal sources; entries [11] to [39] are principally notes to substantiate statements in the text; and [40] to [58] illustrate a particular theme in the Library's stock. Within these main entries there are often subsections, again for the purpose of avoiding repetition of main entries, and as a result the reader should note that the references do not run consecutively in the text itself.

THE INTENTIONS OF THOMAS PLUME

If it were reasonable to suppose, as many instinctively do, that collections of books will faithfully reflect their owner's concerns and beliefs, might even indicate accurately changes in their ideas or interests, then the special value of the Plume Library at Maldon ought to be as a record of the thoughts and ideas of a man who belonged to an intellectual climate and a society far different in outlook and structure to that of its present-day visitors. Thomas Plume, Vicar of Greenwich from 1658 to 1704, has gained a reputation for piety, learning and benevolence. In stepping over the threshold of his Library, which he bequeathed to his native town, one could be stepping back into what has been called "the world we have lost", the pre-industrial era, and into a fundamentally different intellectual world.

The books are as he left them, very few having been taken by plunderers, all things considered; they are kept in the room he built for them and it is unchanged. A cursory glance along the shelves, an exploration of the Library's printed Catalogue [1] is liable to encourage the supposition that these books' contents will prove to be an index to their owner's mind. Three sources—the easily ascertainable facts about his smoothly successful career (as set out in Figure 1 below), his Will [2.1], the subject-matter of his books—can be combined to produce an illusion that this Library is similar to the contemporary library of Samuel Pepys which, as it was assembled, "came to reflect almost as clearly as the diary itself" (i.e. Pepys' Diary) "the mind and personality of its owner" [10 (a)].

Thus the theology in the Library is as impressive in its range of Classes as ought to be expected for a preacher respected for his scholarship and authoritative pulpit-style. Here are Bibles in many languages, commentaries, patristics, pastoral and moral theology, liturgies, sermons (both printed and manuscript), devotional works and the earliest essays in what was to become, after his lifetime, Comparative Religion. Other books on canon law and aspects of ecclesiastical jurisdiction current during his working life are reminders that Dr Plume was the archdeacon of the diocese of Rochester for twenty-five years.

The Platonists who flourished as a school of metaphysics at Cambridge from the 1650s to the 1690s, in particular as members of his own college, are well represented here. There is also a good selection of contemporary Levantine and Arabic studies, in which some other members of his college were distinguished scholars. So one might suppose that such books reflect special interests which Dr Plume derived from his undergraduate life and subsequent association with Christ's College, suggesting perhaps his familiarity with the Platonist philosophers Henry More and Ralph Cudworth and with Dr John Covell, Sir John Finch, Sir Thomas Baines and others of the college who had travelled in Greece and Asia Minor.

A visitor who knows that by his Will of 1704 Dr Plume founded the Professorship of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy at Cambridge University and that he was Vicar of Greenwich when the Royal Observatory was established there (1675) will not be surprised to find on the shelves treatises on astronomy, chemistry, mechanics, mathematics, botany, anatomy, with many issues of the Philosophical Transactions published by the Royal Society. It will be found appropriate that these books and tracts form a distinctive and considerable proportion of the entire Library.

A Director of the British Museum Library was thus led to describe Thomas Plume's books as "a personal working library of a scholar with wide interests in all fields of learning" [1(a)]. Yet curious anomalies appear if the Library's contents are searched for biographical material which would be more precise than impressions (such as these) produced by a superficial matching of the books' subject-matter with the known outlines of Plume's life.

If he was indeed an informed amateur mathematician whose objectives included collecting the major authorities' work, it is odd that his books do not include (nor ever did, so far as can be ascertained) the Principia Mathematica of Isaac Newton, published by the Royal Society in 1687, nor John Wallis' Arithmetica Infinitorum (1655) setting out the differential calculus from which Newton developed his theories and discoveries. Strange, too, that if the books indicate a special interest in astronomy and, indeed, all those other developing areas of what he called Natural and Experimental Philosophy (to us, the Natural Sciences), he never became a Fellow of the Royal Society. He acquired its Transactions; he bought the History setting out the Society's objectives and philosophy, written by a man who subsequently became his bishop [11]; he had a copy of a fine, illustrated catalogue of its Museum [12]. But he cannot be found directly associated with the Royal Society, nor with Gresham's College, another London institution which had sponsored the development of scientific and mathematical research in the mid-17th century and he gave shelf-space to two works attacking the Society's aims [13]. There is more on astrology, such as the Discourse of Sir Christopher Heydon "manifestly proving," so its title claims, "the powerful influence of the planets and fixed stars upon elementary bodies" (published in 1650 from a manuscript composed before 1623) than might be expected of a patron of the new sciences.

There is a story about the formation of the Plumeian Professorship which comes to us at third hand. If true, it puts his generous endowment of the natural sciences in an unexpected light. About 1730 Robert Smith, kinsman of the second occupier of this Chair, recorded that the first professor, Roger Cotes, had said that Dr Plume was "induced" to create this endowment by reading Christian Huygen's Cosmotheoros. Only an unbound copy of the Latin edition (1699) of that is in the Library now but Dr Plume also had the original English edition (of 1698) [14] and the curious features of Cotes' story are, first, that Dr Plume's decision to devote a very large proportion (£1,902) of his estate to the creation of the professorship came only towards the end of his life, when he was 68; second, that Cosmotheoros was not a seminal treatise on the discoveries in this developing field of exact scientific research but an imaginative exercise akin to science fiction, consisting of "conjectures concerning the inhabitants, plants and productions of the worlds in the planets". Roger Cotes implied that his professorship existed merely because an old man had developed a curiosity about "Life in Outer Space". Why, then, are there so many serious, objective studies in this Library—the treatises and published letters and tabulated observations by Tycho Brahe, Kepler, Galileo, Descartes, Jeremiah Horrocks—which were all published long before 1698? And why had not these provoked the good Doctor into planning a professorship in astronomy?

The terms of Dr Plume's bequest are also curiously at odds with the academic scientific intentions he might have been expected to have had. The professor was to have very light academic duties and instead of being a Fellow residing in a college he was to live in a town house so that "any ingenious Scholar or Gentleman may resort to him at all proper seasons to be instructed in the knowledge of Astronomy . . .". Not, however, in the details of Newtonian physics, the calculus or theoretical astronomy but more generally about "The Globes, Navigation, Natural Philosophy, Dialling and other practical parts of the Mathematics" [2.1]. The clients of this professor were thus to be those virtuosi who had for long patronised the museums, galleries and observatories of Europe, such as the gentleman depicted in a Flemish painting of c.1630 [63(a)], whiling away time in an art gallery with books, a globe, a chart, an astrolabe, navigation instruments, medals and miniatures, the curios with which collectors like Elias Ashmole, Ralph Thoresby and the Fellows of the Royal Society packed their public rooms.

As one explores the books in this Library these anomalies are joined by an awareness of a curious impartiality in the choice of subjects, amounting to an apparently deliberate pairing of alternative viewpoints. Disputations on a wide variety of controversial topics are, as it were, frozen and packed upon the shelves, their matters in controversy kept unresolved for ever. It is as if the collector had sought to make his collection uniformly impersonal. On the same page of the printed Catalogue, for example, are a denunciation of the unreformed universities by Edward Webster (Academiarum Examen or the Examination of the Academies, a printed text of 1654 from his sermon of 1653) and Edward Waterhouse's response to Webster's sermon, his Humble Apologie for Learning and Learned Men (1653). Six works by Andrew Marvell, printed between 1672 and 1680, are accompanied by Mr Theophilus Thorowthistle's Sober Reflections or A Solid Confutation of Mr Andrew Marvell's Works (1674) and, in reply, Marvell's Plain-dealing or A full and Particular Examination of a Late Treatise (Cambridge, 1675). Two copies of Bishop Jeremy Taylor's Dissuasions from Popery are accompanied by Edward Worsley's Truth Will Out or A Discourse of Some Untruths Told by Jeremy Taylor in his Dissuasions from Popery. There is a copy of Sir Thomas Browne's Religio Medici, its argument generally favourable to the scientific principles laid down by Sir Francis Bacon, but also Medicus Medicatus—"The Doctor Dosed With His Own Medicine"—which is in outright opposition to the scientific principles of both Browne and Bacon. Both works are bound together in one volume in this Library.

Certainly the books do illustrate facts already known from other sources about Thomas Plume. A comparison of their range of subjects with his contemporaries' collections—as described by Pepys and Evelyn in their diaries, for example—confirms that it is reasonable to consider the Plume Library "a guide to the culture of the seventeenth century" [1(a)], very similar to those of other cultured, alert, inquisitive men of his time. Yet clearly, beyond such a purely illustrative function the books will not serve independently as a reliable biographical source.

In particular they fail to shed any light on the years 1649 to 1662, when there is no certain record of Thomas Plume's life. It must have been the most formative period for him, when he came with the situation there, a companion's knowledge of the daily routine and of the old man's generosity which may have been Plume's own experience:

> "In bad times, when he had lost his best income and, like the Widow of Sarepta, had but an handful of Meal and Cruze of Oyl left for himself and his Family, yet he then . . . has given a distressed Friend twenty pounds at a time . . ." [3.2(c)].

Dr Hacket was very much the patron a young man needed in the 1650s and 1660s. He was able to recommend Plume to one of the surviving bishops for ordination; he may have been able to use his reviving influence in 1658, as the return of the Monarchy and the Established Church became more certain, to secure Plume's appointment at Greenwich and that was an invaluable advancement, a desirable benefice in a well-to-do parish, a vicarage formerly in the patronage of the Crown and in 1658 in the gift of the new Lord Protector, Richard Cromwell. When Hacket became Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield in 1661 he was in a position to secure for his former secretary the royal mandate to the University of Cambridge by which Plume graduated Bachelor of Divinity without having followed a course of residential studies or taken the statutory academic exercises in the Divinity Schools. This degree was, like Greenwich Vicarage, a very desirable promotion, a highly respected "second degree" which took precedence over the M.A. (and perhaps equivalent to a modern Ph.D. degree).

More to the point of understanding this Library, Dr Hacket had initiated the young scholar into the world of bibliographical scholarship. Plume explained particularly how Hacket had refused to set foot in London after the execution of King Charles I because, in his opinion, it had been polluted by that sacrilegious act. Books he needed, however, and Thomas Plume had been their purchaser. A degree of personal judgement and considerable time in sorting through variant editions is needed when buying books for others—librarianship at least—and the young man came to that task at a time when the lifting of press censorship had filled the bookstalls to an unusual extent. In the late 1650s he commenced a life-long acquaintance with the many book-sellers of London, with their specialities and the range of materials in print.

This relationship of admired patron with valued assistant continued to Hacket's death. Even in his last sickness, 1671, the bishop "sent, the week before he died, to a Friend in London to send him down the new books from abroad or at home . . ." [3.2(d)] and Plume knew the contents of the library in Lichfield Palace well enough to estimate its value: "to the University Library" (at Cambridge) "he bequeath'd by Will all his own books, which cost him about £1,500" [3.2(e)].

Having been unable to secure a prebendal stall for Plume at Lichfield, Hacket bequeathed to him £40 in 1671 and—probably more valuable in the long run—all his manuscript sermons, which Plume published as A Century of Sermons (100 of them), with the biography as an Introduction.

Upon Several Remarkable Subjects: PREACHED BY
The Right Reverend FATHER in GOD,
JOHN HACKET,
Lichfield and Coventry.

Little of this could have been gauged only from the books in his Library, although they can be brought into service to illustrate the veneration of Charles, King and Martyr [37]; the insistence on Learning and Continuity as an Historic Church as being an essential feature of the restored Church of England [36]; the desire to rebuild and repair the fabric and the standards of that Church from the ravages of Civil War and "fanatic rage"; all of which appear as policies that Thomas Plume learned from his distinguished patron. The manuscript notebooks in the Library similarly fail to reveal anything of lasting significance about their writer, Dr Plume, but can provoke a useful search of the books. Dr Andrew Clark supposed that the commonplace books could provide material for a sketch of the man himself, as:

> "a theologian, with special interest in the Cambridge divinity disputations and in the eccentricities of successive Cambridge Professors of Divinity; a Royalist, with pronounced dislike to Scots and Irish; a Churchman, very antagonistic to Presbyterianism; a bachelor, deeply convinced of the burdens incidental to matrimony..." [4.3].

but these are most likely the attitudes of Dr Hacket and two of his friends, Robert Boreman and Dr Edward Hyde, whose own writings make up a large proportion of the manuscript collection in the Library. What Dr Clark pieced together is a young man's group portrait in words of three old divines, all three sequestered from their main benefices by the Commonwealth; a sketch made from their anecdotes and jokes, table-talk, reminiscences, jotted down by the young attendant Plume.

Most of the stuff refers to the Cambridge of a generation previous to Plume's and especially to Hacket's and Boreman's college, Trinity; it often refers to persons dead by Plume's time. None of it is transferable to Plume. Although he remained a bachelor he was anxious to record in his Will that he "had no ill opinion of marriage". The disparaging tales about presbyterians were theirs (but Hacket had been inclined to seek ways of reconciling them to his Church before 1643); Plume, however, purchased the books setting out the alternatives to episcopacy, especially the writings of Richard Baxter (48 titles), even those of Henry Hickman (5) who vented his hatred of the restored bishops from a self-imposed exile in Holland, 1662-1673; he had the plea of Edward Stillingfleet—Irenicum (1662)—for a church settlement inclusive of presbyterians; he later showed particular concern for their French counterparts, the exiled Huguenots, whom he permitted to use Greenwich parish church each Sunday [9.4] and his Will included a legacy for impoverished French ministers or French laymen, payable by "Mr Alix at the Charterhouse" [16]. Any dislike of Irishmen did not prevent him collecting many treatises by theologians of the Church of Ireland, nor from assembling a reasonably representative collection on Irish history and topography [17]. Scottish history is also well covered. These were not the prejudices of Thomas Plume.

He is not to be found among his books or his manuscripts. It is as if he had wiped off even his finger prints when leaving his collections in the town. Any attempt to sketch a biography of him from this Library's contents, to treat the books as his surviving personalia, is bound to end in confusion. A more sensible course is to restrict enquiry to the intentions which he expressed at the end of his life in his Will, to consider the Library for what it most certainly is, one of the benefactions of that Will, and to examine it in the context of his many other legacies. This approach helps to explain the apparent anomalies produced by direct and selective comparisons between his books and the principal features of his career.

The building itself has something to say. It stands entirely as his work, except for two eastern bays, added in 1817, which do not affect an understanding of the original building's style and plan. It consists of a tower and a rectangular, two-storeyed house built over the ruins of St Peter's, a redundant medieval church. It was designed to provide a schoolroom for Maldon Grammar School, which had previously used the empty church, and to house his Library on the upper floor. Three facts are often overlooked. The first is that Dr Plume had built it before making his Will, so it was probably completed by 1700 [18]. Certainly he had planned it by 1698 and maybe a gift of wine and oysters presented in 1699 "to Doctor Plume when hee was last att the Corporacion" [19] marked the occasion of his presentation of the building to the borough.

Secondly, he chose to reconstruct the tower of the previous church despite the considerable expense involved and although it was irrelevant to his principal project of housing his books. Indeed he chose to have the tower rebuilt in a traditional "Gothic" style, using traditional church building materials, cemented stone rubble with freestone dressings, whereas his secular library building on the site of the church nave is in a contrasting domestic style, of brick with a slate roof and wooden, rectangular window frames.

Thirdly, the juxtaposition of tower and library in contrasting styles was deliberate. It looks bizarre but is thereby more clearly a statement about the relationship of the English Church to the English State. They are shown as separate, distinguishably different institutions but linked as one body in which the key to Learning (the Library and the Schoolroom) is held by the Church, because entry to both rooms is through the Tower which remained the property of All Saints and St Peter's parishes. Within, a series of journeyman portraits of monarchs and prelates [20] line the walls and bookcase ends, parading for us his veneration of the twin institutions of Monarchy and Episcopal Government. Archbishop William Laud's portrait (twice the size of any of the others) dominates the room. Here, as in the design of the buildings, is a deliberate association of secular power—the Magistrate—with spiritual authority—the Clergy—which was to prevail in much of England until the late 19th century as the partnership of Squires and Parsons.

Whilst bequests of books to a parish or borough were not unusual in 17th century England, it was unusual to provide them with a purpose-built home such as this one. Most bequests had to be housed wherever the legatees could find a space, often in part of a parish church (as in the chamber over the porch of St Mary's Chelmsford, for Dr Knightbridge's Library) or in a house owned by the parish (as in St Nicholas' Parish, Newcastle Upon Tyne). Sometimes the donors provided suggestions: William Petyt expected his books to be placed in an existing "Library erected in the Church" at Skipton, Yorkshire, but allowed that they might be placed elsewhere "for the use of the Grammar School" [21]; Archbishop Harsnett asked that his books should be given "a decent room to set them up in, that the Clergy of the Town of Colchester and other Divines may have free access for the reading and studying of them" [22] but final discretion was left to the recipients of these libraries.

Even the Pepysian Library of Magdalene College, Cambridge, was not originally built as a house for Samuel Pepys' books and manuscripts, although he nominated the building as their home in his Will [10(a)]. The only two libraries purpose-built in England during the 17th century of which this writer is aware, and excepting those built for colleges and cathedrals, are Dr Plume's in Maldon and another which Dr Thomas Tenison asked Sir Christopher Wren to design for St Martin-in-the-Fields parish in 1684, which opened in 1685 [9.5]. Indeed, the two foundations were similar in two respects: both buildings incorporated grammar schools; both were conceived as public libraries, except that where Tenison's was intended for young clergymen and tutors living in the City, to keep them out of coffee houses and taverns (he had a horror of card-playing clergy), Plume's Will states that his was not only for the use of the clergy of the Madon area but also for "any Gentleman or Scholar" who wished to use it. Another public library planned during his lifetime was that created by Archbishop Narcissus Marsh at Dublin, whose construction was superintended by Sir William Robinson at the same time as this one was being built at Maldon.

A fashion for public libraries was under way by the time the books came to Maldon [59] and even if Dr Plume's was not the first of its kind, its place among the first emphasises the deliberation with which it was created. The careful thought which went into the planning is evident in the arrangements made for its maintenance as much as by its design. There was to be a well-qualified Librarian, "a scholar that knows books," who was to be at least a Master of Arts and (as the holder of the key) a clerk in holy orders. His salary of £40 was expected to be an addition to another income as a Minister or as Master of the Grammar School, so it would have assured him a very comfortable income by the standards of 1704. He was to have rent-free a house nearby, which the Trustees were to own and maintain, so that he could open the Library four hours every weekday. The Will envisaged readers borrowing books, specifying that they must undertake to return the books "uncorrupted," whilst the Librarian was to give a bond of £200 "not to embezzell my books".

The interesting feature of these specifications is that the Librarian's qualifications seem to have been more important than the conservation of the books. This also points up other features of the Library which throw some light on Dr Plume's intentions for it. The Trustees were allocated only £1 a year for buying new books (compare that with the Librarian's salary) whilst the size of the Library Room and the arrangement of its fittings suggest Dr Plume did not intend many additions to be made after his death. The internal arrangements were unlike those of collegiate libraries in this respect: the spaces between the high peninsula cases are very narrow, with no built-in provision of desks in these spaces, at which a reader could spread out his notepaper and book, as he could in the cubicles of collegiate libraries. The room was intended to be a book-stack, a store for a definitive collection, not the nucleus of an expanding institution. It is worth referring here to the opinion of Dr John Hacket, published in 1693:

> "Books are sown so thick in all countries of Europe that a new one, which one adds more to the former gross, had need of an apology. The easie dispatch of so many sheets in a day, by the readiness of printing, hath found the World a great deal more work than needs. Many that love knowledge, both industrious and of sound judgement, are not nice to say that repletion of authors hath begat loathing . . . 'For the stuff already is sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.' (Exodus 36.7)" [3.3(a)].

Next the books must be considered, as a unit. The major feature is their unusually large number in comparison with other 17th-century libraries. That given by William Petyt to Skipton, Yorkshire, in 1719 contained 2,024 volumes [21]. That of Anthony Higgin had 2,000—perhaps as many as 2,500—when it was placed in Ripon Minster c. 1628 [24]. Archbishop Toby

Matthew's library, given to York Minster in the 1630s, was of about 3,000 books, valued at £600 and considered then to be the largest private library in England [25]. Probably Archbishop Harsnett's in 1631 and Dr John Knightbridge's in 1677 were each of about 2,000 volumes [22 and 23]. The Norfolkian Library given to the Royal Society in 1678 was again some 3,000 printed books [26] and that was the total aimed for and achieved by Samuel Pepys [10(a)]. What stands in Dr Plume's Library amounts to at least 7,130 titles. Perhaps there were about 7,400 titles [27] when they reached Maldon in 1705. Allowing for the number of titles in these other collections being more than the number of volumes in which they were bound, Dr Plume's still far exceeds similar collections. It would seem to have been exceptionally large, a princely gift, for its time.

Another difference is the unusually large number of foreign publications. There are books from almost every town or city in northern Europe that ever had a printing house in the 16th or 17th centuries and some from Spain, Italy and Eastern Europe (see Figure 5). Many are of course from the great centres of the publishing trade—Antwerp, Paris, Lyons, Geneva, Leipzig, Cologne, Amsterdam—but also they have come from Poland, Sweden, Denmark, from presses in Glasgow, Aberdeen, Waterford. They include examples of the finest printing techniques of the time, others are of the most ordinary shop-work and there is at least one example [4.1] of the hurried printing done on a fugitive press of an outlawed group. The books display the range of work which the European press was capable of publishing by the early 17th century in authorship, language and subject-matter, with Roman Catholic, Orthodox and Calvinist authors as well as Anglicans and Presbyterians, with texts in Hebrew, Persian, Syriac, Coptic and Greek as well as Latin and English, with medieval chroniclers, Tartar astonomers, Cardinals and Jesuits, Huguenots, a Portuguese bishop, a Bohemian educationalist, a Quaker prisoner in the Tolbooth of Aberdeen, as well as the expected host of English clergymen and lawyers.

The stock is so rich that some omissions are not easily noticed. In general Dr Plume ignored the pamphlets of radical British sects of the 1640s and 1650s. The atlases are not especially representative of the best published in his time; he had none of the navigational charts produced in his lifetime; he ordered his "large Map of the World" to be kept out of his Library [2.1]. There is no music. He preferred Latin or English translations to original French editions. Thus there are five publications of the writings of Jean-Louis Guez de Balzac (his Arustippe, Entretiens and Lettres) which have an important place in French literature because they set the perfected form of its prose composition but these five editions are in English so that much of the value of de Balzac's writing, the style and vocabulary rather than the subject-matter is lost.

This is a vast collection, despite the omissions, and an attempt to catalogue the books under modern classifications requires sections for Theology, the Sciences and Mathematics, Law, Economics (or Political Science), Geography, Classical Languages and Literature, Medicine and Pharmacy. Prose fiction did not exist as a developed literary form but there has to be a section for quasi-fictional fables and fantasies and others (though small) for Drama and Poetry.

These major classifications require many sub-sections, often well-stocked, as with History, where books on Modern Political History c. 1500-1700 include works on most European states; Biography includes most major English sovereigns from Alfred the Great to James II and many European statesmen; Texts and Diplomatic has collections of Statutes, reports on debates in Parliament, the main treaties between European Powers of the 16th and 17th centuries, editions of medieval chronicles and the Rules and Acts of monastic orders. Similarly well-stocked for their time are Warfare, Byzantine, Turkish and other Islamic History, the Protestant Churches and the Counter-Reformation. The comprehensiveness of such sub-classes is illustrated by the list of titles on Tithes in the Notes below [40-58].

That this huge collection in fact never has been classified is an interesting feature, as will appear later. First it has to be looked at complete but with its titles rearranged not in Classes but in chronological order of publication. When they are placed in cumulative totals—that is, when Total A is all the books of 1471-1480, Total B is all the books of 1471-1480 plus those of 1481-1490, Total C is 1471-1490 plus 1491-1500 and so on (to 1704)—then a picture is produced of the distribution by age of the Library's final accumulated stock.

The result, as shown in Figure 6, is thought-provoking. Even though the cumulative totals are those of a provisional count [28] and the exact number of titles which came to Maldon in 1705 will not be known with certainty until further work on the Catalogue has been completed, the weight of numbers is already so clearly distributed across the years that it must be an acceptable indication of the trend which a definitive count would show. The most striking feature of the cumulative distribution is surely that 50% of Dr Plume's Library was in print before 1649; that is half the books had been published before Thomas Plume became a B.A. It is unlikely that he had much money to spend on books before about 1660 and was still finding his way around the book-stalls until then but even if he had begun buying extensively for himself whilst purchasing for Dr Hacket, the sheer size of that part of his Library in print by 1650 is too great to encourage any idea that they can have been a young man's required reading or that more than a few were necessary for his current needs.

Figure 6 also shows how the accession-rate declined towards the end of his life, so that he appears to have bought fewer books as his income rose. Or, he must have bought more second-hand books than new editions in the last twenty years of his life. New titles published between 1675 and 1704 cannot have comprised any more than 22%, between one fifth and a quarter, of this total stock. In fact they formed a smaller proportion, because some of the accessions of 1675-1704 were reprints of works originally published before 1660, some are first editions (of 1660-1704) of works written before 1660.

Two simple conclusions to which this writer is drawn are, first, that Dr Plume principally bought second- or third-hand books and, secondly, that he deliberately sought the work of generations of scholars prior to his own. The physical and financial limitations which he set on future accessions, his requirement that the Librarian was to be "a Scholar that knows books," indicate his intention of creating before his death a definitive reference library. One may suspect that far from being a "personal working library," as seen by Sir Frank Francis [1(a)], this was a deliberately constructed museum of European intellectual history of the 16th and 17th centuries.

Alternatively, this immense accumulation might be fortuitous. Perhaps it consists of Dr Plume's "personal working library" and other collections which he inherited. His father, for example, Alderman Thomas Plume of Maldon, was a Cambridge graduate, a benefactor to the fine new building at Christ's College in the late 1630s, a leading member of a provincial society deeply interested in theology and church affairs. Would not he have been the purchaser of many of these books? The copy of A Directory for the Publique Worship of God (1644) could be his, as he was involved in the administration of the local presbyterian classes during the Interregnum. A textbook of 1638, compiled by the Master of the Grammar School (see Figure 7), bears this manuscript dedication (in Latin) to Alderman Plume on its fly-leaf:

> "To Thomas Plume, the most honest and greatest of friends, John Danes gives this little work as a mark and token of friendship" [29.1].

The wills of some of Maldon's inhabitants of 1600-1665 have references to the books they owned [30] and the descriptions show that members of the Corporation and resident gentry loaned their copies to friends. There is some correspondence between a few of the Library's books and those described in a few wills [30] but there turns out to be little hard evidence that the collections of Maldon men came eventually into Dr Plume's possession. There is no copy of John Danes' other textbook, A Light to Lilly; there are two sets of sermons by George Gifford, Maldon's eminent and affectionately remembered preacher of the 1580s and 1590s but his most important pastoral treatises are not in the Library and do not appear ever to have been there [31.2-31.7] and no others can be traced back to Alderman Plume or his friends. Only a tiny proportion of the Library can be ascribed to Maldon owners.

Instead, the bulk of these 7,000 and more titles must have been acquired by his own diligent purchasing in St Paul's Churchyard, Fleet Street and Westminster Hall, or at auctions in London coffee-houses. Many flyleaves and title-pages have scribbled on them signatures and jottings by former owners, such as "Liber Ro: Eyre 1639" written on the title-page of St Thomas Aquinas' Golden Chain (Paris 1637). One owner's name is crossed out and another's, "Thomas Roberts", is written above it on the beautiful title-page of Jean Bodin's De Republica (Paris and Lyons, 1586), showing it had two previous owners. Three works of René Descartes have notes by a Thomas Knight: in an edition of 1645 is jotted (on the front flyleaf): "Written by me Thomas Knight the 5 of October 1659"; the same message but dated 15 October 1660 is on the back flyleaf. Another of 1656 has the same note by T. Knight for 12 October 1656 but with "Pretium 11^{s}—Thos Plume" (price 55 new pence paid by Plume) beneath that note. The third of these Cartesian works once possessed by T. Knight was printed in 1662, so here are three books acquired secondhand at some date after 1662. The Library's copy of Sir Henry Spelman's Concilia of 1639 (Volume I only) has written on its title-page "Ex dono doctissimi authoris." As Spelman died in 1641 this cannot have been a "gift of the most learned author" to Dr Plume himself and must be another second-hand purchase.

A few volumes are stamped with previous owners' armorials. One, in gold on leather, is the coat of arms recorded for the Windsor family of Stanwell, Middlesex, in the heralds' Visitation Book of 1634. Inside is written "Thomas Windesor", the date 1637 and his motto "Virtus Vera Nobilitas". Three volumes are worth special mention.

One is the 1619 edition of the Works of King James I. On its white vellum binding is shown a boar powdered with ermine spots, standing on a crest wreath. This is stamped in gold with other ornamentation on the front and back covers and was the crest of the Bacon family. As this boar bears a crescent on its flank (as a mark of cadency) the book's original ownership can be firmly ascribed to Sir Francis Bacon (Lord Verulam) who lived from 1561 to 1626 [32.1].

Another is a Parisian edition (1625) of a Byzantine text which has unmistakeably stamped on its covers the armorial bearings of Cardinal Richelieu and the monogram A-V of his baptismal name, Armand de Wignerod. During his career as principal minister of Louis XIII the cardinal bought entire libraries to create a collection which he bequeathed to the French nation in 1642. Evidently this item is at Maldon at third or fourth hand, having passed as a bequest to a national library of France from the possession of a Prince of the Roman Church into the hands of a Protestant English diocesan official and thence to become for a second time a bequest to a public library.

The third, a Dutch publication (Leyden, 1606) has the complex grandeur of Baltic German heraldry stamped in fine detail in its moulded vellum cover. On the front are the arms of Bogislav IV, Duke of Pomerania, who died in 1637. On the back are the arms of his brother-in-law, the Elector George William, Duke of Brandenburg, who died in 1640 [32.2]. Of this volume, too, Dr Plume was at best the third owner in the course of its curious wanderings across Europe, for the name "William Payne" is written inside the front cover.

Such books are the most exotic effects of the process by which Dr Plume assembled a Library. There is also a "hidden" result of his purchase of second-hand books, in that some titles may be present by accident rather than by design, because they happened to be bound up in a volume containing one or more other titles which he did want, or because they were part of a bundle sold as a Lot in a book auction. It would be next to impossible now to identify all such accidental acquisitions but their existence may explain the considerable number of duplicate copies and different editions of the same works which are to be found in this Library.

The possibility that the collection is to some extent the product of bulk purchasing can be pressed further. Most of it may have been accumulated in one fairly short period of intensive purchasing, either during the early years of his career—say late 1650s to the 1680s—which would partly explain the paucity of books from the 1680s to 1704, or he could have bought more intensively between 1680 to 1700, as his thoughts turned to the final disposition of his wealth.

The latter period is preferable for several reasons. Book auctions only became a speciality of the London market from the late 1670s. A spell of bulk purchasing requires a clearly-formed plan of action; he would need to be certain what kind of Library he wished to establish. Indeed the building programme indicates that his plan was complete by at least 1698. As has been noted already, Dr Tenison established a very similar institution in 1684-5 and Dr Plume may have derived his own scheme from that and the exhortations of Dr Thomas Bray in the 1690s for the establishment of parochial libraries [33]. Plume was one of the original members of the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge [8] and a benefactor of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, in both of which Thomas Bray worked for the acceptance of his library schemes. These movements in the 1680s and 1690s, and the story of how he came to the idea of a Professor of Astronomy as late as 1698, point towards so late a date as 1684-1698 for the formation of Dr Plume's decision to found a distinctive reference library in the symbolically designed house at Maldon.

Moreover, he amassed the books too late in his life to have time for their classification or to edit the stock. They arrived at Maldon arranged only by size (the shelving is fixed, had therefore been in place since c. 1700 and so the space required had been by then calculated) but not in any arrangement by subjects. Over 1,000 titles were still unbound, there were many duplications and there were some items which any donor would surely have purged from his public benefaction. (One thinks of The Bassa of Buda and Rome's Rarities or The Pope's Cabinet Unlockt). His catalogues and guides for this work span the years 1672-1697 [7.1-7.8] but the existence of only two early issues of The Works of the Learned... books newly printed [7.6] suggests a slackening concern for the purchase of new stock from 1692 (or 1693, in which his former patron's remark was printed that "repletion of authors hath begat loathing") which is reflected in Figure 3. As a guide to the sufficiency of his collection on Theology he had two standard works by Louis Ellies Dupin [7.7] which are both dated 1692. Of these, the New Library of Ecclesiastical Authors is a late edition of only the first of many volumes (its first edition was in 1686) and Dr Plume did not acquire any more of the volumes issued by Dupin up to (and beyond) 1704, which again suggests that 1692 was the last year of extensive purchasing: he did not require guides for any material published after 1692. The Librarian, the "Scholar that knows books", was needed to complete these tasks rather than to superintend their use.

What is thus proposed here is that this is an attempt at a general reference library, a concept which developed in the founder's mind between 1684 and 1692 and was created, in part, by the acquisition of second-hand books in that period. Nevertheless its core is composed of books read and used by Dr Plume; its contents are to a considerable extent the result of his own deliberate choice and, had he been able to complete its final tailoring, his gift to Maldon would have been somewhat smaller but more completely a reflection of his own ideas, tastes, convictions. Age, interruptions by official functions, perhaps illness and the lateness in life at which he conceived his scheme, all prevented him from completing his task, just as the disorderly composition of his Will, begun in 1703, augmented by three further instalments over a twelve month period, full of changes of his mind, money indiscriminately bestowed, setting up too many trusts, all altered again by a final codicil with fresh bequests added, shows us a busy man surprised by the imminence of his death and without a clear knowledge of the extent of his possessions.

Even the most hastily compiled library, the most perfunctory of wills must be arranged according to distinguishable principles and this Library had certainly reached a sufficiently complete state by 1704 for Dr Plume's innate ideas about its purpose to be clear. It was to promote, strengthen, fulfil those ideas which had been nurtured during his early association with Dr Hacket.

Of course, the most obvious is his concern for the maintenance of the reputation his Church had gained for its scholarship. In St Paul's Cathedral, at the sermon for the opening of a Convocation in 1624, Dr Joseph Hall had complimented his auditors thus, in Latin: "the wonder of the world", he said, "is the clergy of Britain" for its learning [34]. Edward Waterhouse echoed the claim during this learned clergy's bleak years of the Interregnum; writing of "Prelates and Preachers . . . whose breasts and braines by constant reading and meditation became Christ's Libraries", he recorded that:

> "the whole Body of the University of Oxford, in An. 1603 published 'There were then more learned men in the Ministry in the Land then were to be found amongst all the Ministers of the Religion in France, Flaunders, Denmark, Germany, Poland, Geneva, Scotland or all Europe beside'" [36.4(a)].

This and, certainly, Joseph Hall's sermon, Thomas Plume had read but it was learned by him also in John Hacket's study. Indeed, the most frequently cited version of this boast, accurately placing it "about the time of King Charles the First's reign", that "in the long reign of Queen Elizabeth and King James the Clergy of the Reformed Church of England grew the most learned of the world" is from Thomas Plume's own pen [3.2(a)]. And his Library is in part a showcase of the published proof of the claim. All the English scholars whom Joseph Hall had named in 1624 to illustrate his assertion are represented among Dr Plume's books.

From the 1560s to the 1640s England's two universities had poured forth an unprecedented number of graduates — indeed, unequalled until the late 19th century — and Plume's father can stand for the hundreds of benefactors who raised the fine new collegiate buildings, patronised the university presses and maintained the new grammar schools in which this spate of scholars was prepared. This phenomenon in English education had been halted by civil war; subsequent allegations that the violence of the 1640s had originated in the universities, the nurseries of social change and of the puritanism that "preached your Majesty out of your kingdom" [64(a)] prevented any recovery. But it was Plume's intention in 1704 to help re-establish the Church's learned ministry. A minister of religion, it had been said, should be "the eye of the world" for his congregation, "to disperse the clouds of ignorance and give light . . . " [35]. For this the clergy of Colchester and Chelmsford already had the Harsnett and Knightbridge libraries; the clergy of the Maldon area should have one, too.

He inherited from his father rather than from Hacket the parallel English tradition of a puritan insistence on the necessity of a learned laity, the ideal of a godly commonwealth conjointly ruled by learned magistrates and learned clergy. This too had flourished from the 1560s to the 1640s, had led to the foundation of hundreds of schools, the endowment of many scholarships, an informed, high-thinking lay readership of men like Alderman Thomas Plume, of T. Knight, Robert Eyre, Thomas Windesor (encountered above) and Thomas Chese and Ruben Robinson [30(b) and (c)] who read history, law and experimental sciences as well as sermons and biblical commentaries. Hence Plume's stipulation that his professor's Observatory at Cambridge and his Library at Maldon were to be accessible to both clergy (or scholars) and gentlemen. And, mindful of his own education, he gave £20 to Chelmsford Grammar School to buy books, "for the use thereof in a Standing Library"; he proposed establishing at Christ's College "an annual exhibition of £6 towards the maintenance of one scholar educated at Maldon"; his trustees in the town were to provide schooling for six (or ten, if possible) sons of paupers; he gave the town's grammar school new premises below his Library Room.

Allied to this tradition of excellence in scholarship was the claim of the Church of England to an unbroken, continuous life from the time of the Early Church. Its scholars had been maintaining this since the 1560s, from John Fox's Book of Martyrs (see Figure 8) which set the Protestant martyrdoms of the 16th century in the context of the continuous persecution of the godly from St Stephen to his own time. The Library is well stocked with treatises written to substantiate this view [36], in which the Reformation is represented as a renaissance, not as a break with the past. But as scholarship had suffered by the Civil War, so had the historic fabric of the Church. Its monuments and its buildings had been haphazardly desecrated, its rituals and music had been abolished, its remaining wealth had been plundered. So the Restoration of the Monarchy in 1660 had to be complemented by the Restoration of the Church. Hacket and his generation, survivors from the glories of the past, and the new generation of young clerics like Plume and Tenison, had to be the rebuilders. That this remained his overriding intention is stated before his name as the opening words of Plume's Will, written in 1703:

> "God direct me in the making of my last Will as may most make for His glory, the benefit of His church and my own soul's good in the Day of His great Account".

In part it was a physical restoration. On arriving at Lichfield in 1661 Bishop Hacket began the immense rebuilding of his cathedral, devastated by siege warfare in 1644, paying for much of the work from his own resources. This is carefully and fully described by Plume in his 'Life' of Hacket, down to the solemn service of rededication and the three-day feast of celebration. Nearly forty years later Plume put as the first item in his Will a gift of £50 towards the renovation of Rochester Cathedral. His Library is, of course, his main contribution to the physical restoration work, an entire rebuilding of a church left ruinous for thirty years. These are mere gestures, perhaps, in comparison with the rebuilding of an entire cathedral but the same antiquarian intention is present in other legacies. The books are another restoration work, some 3,000 of them being related directly to that great age of scholarship preceding the Civil Wars. He also provided for the continuation of weekly lectures by visiting clergy in All Saints Church at Maldon, which as the Lecture, the Combination of Clergy and (originally) the Prophesying, had for long been a special feature of the borough's religious life. He provided also £4 a year to ensure that the old custom of public daily reading of morning and evening prayers would be maintained in All Saints.

These were still only gestures by comparison with his contribution to a restoration of the former scholarly characteristics of the Church of England's ministry. His twenty-five years as an archdeacon were a practical influence here, for he understood the poverty which prevented many clergy from maintaining any scholarly standards in their work. Tithes were at the heart of the problem. Right through the century clergy—especially archdeacons—had proclaimed the Divine Right of parsons to receive their parishioners' tithe payments. Many parishes had, however, been granted to monasteries in the Middle Ages, so that the tithes had become endowments of abbeys and when the monasteries were dissolved between 1536 and 1540, the payment of tithes, instead of reverting to the parish clergy, had become the income of the layman who bought ex-monastic properties from the Crown. This was the "Great Plunder" or "Banquet of the Church" in which great landowners and the Crown fed themselves from the wealth that (some said) belonged by right to the clergy. "Sacrilege", said Hacket, referring to this impropriation of wealth dedicated to God's use, "was the sin of the Reformed Churches and as the Papacy was much to blame to endure no Reformation in the Church . . . so many Protestants were more to blame who reformed not out of conscience but covetousness" [3.2(b)]. At one extreme it was argued that titheimpropriation was sacrilege and brought upon the robbers of the Church inevitable retribution [see particularly 43 and 47]. At the other extreme lawyers (and some clergy, eventually) scoffed at the notion of supernatural intervention, as did one of Plume's Bishops of Rochester [11] and as did Gilbert Burnet [57]. But in practice it was the effect of this plundering of church revenues which was the real evil. Plume recalled how Dr Hacket "would bewail the Sacrilege committed upon very many poor Vicarages" [3.2(b)] because the loss of income prevented ministers from buying books to increase their learning.

Dr Plume's private attitude may have leant towards the views of Sir Henry Spelman, for in a different matter of church land of which he found himself to be in possession, he converted it all to charitable uses [39.1], but, as he made his Will, a Bill was being prepared for Parliament which would convert former church revenues, appropriated to the Crown since 1534, into the fund called Queen Anne's Bounty for increases to clerical stipends [39.3] and he had in mind similar measures to improve the incomes of the poorer clergy. £1,000 was allocated "for buying in of tythes to small livings in any great towns or villages where the Living is not worth an hundred pounds"; the household goods in his residences at Greenwich and Rochester were to be divided among any ten poor ministers of the diocese; 100 parishes were to get gifts of £1; and two clergy (the ministers of Hadlow, Kent, and Fordham, Essex) were each to receive £100. Then he altered his mind (or found he had overspent) and replaced the bounty of £1,000 with a gift of only £400 "to augment the Vicarage of All Saints, Maldon, by buying in impropriate tithes or so much glebe as may be had for the same". Perhaps Dr Plume decided that his money could be better disposed than in competing with the funds for the same purpose which would become available from Queen Anne's Bounty. His change of mind left this Library as his principal attempt to ensure that the clergy in the Maldon area and the gentry of central eastern Essex might be as learned as they had been in the years before the Civil Wars.

In the late 19th century Maldon's civic leaders wanted to celebrate famous local men. There seemed to be few worthies who were truly sons of the town except Thomas Plume, of whom the Town Clerk reported that he was its greatest benefactor but "the inhabitants . . . know little how much his thoughts dwelt on Maldon" [2.2]. In fact his thoughts were on far more general concerns and his charitable bequests were more widely dispersed than the Town Clerk would admit and in making him an historical character the Borough Council broke into the anonymity Dr Plume had intended for himself

His books do betray something of his private beliefs. They and his Will hint at High Church convictions which perhaps led a vicar of Seale in Kent to dedicate to him, as a man distinguished for piety, probity and charity, an anniversary sermon on the execution of King Charles I [37.1]; his Will and his Life of Hacket both end with an exhortation: "Come quickly, Lord Jesus, O come quickly," which he must have learned from his patron and whose particular association with the cult of the Martyr King is made clear in Hacket's own writing [3.3(a)]. He may have felt too that in the partnership of Crown and Mitre, Squire and Parson which his building so oddly represents, the secular power of the Supreme Head of the Church was inferior to the spiritual authority, juro divino, of the Church's bishops. The relationship of the tower to the library, the dominating portrait of "the English Cyprian", Archbishop Laud [38] hint at this. Yet the deliberate impartiality of his Library on the whole precludes anything more than guesswork about his beliefs and politics.

Such anonymity was his firm intention. Only that which would most make for God's glory, the benefit of His church, was, as he said, to be of importance. He used only the humblest description of himself: "Thomas Plume of East Greenwich, D.D., Minister, the most undeserving"; he required the simplest of funerals in the most remote of his parishes (Longfield, Kent); in place of the ostentation that marked some church dignitaries' obsequies he desired "but small attendance and an ordinary black coffin", burial in "a plain brick grave" which was to be unfashionably in the churchyard, not inside the chancel, and a plain black gravestone which would record of himself only: "Thomas Plume, Archdeacon of Rochester, the greatest of Sinners, O that I could say 'of Penitents' . . .". He did not require his benefactions to bear his name, although four brick houses in Dog Kennel Row at Dartford were to be The Archdeacon's Poor Almshouses, which was still only an impersonal designation. The Plume School, Plumeian Professorship, Plume Library and Dr Plume's Charity are names given by posterity. In his biography he kept scrupulously to the third person of "a Friend" and published both that and his edited version of the Century of Sermons under the name of his former patron, Dr John Hacket, excluding himself from the list of 17th-century English authors. He forbade his unnamed portrait, "now (1703) in Mr Pond's house" in Maldon, "ever to be brought into my library" and gave no further directions for its future location.

9. E. S. De Beer (ed.). The Diary of John Evelyn. 1955. Oxford University Press. Other editions (such as that in the Everyman Library) may be more accessible than this standard text, so the following entries are given under their dates alone.

9.1 April 3rd 1659: "I went to Greenwich to receive the Blessed Communion with my wife and family . . . where Mr Plume preached".

9.2 September 10th 1665 (i.e. towards the end of the great Plague in London): "Mr Plume at Greenwich on Collossians, chapter III verses 5 and 6, showing how our sins had drawn down God's Judgements".

9.3 September 16th 1666 (just after the Great Fire of London): "I went to Greenwich church, where Mr Plume preached very well on II Peter, chapter III verses 11 and 12 . . . taking occasion from the late unparalleled Conflagration to mind us how we ought to walk more holily in all manner of conversation".

9.4 April 1st 1687: Evelyn witnessed the use of St Alphege, Greenwich by French refugees (Huguenots), "the congregation consisting of about 100 French Protestant refugees from the Persecution" (by Louis XIV) "of which Monsieur de Rouvigny (present) was the chief and had obtained the use of the church after the parish had ended their own service".

9.5 February 15th 1684 and July 15th 1685: references to the foundation of Thomas Tenison's Library. It was in Leicester Square and was sold off in the mid-19th century, the associated Grammar School being moved to new premises at the same time.

10. Robert Latham and William Matthews (eds.). The Diary of Samuel Pepys: a new and complete transcription. Eleven volumes, 1970-1983. Volume X, 1983, Companion, is of historical notes and specialist entries of which many are relevant to any study of the Plume Library, especially (a) Books and (b) John Jackson (both by Dr Latham) and (c) Science (by Professor A. R. Hall).

10.1 The Diary, September 1st 1665 (whilst Pepys was staying at Greenwich with his Office during the Great Plague): "To Church [St Alphege] where a company of fine people, and a fine church, and a very good sermon, Mr Plume being a very excellent scholar and preacher".

14. Christian Huygens. Kosmotheoros, sive De Terris Coelestibus Earumque Ornatu, Conjecturae. 1699 (editio altera). The Hague. The MS note on the Library's copy, "See this Book in English A.D. 1698. K.8.8." shows that Dr Plume had this English edition, entitled The Celestial Worlds Discovered or, Conjectures concerning . . . the Worlds in the Planets. It had been lost from the Library by 1848, when the Rev. R. P. Crane listed the title in his MS Catalogue but without a shelf number.

15. Henry Denne, a puritan minister, referring to his proposals for a new form of government in 1645, wrote that he might "to many seem guilty of that crime which was held against the Apostle, 'to turn the world upside down'" and this was adopted for the title of a study of radical ideas of the Interregnum: Christopher Hill, The World Turned Upside Down, 1972.

15.2 Joseph Glanvill, Rector of Bath. Some Discourses, Sermons and Remains. (Anthony Horneck, ed.) 1681, p. 170.

16. The legacy refers to Pierre Allix, formerly Minister to the Protestant Congregation at Charenton, who fled to England in 1685. The hospitality of clergy such as Plume led Allix and his family into communion with the Church of England: his son became Dean of Ely, 1730-58. Pierre Allix' Remarks Upon the Ecclesiastical History of . . . Piedmont (1690) is in the Library. In his Will Plume thanks him "for his translation of Nectarius" (a Greek Orthodox refutation of Papal claims to imperium in the Church) which is also in the Library. Plume's concern reflects the ecumenical policy of the S.P.C.K., which set up correspondence with Reformed Churches in Europe.

17. A comparison of the Catalogue [1] with references to Irish publications in A New History of Ireland (T. W. Moody, F. X. Martin, F. J. Byrne, eds.) Volume IV, 1976, Oxford University Press, has produced this list of works in the Library:

17.1 Richard Stanyhurst. De Rebus in Hibernia Gestis. 1584. Antwerp. (An account of the Anglo-Norman conquest in the 12th century).

17.2 Dermot O'Meara, M.D (Dermitius de Meara). Ormonius. 1615. (A poem in five books on the life of Lord Thomas Butler, Earl of Ormonde and Ossory).

17.3 James Ussher, D.D., Archbishop of Armagh. Britannicarum Ecclesiarum Antiquitates. 1687. (Posthumous Latin edition; the work was first published, in English, at Dublin, 1622).

17.4 Sir Thomas Ryves, civil lawyer, Judge in the Prerogative Court of Ireland, 1617. Regiminis Anglicani in Hibernia Defensio Adversus Analecten. 1624.

17.5 A Remonstrance of Grievances Presented to His . . . Majestie in the Behalfe of the Catholicks of Ireland. 1643. Waterford.

17.6 Sir James Ware. De Hibernia. 1654. (A major treatise on Irish antiquities. In 1639 he had published De Scriptoribus Hiberniae which is not in the Library).

17.7 Nicholas French, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ferns. The Narrative of the Sale and Settlement of Ireland. 1668. (English version of a Latin book, attributed to Bishop French, published at Louvain, 1668).

17.8 Edmund Borlase. The History of the Execrable Irish Rebellion. 1680.

17.9 Richard Lawrence. The Interest of Ireland in its Trade and Wealth. 1682. Dublin.

17.10 Roderick O'Flaherty, Ogygia. 1685. (Described in A New History of Ireland, IV, p. 375, as "the most learned exposition of Gaelic loyalty to the Stuart dynasty and to the concept of the Kingdom of Ireland").

17.11 William Atwood. The History and Reasons of the Depender y of Ireland Upon the Imperial Crown of the Kingdom of England. 1698.

18. Plume's Will (as of 1703) states "I have erected over the school . . . a library room". The inscription on the bell for the tower states that it was cast at Whitechapel in 1699 (Cecil Deedes and H. B. Walters, The Church Bells of Essex, 1909, privately printed, p. 332), which suggests that the tower's rebuilding was at least nearing completion by then. The bell is no longer in the tower.

19. Gift recorded in the Maldon Borough Chamberlains' Accounts for 1699 (Essex Record Office D/B 3/3/320). Another item in that account roll is for money spent on bell ringing "when the Bishop of London was in Towne". That may, perhaps, be associated with some formalities at the completion of the building work, for St. Peter's parish lay then within the Diocese of London, the Bishop's licence had been necessary c. 1620 for the use of the former church as the grammar school and this new building, partly under the control of trustees, would require some permission from the Bishop as well.

20. Portraits of Edward IV, Edward VI, Mary I, James I, Charles I and James II, and of Archbishops John Whitgift and William Laud and Bishop Brian Duppa. Another "divine" is unidentified: was he Dr Hacket?

21. P. S. Baldwin, D. Ettey, K. E. G. Harris (eds.). A Catalogue of the Petyt Library at Skipton, Yorkshire. 1964. Coulthurst Trust, Gargrave, Yorks.

22. Gordon Goodwin. A Catalogue of the Harsnett Library at Colchester. 1888.

23. Andrew Clark. "Notes on the Knightbridge Pamphlets", Essex Review XII (1903), pp. 238-242. Dr Clark noted 130 folio volumes and "over" 280 others, "a dozen to twenty items often being bound together". A number of the titles are additions to Knightbridge's 1677 bequest.

24. Jean E. Mortimer. "The Library Catalogue of Anthony Higgin, Dean of Ripon (1608-1624)", Proceedings of the Leeds Philosophical and Literary Society, X, pp. 1-75.

25. C. B. L. Barr. "The Minster Library", in G. E. Aylmer and R. Cant (eds.), A History of York Minster, 1977, Oxford University Press, pp. 500-501;

26. E. N. Da Andrade. A Brief History of the Royal Society. 1960, p. 18.

27. The term "title" is used here deliberately. There are some 5,000 volumes, excluding additions made after 1704 and some of the volumes contain two or more distinct titles, though few have so many as some of the volumes in the Knightbridge Library [23 above]. By "title" is meant a work which has its own title-page, its own page-numbering, even if it is by the same author as other titles bound with it. The Catalogue [1] does not contain all these titles and the present Librarian has in progress a slip-index of those which [1] omits.

28. The counting of titles on which this study is based was done with independent checks by volunteers over the period 1960-1968, with additions to the yearly totals from the present Librarian's slip-index. It cannot be guaranteed to provide an exact grand total of Dr Plume's books; that and the analysis of the Library's stock is provisional but it is a very large sample and can be claimed to provide a sufficiently accurate impression.

29. John Danes, Master of Maldon Grammar School c.1620-1639. Publications:

29.1 Paralipomena Orthographiae, Etymologiae, Prosodiae, Una Cum Scholiis. 1638.

29.2 A Light to Lillie: Being An Easie Method For The Better Teaching And Learning Of The Latine Tongue. First edition 1637; 2nd, 1643; facsimile of the 1st by the Scolar Press, Menston, Yorks, 1968.

30. Most wills refer only in general terms to books. Where specific works are stated their titles are still, often, too vague to permit exact identification of the edition. Three Maldon wills with reasonably specific references to books are those of: (a) John Shipton, gentleman, 1619 (E.R.O. D/ABW 36/346) naming 21 titles, some of which correspond closely to titles in the Library; Thomas Chese, town clerk, 1625 (E.R.O. D/ABW 47/252) naming 4 titles of which 3 could be in the Library now; and (c) Reuben Robinson, gentleman, 1665 (E.R.O. D/ABR 7/75) whose books included some, "as well printed as manuscript" but unnamed, which he bequeathed to his "learned friend Dr Henry Power" of Elland, Yorks, a member of Plume's college and whose Experimental Philosophy, 1664, is in the Library (but bears no trace of Robinson having been its owner in 1664-5).

31. George Gifford. "Preacher of God's Word at Maldon" c. 1575-1600.

31.1 Fifteen Sermons Upon The Song Of Solomon. 1598.

31.2 Sermons Upon The Whole Book Of The Revelation. 1599.

The following [31.3-31.7] by Gifford are not in Dr Plume's Library:

31.3 A Brief Discourse of Certaine Points of the Religion . . . Which May Be Termed The Countrie Divinitie. 1581.

31.4 A Sermon on the Parable of the Sower. 1582.

31.5 A Dialogue Between a Papist and a Protestant. 1582.

31.6 A Discourse of the Subtill Practises of Devilles by Witches and Sorcerers. 1587.

31.7 A Dialogue Concerning Witches. 1593.

32.2 Jiri Louda and Michael Maclagan. Lines of Succession: Heraldry of the Royal Families of Europe. 1981, Table 92.

33. Thomas Bray, D.D., founder of the S.P.C.K. (1698) and the S.P.G. (1701). Essay Towards Promoting All Necessary and Useful Knowledge, both Divine and Human, in all parts of His Majesty's Dominions. 1697. No copy of this is extant in the Library.

34. Joseph Hall, D.D., Dean of Worcester. Columba Noae . . . ("Noah's Dove Bearing an Olive Branch to the Storm-Tossed Ark of Christ"). 1624.

35. Thomas Oxley. The Shepheard. 1609. (A sermon preached before the clergy of the diocese of Durham, 1608). Sig. B4 verso.

36. Books on the historic continuity of the Church of England from the Early Church to the Post-Reformation period which are in the Library:

36.1 John Fox. The Second Volume of the Ecclesiastical Historie, Containing the Acts and Monuments of the Martyrs. 1610.

36.2 Matthew Parker, D.D., Archbishop of Canterbury. De Antiquitate Britannicae Ecclesiae . . . 1605. Hanover. (Latin edition of 1st edition, 1572).

36.3 James Ussher. See [17.3].

37. Literature illustrative of Dr Plume's veneration for Charles I (but note here [37.7] and [3.3(b)] above):

37.1 Maximilian Buck, Vicar of Seale, Kent. An Anniversary Sermon on the Martyrdom of K. Charles the First of Blessed Memory. 1702. (Preached 30 January 1702). Printed dedication to Dr Plume: "Viro morum probitate, vitae pietate, Erga egenos charitate, insigni, hoc quale qualecunque opusculum gratitudinis ergo quam humilime D. D. D. Q."

37.2 The Pious Politician or Remains of the Royal Martyr. 1684. (Collected writings of King Charles I).

37.3 Basilika. The Workes of King Charles the Martyr. 1662.

37.4 Christus Dei, the Lords Annoynted . . . wherein is proved, that the regall monarchicall power of our Sovereigne Lord King Charles is not of humane but of divine right . . . 1643. Oxford.

37.5 Stratoste Liteutikon. A Just Invective Against Those of the Army . . . Who Murthered King Charles I. 1662. By Dr John Gauden, who claimed to be the author of Eikon Basilike: the Portrait of His Majesty in His Solitudes and Sufferings.

37.6 Sir Roger L'Estrange. A Memento Directed To All Those That Truly Reverence the Memory of King Charles the Martyr. 1662.

37.7 John Milton. Pro Populo Anglicano Defensio. 1651. (A note in Plume MS 30: "Dr Robert Creighton told me he thought it brake Salmasius' heart that he could not answer Milton's book in such Latin as he wrote").

37.8 Claude de Saumaise (Salmatius). Ad Johannem Miltonum Responsio. 1660.

38. Peter Heylyn, D.D., Prebendary of Westminster Abbey. Cyprianus Anglicus: or the History of . . . William [Laud] . . . Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. 1668.

39.1 Plume's Will states: "The Farm of Iltney in Munden, having been (as I have credibly heard) a Chantry land given to Maldon but alienated by King Henry the Eighth, I now restore and give for ever to the town of Maldon for the uses following . . . ", which were: maintenance of the Library and School Room, a weekly lecture (Lady Day to Michaelmas), payment to "the most Godly indigent poor" attending the lectures, the maintenance at school of 6 to 10 poor boys (fees and clothing expenses). Plume knew that a chantry had been an endowment to religious uses and he was putting land which had been part of that endowment back into the most suitably religious usage possible in a Protestant nation.

39.2 Plume's action reflects the teaching of Sir Henry Spelman [47.1, 47.3] who asserted "a due Veneration to Persons, Places and Things consecrated to the service of God" [47.4(a)]. Spelman claimed that disaster fell providentially upon those who even unknowingly committed sacrilege, as for example in the area he first investigated, within 12 miles radius of Rougham, Norfolk, where 24 manor houses had been continuously occupied since 1536 without change of family, whilst 22 other properties which had been monastic estates to 1536/40 had "flung out their owners with their names and families . . . thrice at least and some of them four or five times . . . by fail of issue or ordinary sale but very often by grievous accidents and misfortunes". See also [61.1(a)] below.

39.3 Queen Anne's Bounty. Statutes of the Realm 2-3 Anne, c. 20, November 1704. The preamble of the Act recites the undesirable results of clergy being dependent "for their necessary maintenance upon the good will and liking of their hearers . . . under temptation of too much complying and suiting their doctrines and teaching to the humours rather than the good of their hearers . . . " and the Act set up a fund from which clerical stipends could be augmented by applying to it the Crown revenues called First Fruits and Tenths which had once been customary payments to the Papal Court and had been appropriated to the Crown by acts of parliament of 1532-1534.

40.-58. Books and pamphlets concerning tithes:

40. William Tooker, B.D., Archdeacon of Barnstaple, Chaplain to James I. Of the Fabric of the Church and Churchmen's livings. 1604. (2 copies).

41. George Catleton, B.D. Tithes Examined and Proved to be Due to the Clergy by a Divine Right. 1606.

42. Sir James Sempill of Beltrees. Sacrilege Sacredly Handled, That Is, According to the Scripture Only; for the use of all Churches in general but more especially for those of North Britaine. 1619. (2 copies). Sir James was a Scots lawyer and his book relates specially to the impropriation of church revenues in those parts of Scotland which had become controlled by Presbyterian landlords.

43. Foulke Robartes, B.D. The Revenue of the Gospel is Tithes, Due to the Ministry of that Word by that Word. 1613. Cambridge.

44.1 John Selden, Barrister of the Inner Temple. The History of Tithes. 1618. An MS note inside the cover reads: "Vide the Author's Submission made January 28 A.D. 1618 for the publication of this book. H. ix. 7 in Dr Tillesley's Preface to the Reader". See [44.3] below. This MS note refers to the licensing of publications. This book was subsequently banned.

44.2 Richard Montagu, B.D., Archdeacon of Hereford, Chaplain to James I. Diatribae upon the First Part of the Late 'History of Tithes'. 1621.

44.3 Richard Tillesley, D.D., Archdeacon of Rochester. Animadversions upon M[r] Selden's 'History of Tithes'. The second edition, newly corrected and much augmented, together with an Answer to an unprinted pamphlet divulged against the former edition. 1621. Oxford.

44.4 Stephen Nettles, B.D., Rector of Lexden, Vicar of Gt Tey and of Steeple, all in Essex. An Answer to the Jewish Part of Mr Selden's 'History of Tithes'. 1625. Oxford. (2 copies). This book led to the author's ejection from his rectory in 1644 "by force of arms" by Parliamentarian troops.

45. William Walker. A Sermon Preached in St Paul's Church, London. 1629.

46. Bartholomew Parsons, B.D., Rector of Ludgershall, Wilts. The History of Tithes or, Tithes Vindicated to the Presbyters of the Gospel; begun in a Visitation Sermon. 1637. Oxford.

47. Sir Henry Spelman, legal antiquary. See also [39.2] above. Publications relating to tithes and impropriations:

47.1 De Non Temerandis Ecclesiis. 1646. Oxford. 3rd edition. (The first was of 1613 and the theory is very similar to that of F. Robartes, [43] above).

47.2 An Apology of the Treatise 'De Non Temerandis Ecclesiis' Against a Treatise by an Unknown Author, written against it in some particulars. Also his Epistle to Richard Carew, Esquire, of Anthony in Cornwall concerning Tithes. 1646.

47.3 The Larger Treatise Concerning Tithes. 1647. Posthumously published by Jeremiah Stephens, whose own Tithes Too Hot To Be Touched is not in the Library. Another account states that "in this Discourse he [Spelman] asserts Tithes to the Clergy from the Laws of Nature and of Nations; from the commands of God in the Old and New Testament; and from the particular Constitution of our own Kingdom." [47.4(b)].

47.4 Reliquiae Spelmannianae. The Posthumous Works of Sir Henry Spelman, K[nigh]t Relating to the Laws and Antiquities of England. Publish'd from the Original Manuscripts. With the Life of the Author. 1698. Oxford and London. (a) The Life, C2 verso; (b) The Life, C3.

48. John Warner, D.D., Bishop of Rochester, 1637-1666. Church Lands Not To Be Sold. 1648.

49. Robert Boreman, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Plume MSS, bundle G/19: draft booklet of 28pp. of The Countryman's Catechisme. The published version of 1652 is not in the Library. The MS title-page reads: "The Countriman's Catechisme or The Minister's plea against the Countriman's Appeale. Wherein is discovered the Dutie and Dignities of ministers, their right to Tithes and the danger of altering so legall a Custome which hath its warrant from the Word, from the practise of all Ages and confirmed by the fundamentall Lawes of the Realme. These shalbe Delivered in 10 Sections to the capacitie of the Vulgar who may collect, if they puruse them with good attention, that in petitioning against Tithes they both highly displease God and endanger their own Liberties . . . Anno Christi 1648".

50. Christoper Elderfield, Chaplain of Sir William Goring of Burton, Sussex. The Civil Right of Tythes. 1650.

51. Anonymous author. A Brief Discourse of Changing Ministers' Tithes into Stipends or into Another Thing. 1654.

52. Cornelius Burges, D.D., Parliamentary Preacher at Wells Cathedral, 1650s. No Sacrilege nor Sinne to Aliene or Purchase the Lands of Bishops. 1659. He purchased estates formerly of the Deanery of Wells and of the Bishop. His arguments on the nature of sacrilege and his eventual fate — poverty and death by cancer of the neck — are discussed by Isaac Basire [55] below.

53. Rice Vaughan, Barrister of Gray's Inn. First-fruits and Tenths out of Ecclesiastical Livings, according to their present improved values, No Present For Caesar: or the arithmetick of Dr Thomas Bradley, in his book called 'A Present For Caesar Of 100,000l. in hand And 50,000l. A Year' examined and found not to amount (by inversion) to 000,000l: 00s. 05d. a year. 1657. This is an adequate précis on the title-page of the short work that follows. Dr Bradley's book (which must be of 1656-7 but is listed in the Short-title Catalogue as of 1658) is not in the Library, nor his abject justification of it — Appello Caesarem, 1661, York — which followed the Restoration of Monarchy and Church of England.

54. William Prynne of Swanswick, Bencher of Lincoln's Inn.

54.1 Ten Considerable Questions Concerning Tithes. 1659. An example of the over-exaggerated, unbalanced writing which, in some 200 tracts that poured off his pen, kept Prynne in prison, often in solitary confinement, savagely punished by Crown, Parliament and the New Model Army in turn for some twenty years. In this tract he denounces petitioners for the abolition of tithes as "anti-Christian, Jewish, burdensome, oppressive to the godly, conscientious people of the nation, excited, encouraged thereunto by disguised Jesuits, Popish priests, friars and Romish emissaries to starve, suppress, extirpate, our Protestant ministers, Church, religion, and bring them all to speedy confusion".

54.2 A Gospel Plea (interwoven with a rational and legal) for the Lawfulness and Continuance of the Antient Setled Maintenance and Tenths of the Ministers of the Gospel . . . with a satisfactory answer to all cavils and material objections to the contrary. 1660.

THE PLUME LIBRARY

MALDON

TIMES OF OPENING

TUESDAY	-	-	2 p.m. till 4 p.m.
WEDNESDAY	-	-	2 p.m. till 4 p.m.
THURSDAY	-	-	2 p.m. till 4 p.m.
SATURDAY	-	-	10 a.m. till noon

The Library may be opened at other times upon application to the Librarian. (Tel. Maldon 55912)

Thomas Plume, (1630-1704) the founder of the Plume Library, was born at Maldon in Essex. He was educated at King Edward VI Grammar School in Chelmsford, and at Christ's College, Cambridge. He took his B.A. and M.A. in 1649 and was admitted B.D. in 1661 and D.D. in 1673. In 1658 he became Vicar of Greenwich, a preferment he held for the rest of his life (Richard Cromwell, Lord Protector, was Patron of the living), and he received the sinecure of Merston in Kent, and also became Rector of Little Easton. In 1679 he was installed Archdeacon of Rochester.

Although his family was Presbyterian, Dr. Plume was a clergyman of the Church of England and subscribed to the Act of Uniformity in 1662.

The Plume Library is housed in the upper room of a handsome brick building erected by Dr. Thomas Plume on the site of St. Peter's church in Maldon, adjoining the 13th Century Tower. The nave of the church had collapsed in 1665. During his lifetime, he installed his library in the upper room and the Grammar School in the lower room. At his death in 1704 he bequeathed all his books and pictures "for the use of the minister and the clergy of the neighbouring parishes who generally make this town their place of residence on account of the unwholesomeness of the air in the vicinity of their churches". (Malaria was prevalent in parts of Essex at that time). He directed "that any Gentleman or Scholar who desires, may go into it, and make use of any book there, or borrow it, in case he leave a vadimonium with the Keeper for the restoring thereof fair and incorrupted within a short time."

The Plume Library has come down to us almost intact, owing to Dr. Plume's foresight in providing adequate endowment for its upkeep. He also directed that twenty shillings per annum should be paid out of the estate to buy new books.

Dr. Plume did not, as far as is known, have any of his own writings published. He did, however, publish "A Century of Sermons" by Dr. John Hacket, Bishop of Lichfield. Plume had long been a friend of Hacket's and on his elevation to the See of Lichfield in 1661, Hacket employed him to buy books and to transact business for him in London. At his death, Hacket left two MS volumes of sermons to Plume which he edited and published as "The Century", prefixing a life of the author. A copy of this work is in the Library.

There are some 8,000 books and pamphlets now in the Library, approximately 6,000 of which had been collected by Thomas Plume. This is a personal working library of a scholar of wide interests in all fields of learning, and represents the ideas and immense advances made in the 17th century. Theology, chemistry, astronomy, medicine, history, travel and natural history are all represented.

Amongst his many charitable bequests, he founded the Plumian Professorship of Experimental Philosophy and Astronomy at the University of Cambridge. He is mentioned in the diaries of Samuel Pepys and John Evelyn who visited his church at Greenwich to hear him preach.

He died on November 20th, 1704 and is buried at Longfield in Kent. He desired that he might be given the following epitaph:

Hic subtus iacet Archdiaconus Roffensis,
Peccatorum maximus utinam et poenitentium.
Nomen quaere in libro vitae,
Veniet iterum qui me in lucem reponet dies.

(Under here lies an Archdeacon of Rochester,
The greatest of sinners, O would he were also the greatest of penitents.
Seek his name in the Book of Life,
The day will come that restores me to the light).

THE UNITED PARISHES of ALL SAINTS' with ST. PETER'S

A BRIEF GUIDE

Brief Guide to the Parish Church of All Saints

Maldon, Essex

INTRODUCTION

This Little Guide is designed to afford the visitor some help in appreciating this ancient parish church. Its sub-divisions and sub-headings are arranged to enable him to find, with ease, information about any one part of the church if time precludes a patient and thorough perambulation.

No Guide can however do justice to a building such as this. The visitor can only appreciate the parish churches of England if he will use his imagination. They are not museums. They are the spiritual homes of many generations of local inhabitants, and the spiritual loyalties of past and present generations are instinct in the building. Each addition to the structure has been an occasion of personal satisfaction to those who made it. Every memorial expresses pride or pious affection, however ancient, and beautiful things have found a home here because men and women have loved God and been glad to adorn the place in which they worshipped Him.

This parish church belongs to Maldon. Her citizens in home-spun, leather doublet, broadcloth, silk brocades, crinolines and tweeds have knelt before its altars, slept through sermons, and come here to be christened, married and buried. It is their church and they welcome you, the visitor, in the hope that by your sympathetic understanding you will for a moment share with them their love for a building into which is woven the faith and experience of hundreds of years.

THE PARISH

The earliest part of the present building (part of the tower) is 13th century, the South Aisle 14th, the Chancels 15th and the Nave 18th century. But there are evidences that there was an earlier church upon the same site. In 1189, by a charter of Richard I, both the churches of All Saints' and St. Peter's (the latter situate at the top of Market Hill) were conveyed by Robert Mansell to the Abbot and White Canons of Beeleigh, which Abbey he had founded a few years previously. When however, by a decree of the Lateran Council of 1215, monastic foundations that had "appropriated" benefices were ordered to provide resident, perpetual, vicars, and to assign a competent provision for their maintenance, it was quickly evident that the endowments of the two vicarages were insufficient and they were perforce united in 1244 and have remained so ever since. Until the 17th century services were held in both churches, but after 1655, when the body of St. Peter's fell down, the church of All Saints has served the needs of both parishes. The registers of both parishes (St. Peter's from 1556, All Saints' from 1558) have been carefully preserved. The parishes have been part of the Dioceses of London (until 1846), Rochester (1846-77), St. Alban's (1877-1914) and Chelmsford (since 1914). The living is in the gift of the Bishop.

EXTERIOR

The most attractive view of the church is from across the High Street where the SOUTH FRONT is seen at its best with its tower, its tiled roof of mellowed hues, and its windows of dissimilar tracery.

The Tower is 13th century and is the oldest part of the existing church. It is unique in its triangular design and supports an hexagonal, shingled spire, from which projects a 15th century canopy and Sanctus Bell, the latter inscribed "Fynn Ricardus et Sueyn Johannes". Richard Fynn was Vicar here about 1390. The tower has recently been refaced with flints and during the restoration re-used stones were discovered which confirm the existence of an earlier Norman church.

In the Buttresses are niches which doubtless originally held statues, but of which no record now remains. At the beginning of this century figures of notable persons connected with Maldon were placed in them. Commencing from the West Door (itself 13th century) these figures are :—

1. St. Mellitus — Bishop of London until exiled by the East Saxons in 616.
2. St. Cedd — Bishop of the East Saxons in 653. He built his "cathedral" church of St. Peter (which may still be seen) at Bradwell-on-Sea, a few miles away.
3. Brithnoth — A local Saxon Leader who was the hero, albeit unvictorious, of the famous Battle of Maldon fought against the Danes in 991.
4. Sir Robert D'Arcy — His 15th century tower is now the Moot Hall. He probably built the D'Arcy Chapel in the church.
5. Dr. Thomas Plume (d. 1704) — Archdeacon of Rochester. He made many benefactions to the town including his library which is now very valuable. This library (open to visitors) is housed on the upper floor of the building built by Dr. Plume against the tower of St. Peter's church at the top of Market Hill.

Passsing round the church to the EAST END two large niches in the wall catch the eye. These were constructed to form shelves within a small Priest's Vestry that was at one time built out from the present wall and was entered from the church by the little door still known as "The Priests Door".

From this corner of the churchyard a glance should be spared for the adjacent Vicarage. This is a 15th century house, the timber frontage of which was opened to view during restoration in 1902. It has undoubtedly always been the Vicarage and some of its interior timbers were probably standing trees at the time of the Norman Conquest.

The NORTH WALL of the church, apart from 15th century grid-irons protecting some ancient windows, possesses little of interest. The red brick portion is early 18th century (see date on hods), and the vestry is quite modern.

INTERIOR

of the church indicates the fluctuating tastes of successive generations.

The Church of the 13th Century probably reached eastwards only to where the screen now stands and was bounded, to the north and south, by walls on a line running from the north corner of the tower to the present pulpit, and along the site of the south arcade. The westernmost arch of this arcade, slightly larger than the rest (note the carved west respond) was then a single opening into a south transept, or porch, incorporating the present little South Doorway of which the door may well be the original.

In 1330 the Church was Enlarged by adding the South Aisle, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The crenellated arch, now within the church, marks the then east wall. The new aisle was opened to the nave by the construction of the Arcade with its beautiful Purbeck Marble pillars and gracefully sprung arches. Then, or later, a corresponding arcade and aisle were built on the north side of the church, but no trace now remains.

The 15th century saw the extension of the church eastwards by the construction of the present chancel and chapels, and the present Bracer Arch was constructed from the material of the old east wall of the aisle.

Decay or destruction of the Nave and North Aisle led to the rebuilding in 1728 of this part of the church in its present, unattractive, form; the "improvers" obliterating the aisle and covering the whole area with an expanse of flat ceiling that terminates at the chancel in square, modernised pillars.

Galleries, built in 1839, ran round the west and north sides of the nave. The outline of the upper windows can be seen in the north wall above the present windows.

THE TOWER

Six bells replaced an original three in 1699, the octave being completed by the addition of two more in 1922. An inscription on the older bells reads:

"When first this steeple three did hold.
They were the emblems of a scold;
No music then, but now shall see
What pleasant music six will be".

The "Good Shepherd" window was presented by the Sunday School scholars in 1908.

SOUTH AISLE

This aisle, built in 1330, is noted for its rich wall arcading, being some of the finest 14th century work in the county. Note the frequent introduction of the cinquefoil in the carving, confirmning the tradition that the D'Arcy family were concerned with the decoration, if not with the building, of this aisle. (D'Arcy arms include three cinquefoils). Faint traces of colouring can be seen on the easternmost stone decoration. The two groups of sedilia (wall seats) probably mark the sites of chapels at different floor levels, used by Chantry Priests or the Holy Trinity Guild (1377). The doorway between leads down to a small 14th century crypt which may have been a charnal house at one time—a record of 1862 states it to have been seen full of human bones. The vaulting of the roof and groining of that over the stairs is of particular beauty. The Crypt contains fragments of one of the several splendid tombs which (according to Weever and Holman) were once in the church.

Windows: The mullions and tracery of these windows are 19th century restorations, but are reputed to be faithful reproductions of earlier windows. They are all dissimilar and of great beauty. The glass is modern and memorial: 1, (over doorway), to Canon I. L. Seymour, Vicar 1917-47. Subject—The Heavenly Adoration; the Chalice and Book symbolise the Ministry of Sacrament and Word. 2, to Arthur Gepp, Susan Gepp and Dorothy Gepp. Subject—The Good Samaritan. The illustrated panels in the side lights represent the practice of the parable's teaching in different periods and circumstances. 3, to Frederick Arthur Taylor, Churchwarden 1965-74. Subject—St. Peter, barges and sail making. 4, to 2nd Lieut. Cecil Desborough Bright, killed in 1916. Subject—The Christian Warrior.

Note the crenellated arch, within the church, which marks the original end of this aisle, also the wooden tie beams in the roof.

THE CHANCEL and CHAPELS

All three were built in the 15th century.

THE SOUTH CHAPEL (D'Arcy Chapel) was built by, or in memory of, Sir Robert D'Arcy. A D'Arcy Chantry Priest was provided in 1445. The East Window, with its strikingly fine tracery, is 14th century (if not earlier), and was transferred to its present position from the east end of the aisle when the chapel was added. Memorial glass (to Henry Coape, Esqre.) was inserted in 1848. This was damaged beyond repair in the 1939-45 war and the salvaged inscription and five family shields were incorporated in the present window in 1950.

The Washington Window was presented in 1928 by the citizens of Malden, Massachusetts (founded by Joseph Hills of Maldon). It is to the memory of Lawrence Washington, the great-great grandfather of George Washington, who was a loyalist clergyman ejected from the Rectory of Purleigh (Essex) and was buried somewhere in this churchyard in 1652. A book contains the names of those Americans who subscribed to this window. The three figures in the window represent "Colonisation" (St. Nicholas), "Patriotism" (St. George), and "Freedom" (St. Joan of Arc). The "Four Evangelists" figures in a nearby window were removed from an earlier east window in the main chancel. They are of Flemish workmanship, and recall the flourishing trade existing at one time between Maldon and the Low Countries.

On the walls are two monuments of interest. One on the south wall, despoiled of its brasses, commemorates Thomas D'Arcy who was of the bodyguard of Edward IV and Henry VII, and was the son and heir of Sir Robert D'Arcy. He died in 1485. The other, on the east wall, is to Henry (d. 1614) and Annestacy (d. 1634) Wentworth who left property in the town as a benefaction to the church. This property is still administered as the "Wentworth Charity".

Gravestones in this chapel bear many inscriptions to the Coe family, one in particular carries a very fine sculptured achievement of arms. Another stone bears the quaint inscription "Here lyeth enterred ye body of Thomas Harris, Esq.—Passenger".

THE CHANCEL. Like the chapels this is 15th century, but any interesting features were effectively hidden or destroyed during the restoration in 1800. The top of a rood stairway may be seen at the south-west corner, indicating the existence of an earlier rood screen. Some of the panels of this old screen were, in the last century, situated where the altar rails now stand. Two panels are incorporated in the panelling at the west end of the south aisle. The present screen was erected in 1925. The carving of the stalls and altar is the work of the late Mr. S. Marshall of Coggeshall, Essex. The glass of the east window is a memorial to the Rev. E. R. Horwood (Vicar 1850-1901). The upper part represents the worship of the four-and-twenty elders (Rev. iv), the lower portion that of the Holy Church, Martyrs, Apostles and Prophets. Two fine Carolean chairs stand in the sanctuary.

THE NORTH CHAPEL. (St. Katherine's). At present used to house the organ, it is to be hoped that one day it will be restored to use as a chapel. It was originally used by the St. Katherine's Guild in the 15th and 16th centuries. Its east window at one time bore an escutcheon with the arms of Vere, Earl of Oxford, to whom the adjacent building, now the Blue Boar Hotel, once belonged.

The small ancient door is known as the Priest's Door; by it is a 15th century piscina; above it is the Cammock Monument erected in 1602 to the memory of Thomas Cammock who had two wives and twenty-two children. His second wife, Francis Rich, is said to have eloped with him and that, being pursued, they swam their horse across the River Crouch at Fambridge and were married in this church.

The original part of the organ was obtained, second-hand, from the Hanover Rooms in 1838. The Lion and the Unicorn indicate the Royal Patronage of the Rooms.

THE NAVE

This, with its ugly ceiling, was rebuilt in 1728 at the expense of the north aisle. It contains many things of interest.

The Pews are the gifts of members of the congregation during the last twenty years, those of the south aisle being the gift of the late Mr. F. H. Bright, who was churchwarden for over 50 years. They are mostly inscribed, and the carving is the work of Bryan Saunders of Coggeshall.

The Pulpit, also carved by Bryan Saunders, was erected in 1951 as a memorial to Edward Thomas Baker, for 27 years churchwarden. The carved panels mark his many public interests in Maldon and the County. He was six times Mayor of Maldon.

The Lectern was a gift of the Freemasons of Maldon in 1866.

The Font, erected also in 1866, replaced an octangular, 15th century, font which lay in the crypt for thirty years and was then given away (1896) to St. Saviour's Church, St. Albans.

Hatchments. Three memorial hatchments on the north wall bear the arms of (left to right) (a) Coe, a bachelor, (b) Piggott (a widow, née Coape), (c) Coape.

Royal Arms. The Royal Arms of Charles II were put into the church at the time of the Restoration and are now on the north wall.

Fragments of 16th century arms of Henry VIII (one impaling the arms of Jane Seymour) may be seen in the west window. At one time a north window bore the arms of the Kings of England before and since the conquest.

Numerous other monuments, and gravestones, of interest will be seen in various parts of the church. Near the font is the grave of Edward Bright (d. 1756) who weighed 44 stones. Unfortunately only one small ancient brass remains, in the north gangway.

A List of Vicars from 1244 may be seen at the west end of the church.

NOTE.—The ancient Organ was rebuilt in 1967 at the cost of over £7,000. A gift to the Organ Fund is deeply valued.

To have spent half-an-hour in studying this ancient church is to have bridged many centuries in thought and realised the essential oneness of many generations. The link that unites past and present here is this enduring House of God. Do not leave it without a prayer to Almighty God to whose glory it stands.

Go in Peace and may God bless you and your loved ones in Paradise and on earth.

Dear Elizabeth

Believe it or not in our "Essex Churchman" for November, is an article on Thomas Plume. Surely this is your ancestor? So here it is. I wish you could come over for Mr. Gray's lecture on the 20th, but assuming that you are unable to, I am asking him to send you a copy of his lecture-reading.

I hope all goes well with you both and you have a happy Christmas with your family, which I am spending with one of my sisters.

CONFESSIONS OF A PARISH PRIEST

I have a confession to make. I am a trendy, gimmicky, left-wing priest. I had not realised this until the ever vigilant eye of the media uncovered my secret fault, but now my sin is daily before me.

I had the rather trendy idea that Baptism should be a public service, conducted with a congregation present. After all the 1662 Prayer Book says so, and the bishop says so. I even thought it would have helped me to sell this trendy notion to my customers if the Royal Family set an example. I realise now of course that this would be carrying things too far. Mea Culpa.

With the idea of worshipping God in the words and thought-forms of my own generation instead of those of our forefathers, most of whom have been dead for rather a long time, I have permitted a few modern services and hymns. I was enticed by the idea of providing Christian sentiments for our patriotic hymn of praise to our monarch. I realise now that this is not just gimmickry; it verges on blasphemy. Lord have mercy.

Although not an out and out pacifist, I was left-wing enough to believe that in this day and age there were better ways of settling something like the Falklands Crisis without sacrificing hundreds of lives for a bit of land that many of the residents don't want to live in now anyway. It seemed to me wrong to want to celebrate the "victory" in a public service. However, somebody quite important has pointed out that in harbouring thoughts like these, and in wanting to pray for our enemies, I am not reflecting the mood of the country. Sorry.

Well, there it is. I feel better now it is out in the open. From henceforth, God Save the Establishment. Let us continue to bless residual Christianity with services which reflect the mood of the country, and confound the knavish tricks of all trendy, gimmicky left-wingers. Then perhaps we may return to that form of religion so neatly described in that 18th century masterpiece, "Religion for a Gentleman". One, that is "designed to show how religion could be presented so as to avoid vexing the susceptibilities of the ordinary citizen. It is to make no disquieting demands upon the time or the purse, or prejudice the ordinary well—conducted gentleman."

Yours (not too) sincerely,
Christopher Sly

HONEY AND WORMWOOD

The Voice from the Pulpit in Dr Plume's Day

As controversial as a Union leader and as popular as a rock star: in the age before the arrival of the mass media few people could have enjoyed the type of following that the 17th century preacher could arouse. The best of them could fill churches to overflowing, reduce audiences to tears and top the publishers' best-seller lists. Today it is difficult to reconstruct or even to understand the depth of interest and enthusiasm of response at the time, and the countless volumes of sermons which filled the book-seller's shelves lie largely neglected in specialist libraries.

Victor Gray, the County and Diocesan Archivist, has been delving into the pages of one such library. The Plume Library, bequeathed to the people of Maldon nearly 300 years ago by Thomas Plume, sometime resident of the town and Archdeacon of Rochester, contains many of the theological best-sellers of the age of Pepys and Cromwell, and it would be quite wrong, thinks Mr Gray, to write them all off as the dry dust of a dead age. "There is a lot that could—and should—have been left unsaid and unpublished", said Mr Gray, "but the best of them were stylists, capable of considerable dramatic effects, verbal fireworks and crowd manipulation".

Some of the spirit of the period will be recaptured in a lecture-reading to be given by Mr Gray at All Saints Church Hall, Maldon on 20th November at 7.30 pm as this year's Plume Lecture in memory of the town's great benefactor, himself a fashionable preacher whom Pepys went to hear at Greenwich. Admission to the lecture is free.

To maintain a weekly Lecture from Lady-day to Michaelmas for ever, allowing the several neighbouring Ministers of Dengy, or Rochford-Hundred, that shall be chosen to preach it; Ten shillings for their Sermon, and two shillings for his own and his friends dinner, if the Trustees order it, upon Wednesday or Saturday, as they shall agree, in the Upper Church at Maldon. But upon the first Wednesday or Saturday in August he allows twenty shillings out of Iltney-lands towards the dinner of them that shall there meet, and take the accounts of the tenants, let and set the farm; consider the repairs of the houses &c.—Allowing the Sexton ten shillings for each of the two quarters for tolling the bell for the Lecture, to be paid 10 s. upon Midsummer-day, and 10s. at Michaelmas. And likewise 10 s. at each of the said quarter-days to be divided among the most godly indigent poor of Maldon that repair to this lecture, prayers, and sermon most constantly. Further, out of the profits of Iltney-lands he orders the Trustees to keep six, or ten poor Boys out of Maldon or Munden, and allows the Master 20 s. per ann. towards their clothing. And he allows the Minister of All Saints parish, or whosoever reads the Prayers before the Lecture and at other times, 20s. per quarter, out of Iltney estate for ever, for constant reading morning Prayer daily about eleven o'clock and five at night, or sooner in winter. As to his LIBRARY just mentioned above,

He gave to this Library all his Books and Pictures, (except his own Picture in Mr. Pond's house) together with his large Map of the world. And desired all his manuscript Papers, of his own hand, to be carefully preserved in the study of the said Library. He directed that the keeper of his Library should be a Scholar that knows Books, M. He shall suffer no stranger to be there alone without a voucher for his honesty, and his own promise not to carry away, or deface any book. The Library-keeper is to give 200 l. bond at least not to imbezzell his books, nor to lend them out without sufficient pawn to his Trustees at Maldon, to buy the same again. The Governors of Sion-college London for the time being are to take account thereof, for which he left that college 20 s. per annum out of Iltney estate for ever. And because new Books are daily printing, he wills that twenty shillings per ann. be paid out of his Iltney estate yearly for ever, to buy any that shall be most desired by the Library-keeper.—His Salary is forty pounds a year, and a dwelling house near the Library.

Two thousand pounds that he had in the East-India Company he ordered to be imployed for making good his Charities as to the Work-house for the poor of Maldon, Munden, and neighbour parishes, and other Charities specified in his will. —Having bequeathed in it before 200 l. and all the residue of his personal estate not disposed of, for purchasing and providing Tenements, and a Stock for setting the Poor of Maldon, and some of the Poor of Munden, to work. Dear Mrs Witheridge,

Thank you very much for your kind letter and for the photographs. These will have to go into the "archives" together with the notes on Dr Plume and his family.

Repairs to the Tower started before Christmas, I am happy to say. The Department of the Environment have agreed to pay 85% of the total cost, a very generous grant which leaves us with a manageable amount to collect. The repairs, I am told, will take six months, so it will be some time before the Library will be open to the public.

I hope you had your white Christmas. We have had a very mild winter so far this year, and the spring primroses are already blooming in the garden.

My best wishes to you and to your family,

Dear Mrs Witheridge,

How very kind of you to donate your school lecture fee towards the repair of St Peter's Tower. It is indeed a lovely link between kindred from the seventeenth and the twentieth centuries.

Your photographs have been framed beautifully and look very well as they stand together on the plain polished surface of the bureau in the photograph. When the portrait of Dr Plume is returned to the Moot Hall by the picture restorers I will have it photographed again for our records and if it is well done, will send you a copy.

The Library building has now been repaired to the satisfaction of the Department of the Environment and we are now awaiting the completion of the Tower. We had collected almost the whole of the original estimated sum, but unfortunately the builders found that the battlements were in a far worse condition than had at first appeared, so a further £5000 has to be collected. However, this is not an impossible sum and we are hoping that all the work can be done now, before the scaffolding comes down. To take it down and re-erect it when the necessary money is collected will cost so much more. Your gift is therefore doubly appreciated.

We have had a dreadful spring, bitter winds and heavy snow in many parts of the country. It is warmer now, but continuous rain has meant that nothing much can be planted in the garden as the soil is too wet. However, with weather like this things can only improve. Thanking you once again for your most kind donation.

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Dr & Mrs Witheridge,

Thank you for your lovely Christmas letter and all the warm thoughts expressed within it.

We too have had snow and blizzard conditions all over the country. It is beginning to go, here in the South, but it is still very cold. However the children enjoyed it and were out with their toboggans everywhere, and the trees and hedges looked as though they had come from a picture in a fairy story.

Looking back I see with dismay that it was May when I wrote to you last and promised you a further picture of the portrait of Dr. Thomas Plume. Well, it is now back and hanging on the wall in the Moot Hall, but unfortunately it has been put back into its frame wrongly, so I am waiting to hear that it has been reframed before having it photographed. The background to the figure of Dr Plume is still very dark, even after cleaning, but it is just possible to see the chair on which he is sitting, and the book in his hand. The old tear in the canvas has also been repaired and is now almost invisible.

Repairs to the library building and to the tower were completed in August, and we were able to reopen the library in September. An Open Day was held to let everyone know that we were back, and proved to be quite successful. Only £1000 has to be found to complete the payments for the work done. Unfortunately the upper part of the tower (or turret) stair has had to be removed; it would have proved too expensive to restore. Access to the roof of the tower is now by stair then ladder. I have not yet climbed it – perhaps in the summer!

We will be spending Christmas with my brother and his family in Woodford, and we are hoping to go to the ballet at the Festival Hall (in London). In past years it has been the custom to take the whole family (Grandparents, uncles and aunts included) to see a pantomime at Christmas-time, but the boys have grown out of that kind of entertainment now, so we must wait until they provide us with some grandchildren before we have the excuse to go again.

You have an exciting year to look forward to, with the prospect of the wedding of your son. I hope that you and your family have a very happy Christmas together with best wishes.

Dear Mrs. Shacklock,

Dr. Thomas Plume

Further to my letter of 24 February, I have now completed the search in the registers and have found the correct Arms of the above.

An examination of the pedigrees recorded during the Heralds' Visitations revealed one of three generations, contained in the Visitation of Essex of 1664. This is headed by Thomas Plume of Great Yeldham and descends to Samuel Plume of Maldon, Co. Essex, and Thomas Plume, the sons of Thomas Plume of Maldon by Ellen, the daughter of Philip Cason. I think that Thomas Plume, the second son of Thomas and Ellen, can be identified with Dr. Thomas Plume whom your enquiry concerns.

The Arms recorded for the above family were Argent a bend vair counter vair Or and Gules cotised Vert with a crescent (the cadency mark of a second son) for difference, and the Crest On a mount Vert a Talbot sejant Gules collared and lined Or upon its shoulder a crescent as in the Arms.

An earlier pedigree showing Dr. Plume's antecedents was recorded at the Visitation of Essex of 1634, and the same Arms and Crest, but without the cadency mark, are here tricked.

A pedigree of four generations contained in the Visitation of Suffolk of 1664 traces the descent of Edmund Plume of Hawkedon Hall from Robert Plume of Yeldham. This family was allowed the same Arms as the Essex Visitation family, but on an ermine field with the bend cotised Gules not Vert.

I could find no official record of the panache of five feathers, so assume that it was adopted without authority as a device punning on the surname.

Yours sincerely,

THE PLUME LECTURE, MALDON, NOVEMER 12th

by Elizabeth Sellers

William Plume. Descended from a North Essex family. Born at Maldon 1630. Educated, Chelmsford Grammar School and Christs College Cambridge. BA 1648, MA 1649, BD 1661, DD 1673. Incumbent of Greenwich and Merston 1661. Archdeacon and Prebendary of Rochester 1673.
Died 1704 and buried at Longfield, Kent.

Described by Bishop Hackett of Lichfield, in 1667, as "Mr Plume whp buys books for us". Will bequeathed books, maps and pictures to the library "I have erected over the Schoole at Maldon" and provided for a stipend and a house for the library keeper.

The annual memorial lecture for 1981 given by Dr William Petchey was entitled "The Intentions of Dr Plume". After providing his audience with a brief account of Dr Plume's life and the content and purpose of the library, Dr Petchey proceeded to discuss particular sections of the library and the evidence that they provide about Plume's possible intellectual preoccupations. He also introduced his hypothesis that the library was not a scholar's working collection and that it was complete at his death, there being no intention to increase its size.

From this point Dr Petchey became extremely discursive and ranged freely among his chosen themes so that what follows here is a brief summary disentangled with difficulty from a complex and most interesting lecture.

Firstly the library - large for a parochial library of the time and the only one housed in a specially built and furnished room. There are over 7,000 titles, many bought second hand, from all the printing presses of Europe and in a number of different languages. This covers a very wide range of subjects but is lacking some of the the newest books of the late seventeenth century, it was intended to serve the local clergy many of whom lived in Maldon rather than the unhealthy marshland parishes of the area.

Secondly the collections of books within the library - which reflect two of the intellectual preoccupations of the age which are likely to have been of particular concern to Dr Plume.

There are books on Neoplatonism which may reflect the influence of Christs College and of the tutor with whom Plume may have lived in Lincolnshire in 1649-1660 when there is no record of his whereabouts.

Two other sets of books cover sacrilege - one set relates to the sacrilege committed by the execution of Charles I in 1649 and the other to the sacrilege which came about through the sale of monastic lands at the dissolution which resulted in lay rectors receiving tithes which belonged to the church.

This was a most absorbing lecture, both in content and presentation. Illustrated by a few carefully thought out visual aids it provided a good example of the way historical scholarship can combine inferences with figures and scanty, rather unpromising facts, to provide new insights into hitherto unconsidered aspects of life in the past.

England

Dear Sir:

My wife Elizabeth is a descendant of the Plumb/Plume family that lived in Essex in the 17th and 18th centuries. One of her relatives was Dr. Thomas Plume, who was born in Maldon and established the Plume Library there at the time of his death in 1704.

Dr. Plume was Vicar of Greenwich from 1658 until his death. He was also Archdeacon of Rochester for twenty five years before his death. We are wondering if there is any plaque or memorial listing the former Archdeacons that would include the name of Dr. Plume. Perhaps there is a history of the archdiocese that mentions him.

Mrs. Witheridge and I are planning a trip to Britain in May and are hoping to see Rochester Cathedral. We'll be arriving in London on May 14, and after a week in the London area we'll be hiring a car for three weeks and driving through England, Wales, and Scotland. Our plan is to start with several days in Essex, and on the way there from London on Saturday, May 21, we'd like to stop in Rochester. If there are any references to Dr. Plume in the Cathedral or in any publications, we'd appreciate seeing them. Would there be someone we could talk to that day, either at the Archdeaconry or at the Cathedral? It's hard to say at this point just when we would arrive, but it might be noon or early afternoon.

We hope you'll be able to drop us a brief note in the enclosed envelope. If we do not hear from you before we arrive in England, we'll try to call you on the phone. Thank you for your kind assistance.

Yours sincerely,
David + Elizabeth Witheridge

Dear Mr. Witheridge

Thank you for your letter of the 21 April. I hope that this reaches you before you leave for England. Dr. Plume was in fact Archdeacon of Rochester from 1679-1704 and his name is still revered in these parts because of certain charities that he founded which are still of great benefit to some of the local clergy. It will be a delight to meet you on the 21 May, but I have a meeting with clergy over lunch and into the afternoon so the sooner that you can get to Rochester on that Saturday morning the better. That should not be too difficult because the drive from London is no more than an hour and a half depending on which part of London you are coming from. Perhaps you would like to give me a ring once you are in England and we can arrange a time for us to meet at the Cathedral. You may also like to see our house as Dr. Plume was the second Archdeacon to live in it. I also have a full list of Archdeacons dating from 1096 and will let you have a copy of that. Any more information I can unearth in the meantime I will also pass over to you.

Looking forward to meeting both you and Mrs. Witheridge.

With all good wishes

Yours sincerely

and Mrs. Turnbull
The Archdeaconry
Rochester, Kent ME1 1SX
England

Dear Mr. & Mrs. Turnbull,

It has been over two months since we returned from our trip to Britain, and we're still not caught up on all the things needing to be done after our trip. We both arrived home with very bad colds, which lasted several weeks. Then we found they were in the midst of a severe drought and heat wave here, and this has only recently ended. So with our colds and the excessive heat our energy level was very low, and we haven't completed all our letter writing, as you see.

You were very kind, Michael, to collect all the items related to Dr. Thomas Plume. We are very grateful, and we have enjoyed reading them all, especially his will. We are sorry that we couldn't arrive before you had to leave for your meeting, and we know you stayed home even longer than you should have. As we explained to Mrs. Turnbull, the car we were supposed to hire hadn't been returned on time, and they took us way out to their Heathrow office for one like it, which delayed us 45 minutes.

However, we greatly enjoyed our visit to the Archdeaconry. You were a most gracious hostess, Mrs. Turnbull, and we loved being in the house where Dr. Plume had once lived. Those pictures are a pleasant reminder of our visit, and we thought you'd like to have copies.

A couple of days later we visited the Plume Library in Maldon and had a delightful chat with the Director of the Library Margaret Shacklock. This was our second visit there. In 1980

Mrs. Shacklock gave us a small photographic copy of Dr. Plume's portrait that hangs in the Moot Hall; but we couldn't see the original then, as it was in London being refurbished. So this time we did see the portrait and took Elizabeth's picture beside it. They tell us in Maldon that Elizabeth is the only living relative of Dr. Plume's whom they are aware of.

We thought it was an interesting coincidence, Michael, that we were having lunch with the Rev. John Witheridge and his wife Sarah when you telephoned to tell them about your being named the new Bishop of Rochester. That is a great honor, and we do congratulate you. We saw John and Sarah and their children about a week later at a Witheridge get-together at the home of his uncle, Harry Witheridge, in Virginia Water.

Again we want to thank both of you for your kindness in putting us a little more closely in touch with Dr. Plume and his career and memory.

Very sincerely yours,
David + Elizabeth Witheridge

Dear David

It was very nice of you to write and to send the photographs in memory of your visit to us. I am very sorry that it proved impossible for us to meet personally but I know how much Brenda enjoyed meeting you. And what a coincidence that I should ring John Witheridge just at the time you were having lunch with them.

I am afraid my change of job means that we shall be leaving this lovely house and all the memories of the Plume's and their successors but I hope that you know that you will be welcome in Rochester if ever you visit this country again.

Brenda joins me in sending our very best wishes to you both.

Yours ever sincerely

Dear Sir:

My wife Elizabeth is a descendant of the Plumb/Plume family that lived in Essex in the 17th and 18th centuries. One of her relatives was Dr. Thomas Plume, who was born in Maldon and established the Plume Library there at the time of his death in 1704.

Dr. Plume was Vicar of Greenwich from 1658 until his death. He was also Archdeacon of Rochester for twenty-five years before his death. An article about Dr. Plume states that "since the thirteenth century at least, Longfield Court had been the official country residence of the Archdeacon of Rochester" and that "Dr. Plume is buried in the churchyard of Longfield, near Dartford, adjoining the south wall of the church." Dr. Plume also specified the inscription to be placed on his tombstone.

Mrs. Witheridge and I are wondering if the tombstone for Dr. Plume is still in the Longfield churchyard. We are planning a trip to Britain in May and we should greatly appreciate seeing this stone if it is there. We'll be arriving in London on May 14, and after a week in the London area we'll be hiring a car for three weeks and driving through England, Wales and Scotland.

Our plan is to start with several days in Essex, and on the way there from London on Saturday morning, May 21, we'd like to stop in Longfield. It's hard to say at this point just when that would be, but perhaps it would be between 10:00 and 11:00 a.m. Would the church be open, and would you or someone else be there to speak with us briefly?

We're also wondering about the "Longfield Court" mentioned in the article about Dr. Plume. Is that a building that is still in existence and one that we might see when we are there?

We hope you will be able to drop us a brief note in the enclosed envelope. If we do not hear from you before we arrive in England, we'll try to call you on the phone.

Thank you for your kind assistance.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Witteridge, 25th. 4. '88

So very pleased to hear from you and concerning your roots here.

Dr. Plume's tomb still stands here proudly as our only claim to fame, with a window to his memory placed by Cambridge University, last century. Dr. P. had founded the first chair in Astronomy at Cambridge. The churchyard is pleasing in its own way, as, existing in a not very wealthy village over the years, it retains a simplicity that allows honest and friendly worship and fellowship to flourish.

Longfield Court disappeared about 12 years ago to make way for new houses, immediately South of the church.

I shall certainly look forward to meeting you on 21st. May. If I am not hovering around the church, please call in at the Rectory, pretty well opposite.

May you enjoy safe and interesting travelling.

With very kind wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Dear John,

We had intended to write to you much sooner than this to thank you for your kindness in welcoming us to Longfield and showing us around the church and churchyard. However, we are very much behind in everything. We both arrived home with very bad colds, which lasted several weeks. Then we found they were in the midst of a severe drought and heat wave here, which has only recently ended. So with our colds and the excessive heat our energy level was very low, and we haven't completed all our letter writing, as you see.

We had a wonderful time on our trip and were able to do almost everything we had planned. We drove 3,000 miles through England, Scotland, and Wales without a bit of car trouble. We especially enjoyed being with our many relatives and friends.

Enclosed are copies of the pictures we took at Longfield. They are a pleasant reminder of our visit there. It was good of you to show us Dr. Plume's tomb and the window in his memory.

A couple of days later we visited the Plume Library in Maldon and had a delightful chat with Emgrath Shacklock, the director. This was our second visit there. In 1980 Mrs. Shacklock gave us a small photographic copy of Dr. Plume's portrait that hangs in the Moot Hall; but we couldn't see the original then, as it was in London being refurbished. So this time we made a special point of seeing the portrait, and we took Elizabeth's picture beside it. EPW's notes on an excerpt from a book published 1978 by Phillimore, London.

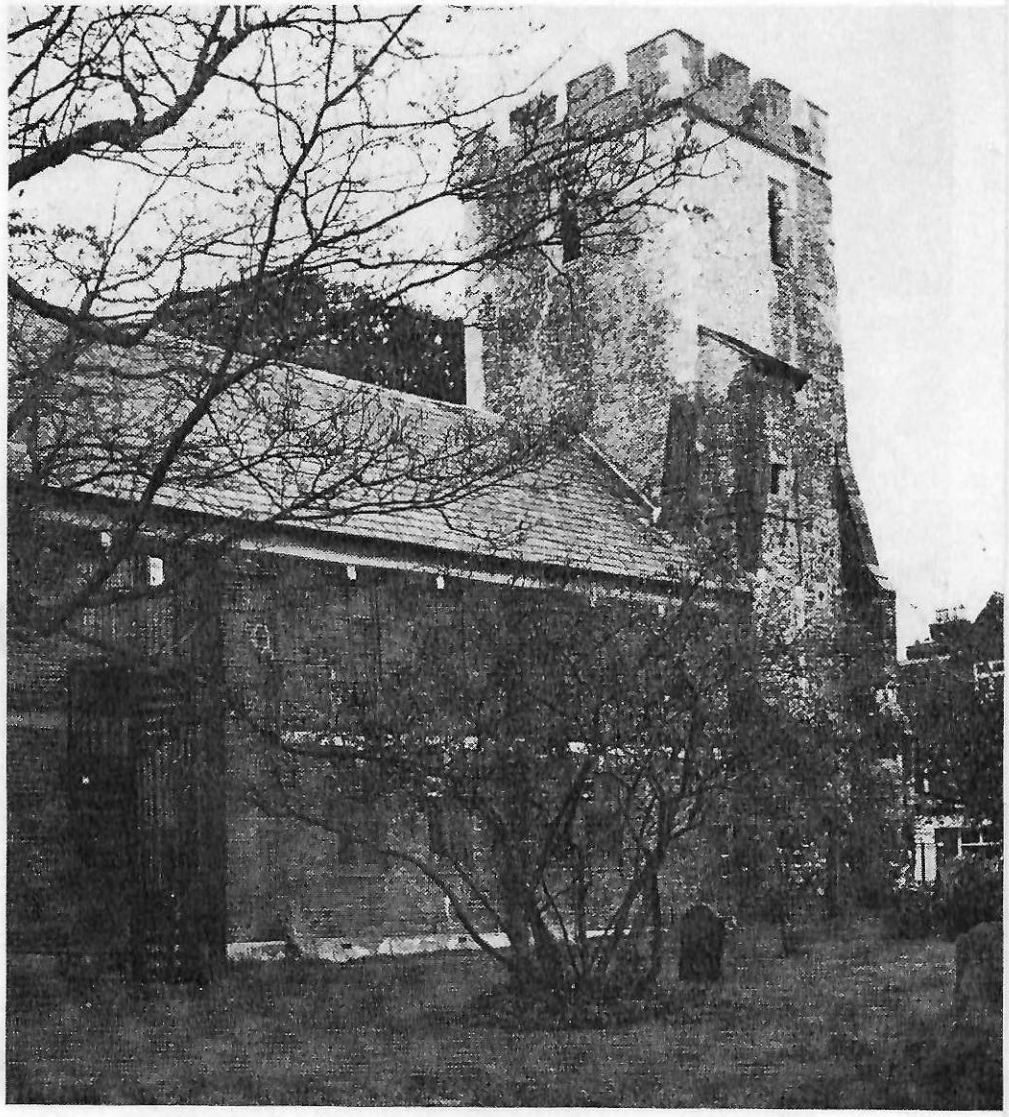
Edwards, Arthur Charles History of Rees

Pearce, Thomas (1630-1704)

Archdeacon of Rochester, born in Malden and educated at Felsted Grammar School and Queens' College, Cambridge. Vicar of Greenwich from 1658 until his death. Noted preacher, but mainly remembered for his benefactions: founded the Plumian professorship of Astronomy at Cambridge, rebuilt Malden Grammar School and left his valuable library to the people of Malden.

The Plume Library Maldon



A stranger to Maldon, climbing steep Market Hill and being confronted at the crest by the worn edifice of St. Peter's Tower, could be forgiven for assuming that the entire building was a church.

In fact only the tower now remains of the original St. Peter's built in the 13th Century. (The nave itself finally collapsed in 1665).

The present building now houses the Essex County Lending Library on the ground floor and on the first floor can be found one of Maldon's treasures, the second oldest public library in England, the famous Plume Library donated to his beloved town by Dr. Thomas Plume on his death in 1704.

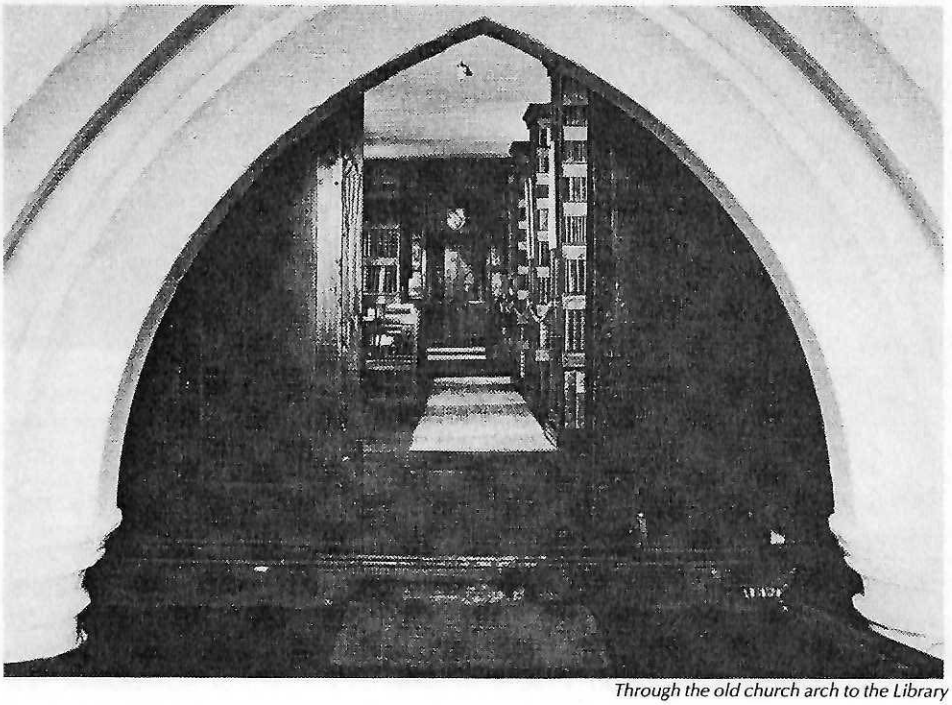
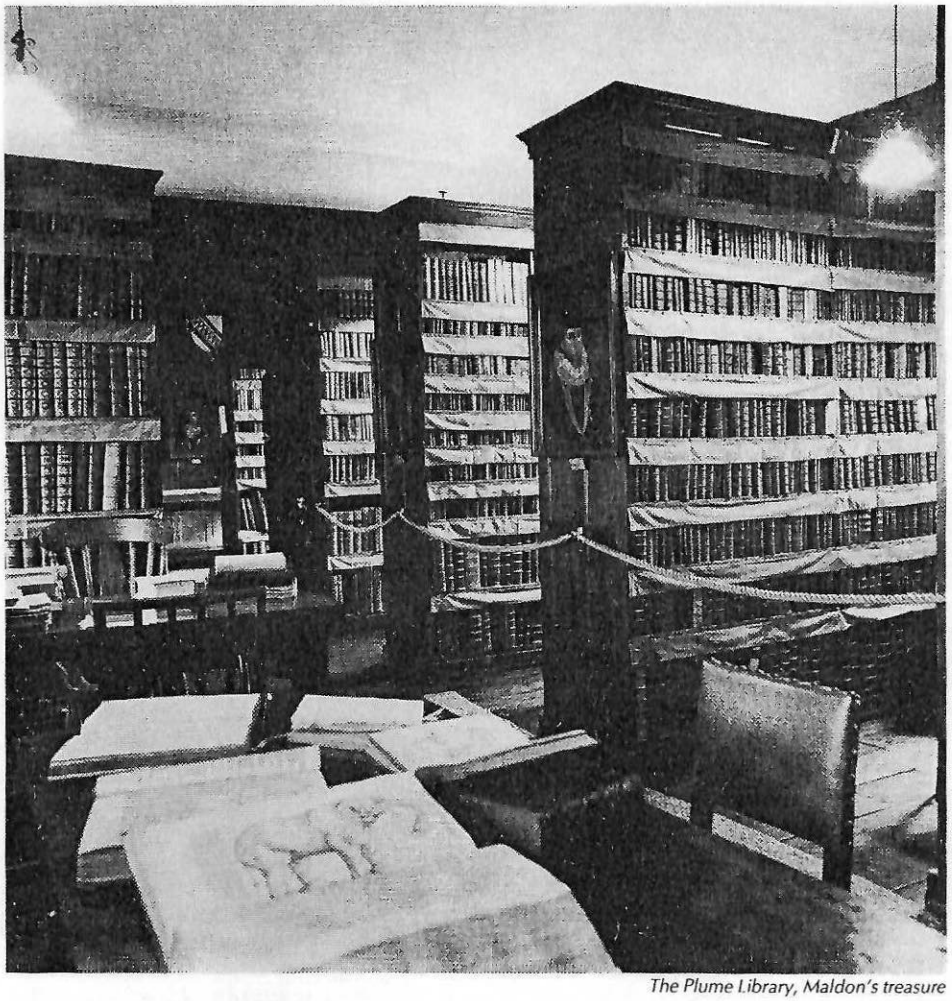
Thomas Plume was born in Maldon and baptised in All Saints Church in August 1630. His father, having been an alderman of the ancient and Royal borough of Maldon, is shown in the old Moot Hall records in 1653 as "Thomas Plume, gent, the oldest and most ancient alderman of the said Burrough Towne of Maldon". (And also a Cambridge graduate).

Young Thomas was educated in Chelmsford at the King Edward VI Grammar School and Christ's College, Cambridge where he eventually founded the Plumeian Professorship for Astronomy and Natural Philosophy.

It is interesting to note that while he was the Vicar of Greenwich the Royal Observatory was established there in 1675. Hence the large number of studies on Astronomy in his Library (including those of Kepler and Galileo).



Through the old church arch to the Library



The Plume Library, Maldon's treasure

He took his B.A. in 1649 at the age of 19 then in 1658 he was appointed the Vicar of Greenwich on the wishes of the New Lord Protector, Richard Cromwell (the son of Oliver Cromwell). Thomas Plume became a Bachelor of Divinity (BD) in 1661 and a Doctor of Divinity in 1673. Then at the pinnacle of his career in 1679 he became the Archdeacon of Rochester at the age of 49.

Although living in Greenwich and Rochester for most of his life, he never forgot the town of his birth.

Dr. Plume built the present brick building adjoining the tower to serve as a Grammar School on the ground floor, and to contain his library on the first floor.

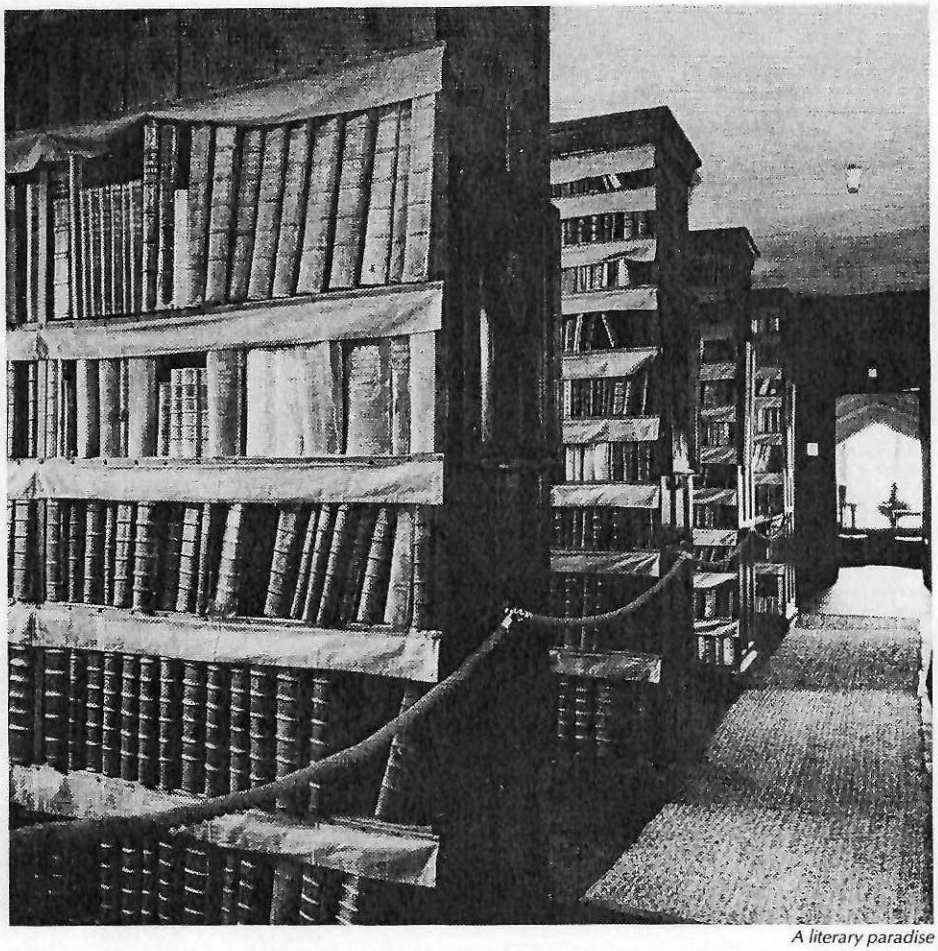
He made many local bequests in his Will, including a fund for the support of his library for the town, and is often, and justly, referred to as Maldon's famous benefactor!

The Library

To enter the library we must climb the turret staircase to the first floor lobby room.

From here you step under the original arch of the old church, which led to the nave, and back into a 'time capsule' containing the literary world of the 17th Century. Here the visitor is greeted by an abundance of old panelling, paintings and thousands of books — a literary paradise indeed.

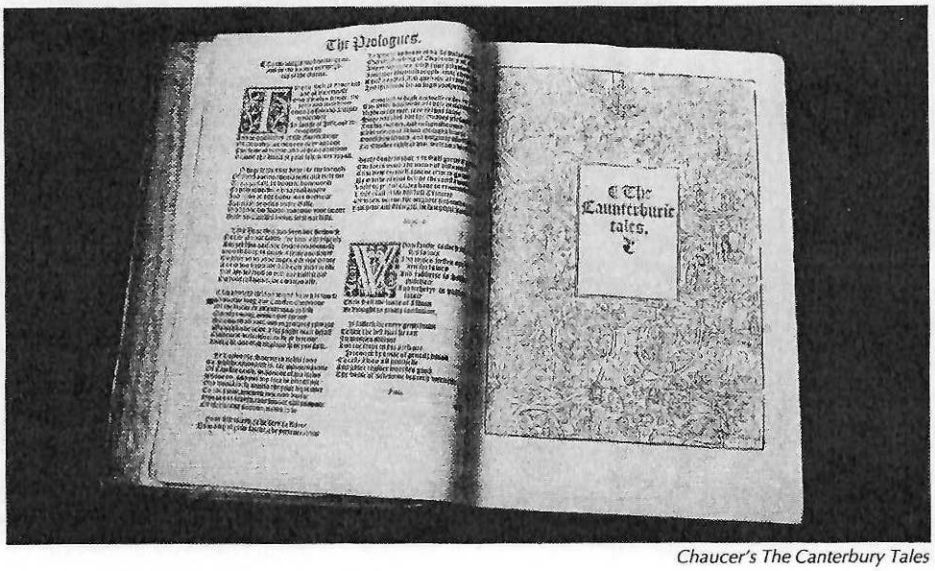
Dr. Plume's library consisted of approximately 7,000 books mainly of the 16th and 17th Centuries, including 1,500 printed pamphlets, and manuscripts and paintings.



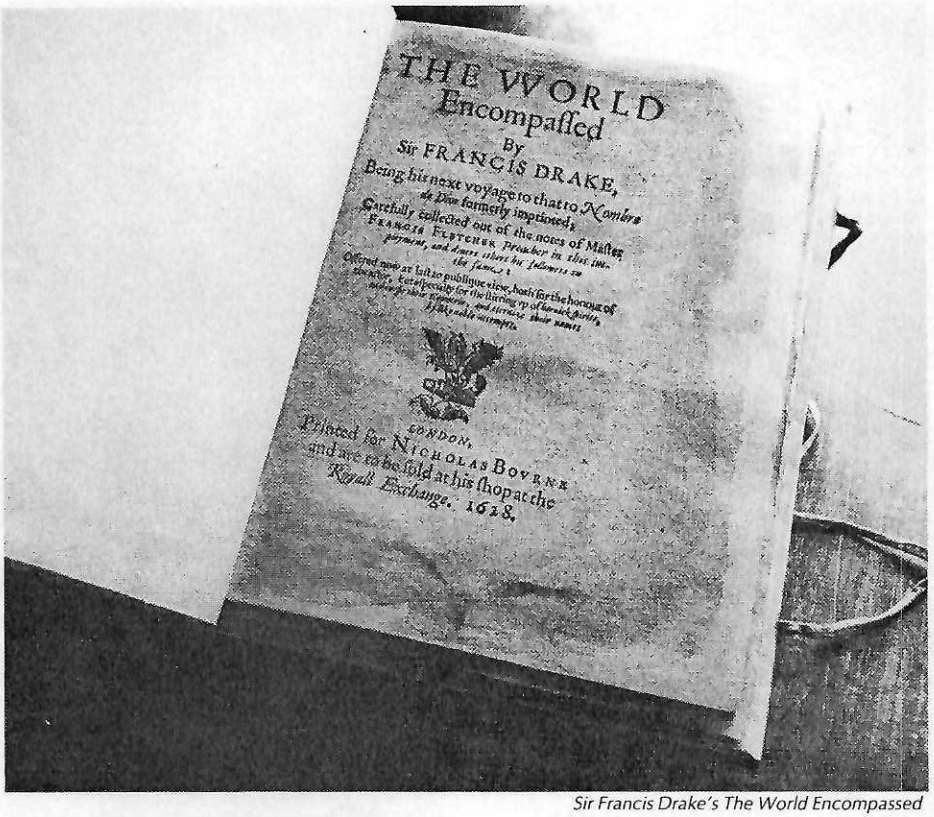
A literary paradise

Although many are, naturally, of a theological nature, there is also a large number on Astronomy, Medicine, Mathematics and History, Geography, Pharmacy, Law and the Sciences.

Among some of the 'rare gems' to be discovered here are "The World Encompassed by Sir Francis Drake" 1628, "History of the World" by Sir Walter Raleigh 1614 and "Paradise Lost" by John Milton 1667.



Chaucer's The Canterbury Tales

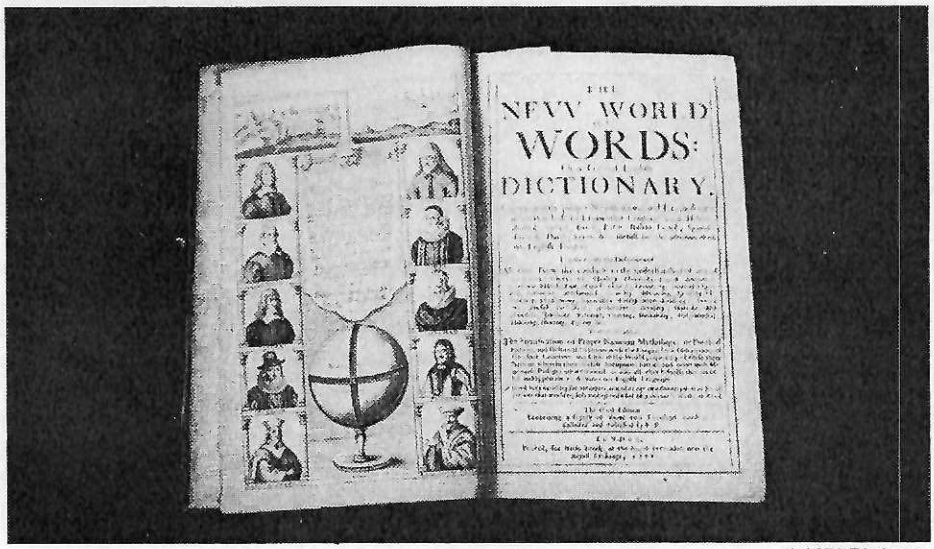


Sir Francis Drake's The World Encompassed

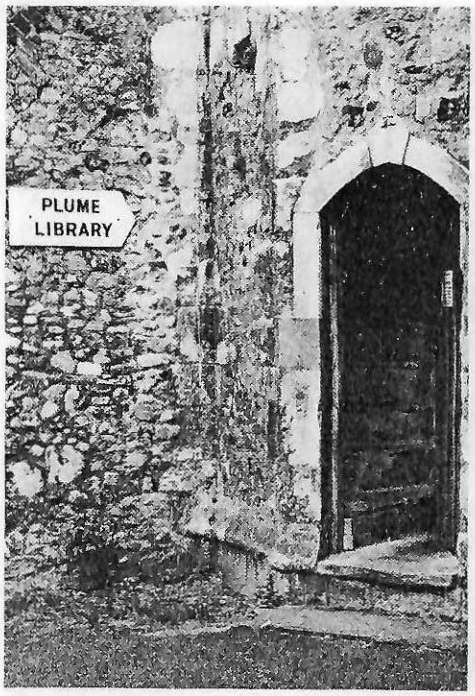
Approximately 2,000 books have been added to the library since Dr. Plume's time, including many volumes from the libraries of the late Dr. Salter of Tolleshunt D'Arcy and the late Mr. R. E. Thomas of Beeleigh Abbey.

When the visitor is surrounded by so much to see and read it is best to seek the advice of the librarian, Mrs. G. B. Shacklock, who has been in charge of the library since 1970, and is also the secretary to the Plume Trust. (The group who administer the library).

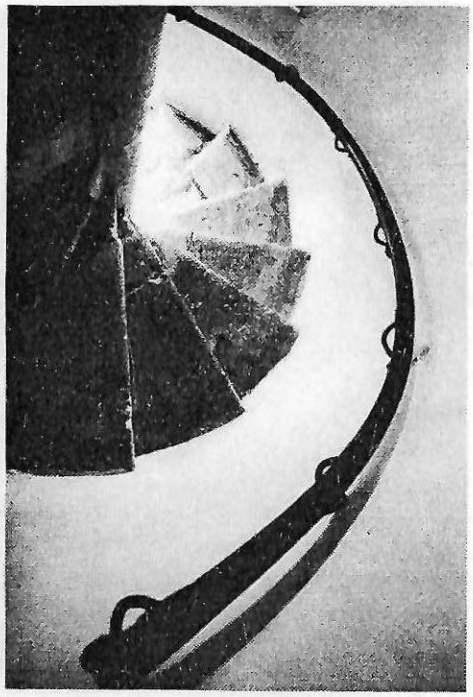
She is always happy to guide visitors to points of interest within the library, especially if this is their first visit and they are unaware of the literary treasures to be discovered.



A 1671 Dictionary



The entrance to the library: through the tower.



The circular stone staircase leading to the Library

Others may be content to be left looking at the old paintings which seem to have come alive from our history books.

The books are well looked after by the librarian and her assistant who open the library on three afternoons a week and Saturday mornings.

With so many old editions under their care, contained within a relatively small area, only a limited number of people can enter the library at the same time and of course some editions must be handled very delicately indeed.

Old Dr. Plume would be very satisfied with the loving care lavished upon his books.

For those interested enough to wish to look upon the likeness of the good Doctor, then they should visit the Moot Hall where his portrait hangs to this day in the former council chamber. He had stated in his Will that his portrait should not hang in the library.

Evidently an important man in his day, certainly a rich one, he achieved the accolade of praise as a preacher by being mentioned by Pepys and Evelyn in their diaries in 1665/66. They both attended his church at Greenwich and commented on his powerful sermons, which apparently were well known in London.

Whilst many libraries have been left in Wills for the use of Boroughs in the past, the Plume Library is unusual in that a building to house it was also provided and it contained in excess of 7,000 books! Such a large collection would have been of great value in the early 18th Century and the Corporation of Maldon must have been impressed with such a wonderful gift. We in the late 20th Century are certainly privileged to look upon it.

Dr. Plume would appear to have been the most modest and charitable of men desiring to be buried in a simple grave without the usual pomp that would have been acceptable for a man of his position. His Will stated "but small attendance and an ordinary black coffin".

The Plume Trust is still in existence, the Plume Library is still established, a Plume Avenue within the town, the former Grammar School 'The Plume', the largest school in the district, and of course the Plumeian Professorship all keep alive the Plume name.

It is interesting to read therefore the Doctor's epitaph, in the churchyard at Longfield, Kent, where he was buried:

"THE DAY WILL COME THAT WILL RESTORE ME TO LIGHT AGAIN"

Perhaps he will permit us to say that his light has never dimmed in this his native Town.

An excellent booklet "The intentions of Thomas Plume" by Dr W. J. Petchey gives a valuable insight into Dr Plume and his literary world and is recommended to those who wish to know more on the subject. (Price £1.25).

Harris informed police, who had raided the house once. "They came back after the neighborhood meeting and made another bust, which seemed to solve the problem," Harris said.

The owner moved and the house was boarded up, she said. By late spring, however, the woman moved back in and resumed drug-dealing. "You can imagine the impact that had on the block," Harris said. "They were really upset."

Hasselbring didn't give up. "Molly is a person of unsurpassed energy," Harris said. "She organized again. She staged an actual demonstration at the house."

Hasselbring, a secretary for a Christian counseling center, said the experience was terrifying, but worth it. "It's not so far-fetched to think you can do something," she said. "I couldn't have done anything without our neighborhood. I feel like I've helped people to be stronger and stick up for themselves."

This folder contains excerpts selected by DEW from Philip Morant's (b. 1700) two-volume Essex County history.* The occasional page gaps appear to have been intentional. Because the original copies in DEW's file were on extra-long sheets of paper, each page here required two 8½ x 11 sheets to copy.

The entire 1768 original version of this book is available now at Internet Archive online.

INTRODUCTION.

§ 1. THE COUNTY of ESSEX is one of the best situated in this kingdom, on account of its neamess to the capital, conveniency of water-carriage, good roads in general, and other great advantages. It it bounded on the south by the noble river Thames; on the west, by the river Stort and Ley, and part of Hertfordshire; on the north, by part of Cambridgeshire, and the river Stour, which divides it from Suffolk; and on the east, by the German Ocean. Its circumference, as near as we can measure or estimate, with all the windings, is 225 miles. The greatest length of the county, from west to east, namely, from Roydon to the Nase, is 61 miles; and the greatest width, from north to south, that is, from Bartlow to Tilbury-Fort, is 50 miles.

The word Essex is derived from Eart Seaxa, and Eart-rexrcipe, two names given to it by the Saxons, who settled and divided this district, and erected it into a kingdom, as we shall shew a little lower.

This county is not filled with light sands, apt to be blown about with every high wind; nor is it covered with barren rocks, or dreary mountains; but the surface of it is, in general, level. However, it is not a dead flat, but diversified with agreeable eminences and fruitful dales; the latter watered, in general, with brooks, or rills of water.

The highest hills in it are at Danbury; and the next highest is the range from Langdon-hills to Burnt-wood and South-weald (a). But, in general, the north-west part of the and weather: and it also makes every man's property, whether great or little, much securer, and more his own, than where it is unfenced, and liable to the encroachments of every joint commoner, or greedy neighbour. To which add, that the trees in the fences afford a great quantity of fuel; a matter of no small importance.

§ 2. The Soil is various; but, in general, good. Very little there is but what is profitable, more or less. Where the land is clay and loom, as about Fering, Coggeshall, the Tays, the Rodings, and some of the northern parishes, fine crops of excellent corn are produced [A]. And most other places yield very tolerable ones.

There are still many commons, and wastes of maners, which, by cultivation, might be rendered as profitable as the other lands; but even these breed many sheep and black cattle, to the great benefit of the poor copyholders and lesser tenants. The marshes and parts adjoining to the Thames and sea, afford rich pastures; from whence great store of cattle are sent up to the London markets.

In many places the soil being fit for Hops, great quantities have been raised, for several years, about Chelmsford, Halsted, the two Hedinghams, &c.

About the Thames, the soil is chalky; as at West and Little Thurrock, Chadwell, &c.

The highest hills in it are at Danbury; and the next highest is the range from Langdon-hills to Burnt-wood and South-weald (a). But, in general, the north-west part of the county is the highest, as appears by most of the rivers rising there, and running from thence every way.

The country being inclosed, makes it much more comfortable to live and travel in, than such as is quite open; exposed, without the least shelter, to all the inclemencies of wind and weather: and it also makes every man's property, whether great or little, much securer, and more his own, than where it is unfenced, and liable to the encroachments of every joint commoner, or greedy neighbour. To which add, that the trees in the fences afford a great quantity of fuel; a matter of no small importance.

§ 2. The SOIL is various; but, in general, good. Very little there is but what is profitable, more or less. Where the land is clay and loom, as about Fering, Coggeshall, the Tays, the Rodings, and some of the northern parishes, fine crops of excellent corn are produced [A]. About the Thames, the soil is chalky; as at West and Little Thurrock, Chadwell, &c.

§ 3. The nature of the soil leads me to consider the ROADS of the county of Essex. They are, especially the great roads, as good as any in the kingdom; excellent from London to Colchester, and beyond; as also in many other parts: and they are not interrupted by dangerous waters or steep hills. For repairing and amending them, several Acts have passed from time to time, which may be seen in the Statute-Books [B].

As to the Roman roads:

In Antonine's Itinerary, two of the Itenera pass through this county: and the Roman colonies and stations there mentioned, are:—

Ad Amsem, or Amnem, viz. Sturium, Stratford.
Camulodunum Colonia, . . . M. P. VI. Colchester.
Canonium, ... M. P. IX. about Kelvedon.
Cæsaromagum, ... M. P. XII. Chelmsford, or rather Writtle.
Durositum, ... M. P. XVI. below Brentwood.
Londinium, ... M. P. XV. London. (b).

What might be said upon the Roman roads, cannot be better expressed than in the following Dissertation upon that subject, by the late Smart Lethieullier, Esq. kindly communicated to me by Mrs. Lethieullier, widow of his brother, Charles Lethieullier, Esq.

'The county of Essex, though inferior to 'few in England, either in regard of its 'extent or variety of valuable products, yet 'has hitherto had its ancient state but 'slenderly considered, or little enquired into.

'That it was, however, fully inhabited in 'the British times, there is no reason to 'doubt: and history informs us of many 'particulars.

'Its vast Forest was a proper habitation 'for their Druids in the earliest times, and 'a retirement for their people in the latter 'period of their settlement here: nor are 'there footsteps wanting in the very heart of 'it, to prove that it was thoroughly penetrated 'by them. The want of quarries of stone in 'this county, rendered it impossible for the 'Britans to leave such monuments of themselves here, as they have at Stonehenge, 'Rollright, and elsewhere. But if I should, 'hereafter, offer probable conjectures, that 'many earth-works, still remaining, were 'made in those ages, I hope I shall be 'allowed to have performed all that can be 'reasonably expected from me.

'Under the Roman Government it was 'very early and universally known. A very 'considerable great road ran the whole length 'of it; another skirted its northern borders. 'Many vicinal ones cross it in different places. 'It was honoured with the first colony ever 'established in Britain, and with several 'other stations and towns in different parts 'of it. The names of some of them are 'preserved in the Itinerary; though many '1000 years, be raised. Dr. Gale speaks of 'pavements found twenty feet under ground, 'after the fire; and Dr. Woodward mentions 'several antiquities found near Bishopsgate, 'seventeen feet under the surface: as were 'many more upon the rebuilding Bishopsgate 'church.

'The Hermen-street is supposed to have 'issued from London, about Cripplegate, and 'gone, due north, through Enfield, towards 'Royston, &c.

'Dr. Stukely brings a road from the west, 'cross Hyde Park, through Clerkenwell, Old-'street, &c. and crossing the Hermen-street, 'almost at right angles, goes to Oldford. 'This must be a secondary Icening, or Via 'ad Icenos.

'There is a visible straight direction from 'Old-street Cross, Canbridge-heath, down a 'lane, between grounds, to Old Ford. As 'London grew more noted, do doubt a line 'was drawn from the Milliary stone in London to this road, which led cross Old Ford 'into Essex; and accordingly it appears upon 'the map, that it is a very straight line from 'Aldgate-cross, Spittle-fields, &c. to Old 'Ford; whereas, the new road made by Queen 'Maud, makes a considerable curve, southward, in going to Stratford Langthorn.

'Edward the Confessor built a royal palace 'at Haver-ing, where he frequently resided; 'and cross Old Ford to Ilford, &c. appears 'to be the only road he could go thither.

'The road, therefore, went from Old Ford 'through part of Wanstead, where a Mosaic 'pavement and other Roman antiquities have 'been discovered; and proceeded, through or 'near Ilford, to Romford, [the Roman ford]. 'The course of the present road is the only 'proper line; for several hills or deep vallies 'must have been crossed, had it gone either 'to the north or south of Ilford; the only 'proper spot for passing the river Roden.

'The famous battle between Suetonius 'and Boadicea was fought somewhere 'between Epping and Waltham; near 'which a fine camp remains.

'The Romans, in making their roads, 'always, at first, dug as deep in search of a 'solid bottom, or, where they could find none, 'made as solid an artificial one, as if they 'had been to erect a fort or a palace upon 'the foundation.

'It is in vain to attempt settling the 'uncertain stations above-mentioned, 'without taking the Roman road for 'our guide.

'Camden, and since him all antiquaries, 'acknowledge, that both the roads and 'stations throughout this county are more 'obliterated and difficult to settle than any 'other county in England.

''Tis no wonder that the Roman roads near 'London are not easily to be discovered, considering how the soil in that, like other 'great cities, must, in the compass of above 'cross Hyde Park, through Clerkenwell, Old-'street, &c. and crossing the Hermen-street, 'almost at right angles, goes to Oldford. 'This must be a secondary Icening, or Via 'ad Icenos.

'This is so worn out in Essex, that very 'little remains, except one great bank, visible 'in many places, near Dunmow, Raine-hall, 'Coggeshall, and other places, through the 'middle of the country, in a line from Bishop 'Stortford to Colchester. It is certain that 'there was such a great road, called Calcea 'que tendit de Sterteford versus Colcestr' (c).

'However, from the remains of these 'banks, many have been induced to believe, 'that the only Roman road from London to 'Colchester, went that way; and accordingly 'to look for all the stations in the Itinerary 'on that side the country. Yet some very 'material reasons may be produced to shew, 'that there went a Roman road to Colonia-Camulodunum, not far from the present 'one used between London and Colchester. 'In the first place, it is visible from Ham 'Frith to the pales of Aldersbrook-park; 'and the bank is again visible near Ingatstone. As to any high agger, or bank, if 'there was such an one, it is no wonder it 'should be much obliterated now, since the 'whole road was gravel entirely, there being 'very few or no stones near; and the great 'trade that has, for many centuries, been 'carried on between Ipswich, Colchester, &c. 'and London, hath occasioned this road to 'be frequently raised and mended with 'gravel, in such a manner, that any such 'agger, of a moderate height, must now be 'covered some, or rather several, feet.

'To which add—The bounds of the forest 'of Waltham are, undoubtedly, very ancient; 'and yet the present high road to Romford 'is evidently prior to them, since the present 'boundary of the forest is from the river Lea 'at Bowbridge, to a whale-bone at a trivium 'within a mile of Romford.

'This is an argument against the general 'notion, that what is called the Green-lane, 'a lane leading from Ilford to Horn-church, 'and running, for some miles, parallel with 'the present road, was the ancient highway; 'since, doubtless, the bounds of the forest 'would have been carried thither, and not 'stop where they do now.

'All writers agree, that Mauricius, Bishop 'of London, in the beginning of King Henry 'the First's reign, built a bridge at Chelmsford, and by that means brought the high 'road through that town, which before ran 'through Writtle. This is acknowledging 'that a great road did go through Writtle 'before Henry the First's time, which was 'many years before his Queen Maud made 'the road before-mentioned.

'The general opinion that prevails seems 'to be, that here was no great road into 'Essex, through Ilford, Romford, Brentwood, 'Ingatstone, Chelmesford, or Writtle, to 'Colchester, till that remarkable accident 'happening to Maud, wife of King Henry I. 'as she passed at Old Ford, caused her to 'make the present road between Aldgate and 'Stratford Langthorn, and to build Bow-bridge; of which I give an account below, 'at page 20. But here I will attempt to 'prove, that she did not make a great road 'through a country where none had gone

'The Abbey of Berking had long flourished 'through the Saxon ages, and been frequently 'visited, as well as governed, by the Saxon 'Monarchs. William the Conqueror, we are 'told, was there for some time. King Stephen 'and his Queen were there in person, as is 'evident from charters, &c. It is hardly 'probable that they had not a straight road 'from London to this place.'

§ 4. As the Soil is various, so is also the AIR of this county. Near the sea, plentiful exhalations arise, and the marshes and standing waters send forth noisome and stinking vapours, not only here but every where else: and where the situation is such, the air must of course be more moist, and more unhealthy, than where it is otherwise. This is the case especially in the low grounds near the Thames, and in the hundreds of Rochford and Dengey. However, not so much as formerly, when the land was less cultivated, and fuller of woods.

Where the air is bad, good spring WATER is also scarce; and the water either mostly brackish, or thick, turbid, and unwholsome.

But in all other parts, where good water is plentiful, where the soil is not oozy or fenny, but gravelly, sandy, and dry; why the air should not be as sweet and wholesome here, as in the adjoining counties, no good reason can be given.

Of the Medicinal Waters, an account is given towards the end of this introduction.

§ 5. The RIVERS belonging to this county, are such as either serve it of boundaries, or such as water its bosom.

Of the first sort, are the Thames, the Stour, the Stort, and the Ley, already mentioned.

Of the second sort, are the Colne, the Pant or Blackwater, the Chelmer, the Crouch, the Rodon, and the Cam.

The Stour, so named from the Saxon Stur, sometimes written Estur, rises above Haverhill; and, soon after forming a mere, gives name to the parish of Stourmere. At Watseybridge it receives two other streams. Running from thence eastward, and sometimes southeast, it passes by the towns of Clare, Sudbury, Neyland, Dedham, Maningtree, and discharges itself into the sea, at Harwich. It was made navigable, as high as Sudbury, by Act of Parliament passed several years ago.

The Stort, bounding this county, in part of its western side, only from Hasley-End in Fernham, to Graves-Weare, near Nether-hall in Roydon, loses itself there into the Ley.

The Ley, (in British, Luh), gives name to Luton in Bedfordshire, near which it rises.

'whole road was gravel entirely, there being 'very few or no stones near; and the great 'trade that has, for many centuries, been 'carried on between Ipswich, Colchester, &c. 'and London, hath occasioned this road to 'be frequently raised and mended with 'gravel, in such a manner, that any such 'agger, of a moderate height, must now be 'covered some, or rather several, feet.

'To which add—The bounds of the forest 'of Waltham are, undoubtedly, very ancient; 'and yet the present high road to Romford 'is evidently prior to them, since the present 'boundary of the forest is from the river Lea 'at Bowbridge, to a whale-bone at a trivium 'within a mile of Romford.

'All writers agree, that Mauricius, Bishop 'of London, in the beginning of King Henry 'the First's reign, built a bridge at Chelms-'ford, and by that means brought the high 'road through that town, which before ran 'through Writtle. This is acknowledging 'that a great road did go through Writtle 'before Henry the First's time, which was 'many years before his Queen Maud made 'the road before-mentioned.

'The general opinion that prevails seems 'to be, that here was no great road into 'Essex, through Ilford, Romford, Brentwood, 'Ingatstone, Chelmesford, or Writtle, to 'Colchester, till that remarkable accident 'happening to Maud, wife of King Henry I. 'as she passed at Old Ford, caused her to 'make the present road between Aldgate and 'Stratford Langthorn, and to build Bow-'bridge; of which I give an account below, 'at page 20. But here I will attempt to 'prove, that she did not make a great road 'through a country where none had gone 'before, but only altered the course of one 'part of it.

'The earliest mention I have seen of this 'road, is the Londoners bringing the body 'of Erkenwold, their Bishop, from the Abbey 'of Berking, where he died, in order to inter 'him at London; but were stopped at their 'passage across the meadows at Oldford; 'where, according to the stile of that age, a 'miracle is brought to their assistance. This 'was about the year 685; not 300 years after 'the Romans had left this island.

§ 5. The RIVERS belonging to this county, are such as either serve it of boundaries, or such as water its bosom.

Of the first sort, are the Thames, the Stour, the Stort, and the Ley, already mentioned.

Of the second sort, are the Colne, the Pant or Blackwater, the Chelmer, the Crouch, the Rodon, and the Cam.

The Stour, so named from the Saxon Stur, sometimes written Estur, rises above Haverhill; and, soon after forming a mere, gives name to the parish of Stourmere. At Watseybridge it receives two other streams. Running from thence eastward, and sometimes south-east, it passes by the towns of Clare, Sudbury, Neyland, Dedham, Maningtree, and discharges itself into the sea, at Harwich. It was made navigable, as high as Sudbury, by Act of Parliament passed several years ago.

The Stort, bounding this county, in part of its western side, only from Hasley-End in Fernham, to Graves-Weare, near Nether-hall in Roydon, loses itself there into the Ley.

The Ley, (in British, Luh), gives name to Luton in Bedfordshire, near which it rises. After its junction with the Stort, it passes by Waltham-Abbey and Berking, and falls into the Thames, near Blackwall.

The Colne rises in the parish of Redgwell, and taking its course eastward, passes by the Hedinghams, Halsted, the Colnes, and Colchester, or Colonia, from which the river takes its name; and, receiving two large brooks at Fingringhou and Brightlingsea, discharges itself into the sea, between Mersey and Saint Osith, about eight miles below Colchester.

The

The Pant, or Blackwater, hath its source in Depden; and, receiving two or three streams at Radwinter, runs, east south-east, by Great Bardfeild, Bocking, Coggeshall, Kelvedon, Wickham-Mills, Maldon, where the Chelmer joins it; and, thus united, they fall into Blackwater-Bay, and into the sea, between Mersey and Bradwell.

The Chelmer rises in Chickney or Henham, and running south-east, by Thaxsted, Dunmow, Felsted, Great and Little Waltham, comes to Chelmesford, to which it gives name; and then, turning eastward, after having received the Cam, unites with the Pant, near Maldon.

The Crouch flows from two springs in Little Burghsted and Langdon; and, running east, divides the hundreds of Rochford and Dengey, and partly those of Barstable and Chelmsford; and falls into the sea, between Foulnese and the salt marshes below Burnham.

The Rodon rises in or near Little Easton; and, running south and south-westward, after receiving several brooks, and watering the Rodings, and the towns of Cheping-Ongar, Great Ilford, and Berking, discharges itself into the Thames, a little below the last-named town. It is made navigable up to Ilford bridge.

The Cam, or Granta, hath its source in Quendon; and, running directly north, by Newport, Audeley-End, Chesterford, and Icaldum, hastens to Cambridge.

The most considerable of these rivers, the Stour, the Colne, the Pant, the Chelmer, the Rodon, rise in the north-west part of this county; and flowing from thence, as from the highest ground, the first easterly, the three next east and by south, and the two others southerly, discharge themselves into the sea and the river Thames.

Ingreburn runs by Upminster and Rainham.

Many other rivulets and nameless brooks there are, watering almost every parish, and rendering the country not only fruitful, but also the more healthful and pleasant.

§ 6. Anciently, the whole county was, in a manner, one continued FOREST [C].

And King John disafforested all that part which lies north of Stane-street, i. e. the causeway, or great Roman road, leading from the ramparts on Lexden-heath to Stortford (d).

The Stewardship of the whole forest of Essex was, for many generations, in the De Veres, Earls of Oxford. They were deprived of it by King Edward IV. for their adherence to the House of Lancaster, and the office was granted to Richard Duke of York (g). They recovered it upon the accession of King Henry the Seventh; who granted, 2d of December 1489, to John Earl of Oxford, as Steward of the forest, 9*l*. 2*s*. rent, during pleasure.

By virtue of their office, they had power to substitute a Lieutenant, and one Riding-Forester; also three yeomen Foresters, in the three Bayliwicks of the forest.

The Warden and Steward had all wayfs and strays, and all deer-fallen wood, or browsing wood, within the forest; and all amerciaments in the swainmotes and wood-comptes, according to the assise of the forest; except the amerciaments for venison, and the bodies of oaks. And of every covert and hedgerow to be sold, of every shilling one penny; and of every wood to be sold, the second-best oak; and of the buyer and seller of every such wood, one bow and one broad arrow; and one penny of every shilling of the seller and buyer of every such wood, upon the sale of it. He had also, as belonging to the said office, the custody and keeping of the maner of Havering at Bower, and of the house and park there.

The thirteen walks in Waltham forest are, the walk of Chapel Henolt, or Hainault; of West Henolt, of Woodford, Waltham-stow, Leyton, Loughton, Chigwell, Lambourn, Highwood, Epping, Waltham-Abbey, New Lodge, and Chingford.

The whole half-hundred of Waltham is within the forest.

In Becontree Hundred—Leyton, Waltham-stow, Wansted, and Woodford, are within the forest.—Stratford, West Ham, East Ham, Dagenham, Berking, and the two Ilfords, are partly in and partly out.

In Ongar Hundred—Loughton, Chigwell, Lambourn, and Stapleford-Abbots, are within the forest.—Navestock and Theydon-Bois are partly in and partly out.

The Hundreds of Clavering, Utlesford, Dunmow, Froshwell, Chelmsford, Hinckford, Witham, Lexden, Tendring, Chafford, Barstable, Rochford, Thurstable, and Winstree, are out of the forest (h).

In the reigns of King Henry III. King Edward I. II. and III. the Bayliwick of this forest was in the family of De Clare; to whom it was granted by Richard de Montfichet (i).

The Crouch flows from two springs in Little Burghsted and Langdon; and, running east, divides the hundreds of Rochford and Dengey, and partly those of Barstable and Chelmsford; and falls into the sea, between Foulnese and the salt marshes below Burnham.

The Rodon rises in or near Little Easton; and, running south and south-westward, after receiving several brooks, and watering the Rodings, and the towns of Cheping-Ongar, Great Ilford, and Berking, discharges itself into the Thames, a little below the last-named town. King Stephen disafforested Tendring Hundred; as is shewn in this volume, p. 431.

And King John disafforested all that part which lies north of Stane-street, i. e. the causeway, or great Roman road, leading from the ramparts on Lexden-heath to Stortford (d).

Perambulations were taken of the remaining forest of Essex, in 12th Henry VIII. 1228, and 26th and 28th Edward I. 1298 and 1300.

And several parcels were disafforested, at different times, by the procurement of Paul Viscount Bayning, and others (e).

In the reigns of King Henry III. King Edward I. II. and III. the Bayliwick of this forest was in the family of De Clare; to whom it was granted by Richard de Montfichet (i).

Notwithstanding the Charter of Forests, and the Statutes for perambulations and deafforestation, so slight a regard was paid to them, both by many of the subjects who were daily encroaching, and by the officers of the forests, who did not like to have their wings clipt, but continued to use, as forest, what, by law and right, was not forest, that some remedy was often necessary.

In the 28th of Edward I. the Commons granted him a fifteenth of all their goods, that the forests might be perambulated, according to the charter of the forest, and the bounds assigned by the perambulators might stand, and be observed. A very curious roll, containing the manner of assessing this fifteenth, is in my possession.

However, uneasinesses still continued; as appears by petitions to Parliament, in the time of Edward II. and in the 22d and 45th of Edward III. and 1st, 2d, 5th, and 7th of Richard II. and 1st of Henry V.

In 1st of Henry V. the Commons desired the King to grant and ordain, that the woods and other possessions, which were afforested by all the perambulations and ridings in the time of his great grandfather, against the form of the charter of the forest, and those which were out of the bounds of forests before the perambulations and ridings aforesaid, be for ever disafforested, notwithstanding any statute, &c. to the contrary. The King answered, it shall be lawful for those who are grieved against the charter of the forest, to sue to the King especially, and the King will do them right.

The Right Hon. John Earl Waldegrave is now obtaining an Act for dividing and inclosing Navestock common and heath, within the maners of Navestock and Lofthall, in this county, containing about 671 acres and a half; which may be a prelude to more inclosures of that kind.

§ 7. Under the Supreme Governor, the King of Great Britain, the CIVIL GOVERNMENT of this county is in the Sheriff, who holds County Courts, and the Sheriff's Torn.

Anciently, it was in the Earl, who held Courts, and received the third penny of all amerciaments, with other perquisites; and the Sheriff, Scype peve, or Vice-comes, was only his deputy: but since the Earl of Essex hath been merely titular, he hath nothing to do in the government of the county.

M. Dalton affirms, that 'the most eminent 'and supream dignity, from the Conquest 'until the 11 year of Edward the Third, was 'the Earl or Counte, being anciently of the 'Blood Royal' (k). But more certain it is, that the Earls, as governors of counties, existed before the Conquest; and I do not find that they ceased exactly the 11th of Edward the Third.

About the time of the Conquest, and some years after, the Sheriffs continued several years in office. But in 1340, 14th of Edward Witham. Formerly, this office was very honorable, and of much the same power as the present Justices of the Peace (m). The Petty Constables, one or two in each parish, or more, according to the extent of the parish, or the pleasure of the inhabitants.

The other considerable persons employed in the government of counties, are the Justices of the Peace. Some have fancied that they were instituted in the reign of King Henry III. after the agreement between the King and his Barons: and others have fixed their first institution at the 6th of Edward I. 1278.—Conservators of the Peace were, indeed, appointed from time to time in certain places; but not throughout England, till the 1st of Edward III. 1327; when, 'for the better 'keeping and maintaining of the Peace, it 'was ordained, That in every county, good 'men and lawful, which be no maintainers of 'evil, or barretors in the country, shall be 'assigned to keep the peace.' And more fully in the following Statute: 'That in every 'County of England shall be assigned for the 'keeping of the Peace, one Lord, and with 'him three or four of the most worthy in the 'County, with some learned in the law.'—They are appointed by the King, by commission under the Great Seal.—And hold Sessions these four times in the year.—In the first week after the Feast of St. Michael: in the first week after the Epiphany: in the first week after the clause of Easter: and in the first week after the Translation of St. Thomas the Martyr [a Becket] (n).

Other ancient officers, are The Coroners, and The Clerk of the Market.

With respect to the first, the Statute directs, that, 'through all Shires, sufficient men shall 'be chosen to be Coroners, of the most wise 'and discreet Knights, which know, will, 'and may, best attend upon such offices' (o).

§ 11. LORD LIEUTENANTS,

Were introduced about the reign of King Henry VIII. as standing Representatives of the Crown, to keep the counties in military order, upon the suppression of Monasteries. They were appointed by Statute, 2 and 3 Edward VI. c. 2. and 4 and 5 Ph. and Mar. c. 3. Mr. Camden speaks of them, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, as extraordinary Magistrates, constituted only in times of difficulty and danger (q). They were confirmed by Statute, 13 and 14 Caro. II. c. 3.

lence, by some interested writers. For our part, having, in the course of many years, and by a diligent perusal of our ancient historians and other authors, examined the subject throughly, we shall make no difficulty of fixing the beginning of the House of Commons, in its present form, to the reign of King Henry III.

Before that time, the constituent Members of the Great Council of the Nation were, the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots and Priors, Earls, Barons, and all that held of the King, in capite, or chief; as Sir Henry Spelman, and Sir William Dugdale, two of our best English Antiquarians, have shewn (r) [E].

There is a clause in Magna Charta which is quite decisive upon this point. It is as follows:—'Et ad habendum Commune Consilium regni de auxilio assidendo, aliter quam in tribus casibus predictis, vel de scutagio assidendo, summoneri faciemus Archiepiscopos, Episcopos, Abbates, Comites, & majores Barones sigillatim per literas nostras: et preterea faciemus summoneri in generali per Vicecomites & Ballivos nostros, omnes illos qui de nobis tenent in capite, ad certum diem scilicet ad terminum quadraginta dierum ad minus, & ad certum locum; & in omnibus literis illius summonitionis causam summonitionis exprimemus. Et sic facta summonitione negotium ad diem assignatum procedat, secundum consilium illorum qui presentes fuerint, quamvis non omnes summoniti venerint.' i. e. 'And, in order to have, or hold, 'a Common Council of the Kingdom for 'assessing an aid, except in the three cases 'aforesaid (s), or for assessing a scutage, we 'shall cause to be summoned the Archbishops, 'Bishops, Abbots, Earls, and greater Barons, 'severally by our letters: and moreover we 'shall cause to be summoned in general, by 'our Sheriffs and Bailiffs, all those who hold 'of us in capite to a certain day; namely, at 'the end of forty days at the least from the 'summons, and to a certain place: and, in 'on the day appointed, according to the 'advice of those present, though all that are 'summoned should not come [F].'

Here being no mention of Knights of Shires, or Burgesses of Burghs, for so important an affair as the granting of money, we may very justly conclude, that there were then none such as are now; the Tenants in capite being the Representatives of the Commons: and, indeed, so are they in effect still; for what are our present Electors of the Knights of Shires, but the remains of the Tenants in capite minced into small freeholds?

If it should be asked, How were the Burghs then represented? I answer, they either belonged to the King, or the chief part of the estates, and real property in them, belonged to the greater Barons, or to the Tenants in capite; and they were their Representatives.

I have the pleasure of having my thoughts on this subject confirmed by the testimony of a very eminent Lawyer (t). His words are, 'It is generally agreed, that in the main the 'Constitution of Parliament, as it now stands, 'was marked out so long ago as the 17th year 'of King John, A. D. 1215, in the Great 'Charter granted by that Prince; wherein 'he promises to summon all Archbishops, 'Bishops, Abbots, Earls, and greater Barons, 'personally, and all other Tenants in Chief 'under the Crown, by the Sheriff and Bailiffs, 'to meet at a certain place, within 40 days 'notice, to assess aids and scutages when 'necessary. And this Constitution has sub-'sisted, in fact, at least from the year 1266, '49th of Henry III. [G].'

[E] Besides the Clause in Magna Charta set down above, if the reader will be pleased to give himself the trouble to look into our ancient English Historians, he will find who were the constituent Members of our Legislature. We shall only refer him to Matthew Paris, one of our best and exactest Historians, Lond. edit 1640, p. 63. 71. 100, 101. 143. 191. 288. 316, 317. 321. 367. 372. 377. 389. 580, 581; and there it appears, that the Colloquia, as he calls the Parliaments, consisted of the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, and Barons; which he calls sometimes, in general words, Majores Angliæ; Barones; Proceres regni; totius Angliæ Nobilitas; totius Regni tam clari quam militer generalis universitas; omnes Nobiles Angliæ, tam viri ecclesiastici quam seculares. He uses the word Parliamentum in 1246 and 1257: and in page 1002, the words electa persona are used; which is remarkable.—I have by me very large Collections upon the subject.

[F] Here, as Sir Henry Spelman observes, is laid forth the Members, the matter, and the manner of summoning of a Common Council of the Kingdom; which, as it seemeth, was not yet, in the records of State, called a Parlament.—Posthumous Works, p. 63.—It was so called first in Claus. 28 Henry III. memb. 12 dorso.—The first time the word Parliamentum occurs in our ancient Historians, Bromton, col. 1058; and the rest is under the year 1164.—Matt. Paris uses it first in 1246, p. 696, edit. 1640.

[G] The County of Essex: and Colchester sent from the year 1290. Chelmsford returned once to a Council. Bradfeild, Rayleigh, and Thaxted, are also stiled Boroughs.—Br. Willis, p. 31, 34.

DOMESDAY-BOOK making a considerable part of this History, I thought the curious reader would be pleased to see an exact specimen of it, as it is in the original. Accordingly, I have had a Fac-simile of it taken, and placed here, being the first article in this volume. It is to be read thus:—'Hundred de 'Beuentrea. Berchingas tenet semper Sancta Maria 'pro xxx hidis. Tunc IIII carucate in dominio, modo 'III, & IIII^ta posset fieri. Tunc LXX carucate homi-'num, modo LXVIII. Tunc C villani, modo CXL. Tunc 'L bordarii, modo LXXXX. Tunc X servi, modo VI. 'Silva M porcis. C acre prati. II molendina. I piscina. 'II runcina. XXXIIII animalia. CL porci. CXIIII oves. 'XXIIII capre. X vasa apium.'

An explanation of some of the terms in that book, may be acceptable to the reader.

Manerium, denotes the Lord's capital Mansion-house, where he dwelt; with the land round it, in his own occupation. 'Villas quas a manendo Manerios 'vulgo vocamus,' as Ordericus Vitalis expresses it (o). According to that derivation, I have chosen to write the word, Maner, and not Manor, which is plainly derived from the French word Manoir. Bracton gives this description (p):—'Sciendum est, quod manerium 'poterit esse per se ex pluribus ædificiis coadunatum, 'sive villis & hamlettis adjacentibus..... Poterit etiam 'esse per se manerium capitale, & plura continere sub 'se maneria non capitalia, & plures villas, & plures 'hamletas quasi sub uno capite aut Dominio uno.'—In the following history, several estates are called maners, which are not acknowledged for such now. But so they are stiled in the Inquisitions post mortem, and I thought it best to adhere to those authorities.

In Dominio, or Demesne, is what, in many maners, is called the Lordship; land round the capital mansion, which the Lord of the Maner kept in his own hands.

Geld, is a Saxon word, Gelo, signifying Tax or Tribute; and Dane-geld, &c.

Hide, is a quantity of land, that varied in different places, and therefore cannot be exactly limited to a certain number. Some think it was 100 acres; others, as much as could be ploughed with one plough in a year: or as much as would maintain a family. A tax

Homines, were the capital Tenants under the Lord.

Of the Liberi Homines, some could sell their lands, and go where they pleased, poterant abire quo vellent, sine licentia; others could not, non poterant recedere sine licentia.—See this history, vol. i, p. 295, 389, 400, 434, 439. The liberi homines were sometimes reduced to the condition of villans.—See vol. i, p. 260, note.

Villans, are those that dwelt, not under the Lord's roof, as the Servi, but in the Village; in little houses, not absolutely their own, but holden at the will of the Lord, like our copy-holders; for which they performed several customary services of husbandry, &c. They were appendent and belonging to the maner, and past along with it to every new Lord.

Bordars, held a little house of husbandry on the Bords, or out-skirts of the maner, with some land; on condition of supplying the Lord with certain provisions for his Board, or Table.

The Servi were, in effect, in a slavish condition; not at their own disposal, but retainers of the Lord's family; and as much part of the stock of the maner, as the cattle, &c. And so were their children.

Coliberti, were such of the former as were enfranchised, but still paid some duties to the superior Lords.

Runcini, were working horses.

Animalia, bullocks, cows, and other black cattle.

Hundred, denotes the Jury by which the Survey in Domesday-book was made. It consisted partly of Normans, and partly of the ancient English or Saxon inhabitants. The manner in which they took this Survey was thus:—the King issued his Writ to the Sheriff of each county, commanding him to call before him all the Barons, and the French or Norman ones, the Reves of the Hundreds, the Clergy, and six Villans out of each parish or district. They were to give, upon oath, an account of all the estates, the nature of them, the quantity of hides and carucates they contained, and the occupiers, of different denominations and degrees, whether King's thegns, freemen, sochmen, or villans, bordars, slaves, with the stock of cattle, and even of bees, upon each: the quantity of

Some think it was 100 acres; others, as much as could be ploughed with one plough in a year; or as much as would maintain a family. A tax was laid on, by Hides, most like our land-tax.

Carucate, from the French word, Charue, or, as pronounced in some provinces, Carue, a plough-land, 120 acres, or 60 acres, according to some. J. Stow makes Carucata, Plough-land and Hide, the same; viz. 100 acres. (Annales, ed. 1631, p. 163, col. 2.) Caruca was 60 acres. By Statute the 7th and 8th of William III. a Plough-land is 50 acres.

Homines, were the capital Tenants under the Lord.

Of the Liberi Homines, some could sell their lands, and go where they pleased, poterant abire quo vellent, sine licentia; others could not, non poterant recedere sine licentia.—See this history, vol. i, p. 295, 389, 400, 434, 439. All which was set down at length, and returned by the Sheriff into the Exchequer; and from these returns, Domesday-book was compiled. One of these returns is extant in the Library of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and no where else that we can find [Y].

east window of the chancel, it is justly supposed to have been built about the reign of King John, by Aubrey de Vere, the second Earl of Oxford; who then endowed it, as appears by the Monasticon Anglic. (w). As for the present tower, which contains only one bell, it was rebuilt about the year 1616 (x). In the chancel were several stalls, which are now removed to the lower part of the church.

Here was an old church before this was rebuilt, and less than the present one; as appears by the foundations which are discovered just beneath the floor of the chancel. It was dedicated to St. James, whose anniversary [by one of the fairs] is kept in the same street, near the church, 25th July; and to whom was consecrated a curious spring of water, at the town's end, famed, undoubtedly, for miracles. Opposite to this spring, in a field of about an acre, (now a hop-ground,) stood St. James's Free-chapel (y).

The church of Hedingham-castle is a perpetual curacy, or donative, of about 50*l*. a year, in the gift of Thomas Ashurst, Esq.

YELDHAM.

Here are two contiguous parishes of this name, north of the Hedinghams, distinguished from each other by the additional appellations of Great and Little, or Nether and Upper, i. e. Lower and Higher.

They are otherwise called Eldham and Yeldam, Geldham or Geldeham, Gelham and Yeldham.

The Saxon words Ælð, or Elde, signify old, and Geld, payment or tax. As for Ham, the meaning of it hath been frequently mentioned; but how any of these words are applicable here, I leave to the reader's judgment.

14. GREAT YELDHAM,

Is the largest of the two, as the name imports. In Edward the Confessor's reign, the capital maner was holden by a freeman; and, at the time of the general survey, by Ralph, the brother of Ilger, and his under-tenant, Walter; and Richard, son of Earl Gislebert, had then other lands here, which had belonged to Wisgar and eight Sochemen [H]. Grismer was the under-tenant.

Most of the lands in this parish are Duchy-lands, holden of the honor of Clare.

At present, here are five maners, or reputed maners. 1. Yeldham-hall. 2. Gunces. 3. Spains-hall. 4. Butlers. 5. Grapnells and Old-hall. There is also a capital messuage in this parish, called The Pole, or Pool.

1. YELDHAM-HALL,

Stands near the church.

In the reign of King John, it belonged to a family surnamed Fitz-Geffrey, or Jeffery.—Jeffery Fitz-Jeffery passed, by fine, in 1203, this maner of Gelham, with others in Essex and Suffolk, to

Walter Fitz-Humfrey (z). And K. Henry III. in the 37th of his reign, granted unto Humfrey, son of this Walter, free-warren in this maner and in Pentlow (a). It remained in this family till about the year 1329, when either Sir Walter, or his son, Humfrey, sold this estate to

Henry Darcy, Esq. who settled it by fine (b). And the said Humfrey released to him all his right in this maner in 1337 (c). This Henry Darcy, descended from Norman Darcie, of Nocton in Lincolnshire (d), was a citizen and draper of London; Sheriff of that city in 1327; and Major in 1337 (e). By Catharine his wife [I], he had his son, Thomas Darcy, Esq. who paid a relief for this maner in 1365 (f); but, being a spendthrift, he sold it to

John Sléford, Rector of Ralsham, who levied a fine for divers uses. Thomas Fryth, of Melford, had it for life about 1392. Next, Geffrey Michell (g).

John, son of William Durward, or Doreward, of Bocking, [where see an account of that family,] had it afterwards, and presented to the rectory 8th May 1408 (h).—Sir John Doreward paid a relief in 1470 for this maner, holden of the honor of Clare, by the service of three knight's-fees (i). His son, John Doreward, Esq. who died in 1476, held this maner, lying in Great and Little Yeldham, Mapiltrested, Haverill, Hethingham-Sible, &c. of Cecily, Duchess of York, as of the honor of Clare (k).—John Doreward, Esq. his son, held the same at the time of his decease, in 1480; described as the maner of Great Geldham, otherwise Yeldham, with the advowson of the church; and

In the reign of King John, it belonged to a family surnamed Fitz-Geffrey, or Jeffery.—Jeffery Fitz-Jeffery passed, by fine, in 1203, this maner of Gelham, with others in Essex and Suffolk, to

Walter Fitz-Humfrey (z). And K. Henry III. in the 37th of his reign, granted unto Humfrey, son of this Walter, free-warren in this maner and in Pentlow (a). It remained in this family till about the year 1329, when either Sir Walter, or his son, Humfrey, sold this estate to

Henry Darcy, Esq. who settled it by fine (b). And the said Humfrey released to him all his right in this maner in 1337 (c). This Henry Darcy, descended from Norman Darcie, of Nocton in Lincolnshire (d), was a citizen and draper of London; Sheriff of that city in 1327; and Major in 1337 (e). By Catharine his wife [I], he had his son, Thomas Darcy, Esq. who paid a relief for this maner in 1365 (f); but, being a spendthrift, he sold it to

John Sléford, Rector of Ralsham, who levied a fine for divers uses. Thomas Fryth, of Melford, had it for life about 1392. Next, Geffrey Michell (g).

John, son of William Durward, or Doreward, of Bocking, [where see an account of that family,] had it afterwards, and presented to the rectory 8th May 1408 (h).—Sir John Doreward paid a relief in 1470 for this maner, holden of the honor of Clare, by the service of three knight's-fees (i). His son, John Doreward, Esq. who died in 1476, held this maner, lying in Great and Little Yeldham, Mapiltrested, Haverill, Hethingham-Sible, &c. of Cecily, Duchess of York, as of the honor of Clare (k).—John Doreward, Esq. his son, held the same at the time of his decease, in 1480; described as the maner of Great Geldham, otherwise Yeldham, with the advowson of the church; and land, called Grapenell, Oldhall, Lavendon, and le Pole; and a field, called Scoteneys in Wethersfield, the two Hedinghams, &c. (l).—By will, he gave the maners of Great Geldham, and Barwick-hall in Toppesfield, to his second son, William Doreward, Esq. who, upon his nephew John's death, became heir to the whole Doreward estate (m). He married Margery, eldest daughter and coheir of Sir Roger Arsick, of South-acre in Norfolk; and had by her, John; and Elizabeth, who became the wife of Thomas Fotheringhay, of Woodrising in Norfolk, Esq. The time of his death is not known.—John, his only son, succeeded him; and held this maner, and 300 acres of arable, 200 acres of pasture, 40 of meadow, 60 of wood, in this and other adjoining parishes (n). He lived at Spains-hall in this parish, and died the last day of Feb. 1495. By his wife, Margery, daughter of John Nanton, Esq. he had no issue surviving him [K]; whereupon his three nieces, daughters of his sister, Elizabeth Fotheringhay, became his coheirs; viz. Margaret, wife of Nicolas Beaupre; Elena, wife of Henry Thursbie; and Christian, wife of John de Vere, Esq. son of Sir George de Vere, brother to John the 13th Earl of Oxford; and who, upon this his uncle's decease, became the 14th Earl of Oxford. Their marriage settlement bears date 2d January 1493; by virtue of which settlement, the maners of Great Yeldham, Berwicks, and Scotenys in Toppesfeild, were settled on this

John, and his spouse, and on their heirs; and for want of heirs, then on the heirs of the said John. He died 10th March 1512, without issue; and was succeeded in this lordship, among many others (o), by John the 15th Earl of Oxford; John the 16th Earl; and Edward the 17th Earl. The latter squandering away his estates, as I have often observed, this lordship was purchased of him for

Thomas and Edmund Plumb; in whose descendents it continued till 1718. The Plumme family extended itself into several places of this and other counties, and was for a while considerable. The first of this family I meet with, is Robert Plumme, of Great Yeldham, Gent. who was tenant of this maner and estate, under John de Vere, the great Earl of Oxford, in the reign of King Henry VIII.—Robert, his son and heir, bought this maner of Edward Earl of Oxford, for his 2 youngest sons, Thomas and Edmund. By his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of .... Purcas, of this parish, which was buried here 25th June 1596, he had 3 sons: Robert, Thomas, and Edmund. Robert, the eldest son, was seated at Spains-hall; where we shall take proper notice of him. Edmund, the third son, was of Hawkdon-hall in Suffolk [L].—Thomas at Yeldham-hall, and died 23d February 1615; possessed of this maner, with 200 acres of arable, 20 acres of meadow, 20 of pasture, and 20 of wood; holden of the King, as of his honor of Clare (p). By Mary, daughter of ..... Hamond, of Ellingham in Norfolk, he had three sons: Samuel; Thomas, of Maldon, father of Thomas, D. D. a great benefactor to that town, [where he will be particularly mentioned,] and Founder of the Plumian Professorship in Cambridge; and Robert.—Samuel, the eldest son, of Yeldham-hall, married, first, Dorothy, daughter of William Higham, of East-Ham and Lincoln's-Inn, Esq. by whom he had, 1. Samuel, educated at Oxford and Lincoln's-Inn; but who died before his father, and was buried here 18th July 1635. 2. Thomas, of London, linendraper; who, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Giles Barnardiston, of Clare Priory, Esq. had several children, that died young, or without issue. His second wife was Catharine Bolton, of Surrey, gentlewoman to the renowned Lady Vere, of Kirby-hall; and by her he had, 3. Nathanael, baptized 2d March 1651. He became an Attorney at Law of very good reputation; and married Elizabeth, daughter of John Butcher, of Spains-hall, Gent. [M]. But, 28th March 1718-19, he sold this estate to Samuel Rush, Esq. The Rush family is originally of Sudborne in Suffolk.—Thomas Rush, of that place, had three sons: Arthur Rush, of Sudborne, Esq. Thomas, who settled at Boreham in this county; and Antony, made Canon of Windsor in 1567; who was also Prebendary of Canterbury; and installed Dean of Chichester 10th June 1570. He died and was buried at Windsor in 1577 (q).

William Rush, of Colchester, married Anne, daughter of Mr. Smart, Alderman of that town, and had three sons: Samuel, William, and George. William, the second son, was of London, distiller, and left no issue. George, the youngest son, married Anne, daughter of ..... Collard, of Braintree, M. D. and had by her Bridget, wife of Elias Brown, of Lincoln's-inn-fields. The eldest son, Samuel Rush, Esq. of Clapham, (where he lies buried, with a monument,) married Hannah, daughter of Ralph Creffeild, of Colchester, sister of Sir Ralph's father; and had Samuel, William, Hannah, and Elizabeth; which last died unmarried. William, the second son, was a vinegar-merchant, and died 27th October 1738, aged 67. He married, 1. Margaret, daughter of William Lorkin. 2. Mary, daughter of William Boys, Esq. Alderman of Colchester, which died 9th July 1742, aged 68. They had issue, Samuel; and George, who died unmarried. The eldest son, Samuel Rush, of the park, in Southwark, Esq. distiller, had two wives, 1. Elizabeth, daughter of

His second wife was Martha, daughter of William Clark, of London, brewer; and by her he had John, George, Samuel, Martha, Mary, and others that died young. He departed this life the 9th of January 1710, aged 67 years. Samuel, the eldest son, had several children.

Three of his sons (Samuel, aged 14 years, William, 13 years, Charles, 10 months,) and Martha, aged 5 years, all died in the year 1713, and within the space of two months.—So sudden was his loss of so hopeful an issue!

John Rush, Esq. is the present possessor of this estate; who hath also a farm called the Change, behind the church, once belonging to John Hatcher, Esq. [N].

2. Gunces, alias Bunces,

Took that name from a family called Gounse, or Guncelin, its ancient owners. Guncelin, son of Richard, was witness to a deed, dated 24th Edward I. and held half a fee in Gelham and Toppesfeild (r). . . . . John Gounse had a messuage, 8 acres and 3 roods of pasture, in 1370, in the last-named parish (s); and Thomas Gounce was witness to a deed of Richard, Rector of Gelham, dated the 9th of Henry IV.

The maner-house is situated both in Toppesfield and Yeldham, though most of it stands in the latter; for which reason it is reckoned to belong to this parish, as a great part of the land doth. This maner was holden of the honor of Clare, by the service of half a knight's-fee: and part of it seems, also, to have been holden of the honor of Stambourn, by the name of Daunces, in Gelham (t).

In Queen Elizabeth's reign, it was in William Bigge, who died 5th January 1585, holding this by the name of Gounces. Likewise Barwicks-hall in Toppesfield, and other estates near (u).

Richard Symonds died possessed of it in 1627, by the name of Gunges (w). And it continued in that family, [more particularly mentioned under the Pool,] till John, the last of the family, left it, in 1692, to his nephew,

John Pepys, Esq. whose sister Susanna, and her husband, Dr. Jonas Redman, sold it, and also Spains-hall, in 1749, to Peter Muilman, Esq. a very eminent merchant in London [O]. He and his brother, where their ancestors flourished for above 300 years. Their brothers, now in the Magistracy at Amsterdam, are some of the most considerable merchants in Europe.

3. Spains Hall,

Stands on the east side of the river Colne, about three quarters of a mile from the church; and derived its name from the ancientest owners upon record, the family De Ispania, or Hispania, which were originally of Spain, and gave name to Spains-hall in Finchingfeild, where they were seated; and also to Willingale Spain.

William de Muschet held this, in 1253, under the Earl of Oxford: for it hath been all along holden of the honor of Castle-Hedingham.

William and Richard de Hispania were possessed of it in the reign of King Henry III. and in 1286, Cecily and Isabell, daughters of Michael de Ispania.

Under John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who died in 1360, it was holden by John Weld, as half a fee (x); and continued a while in his family—at least, till 1426.

Then it appears to have been in John Doreward (y): and, in 1498, in William Wallpole.

In 1572, 1573, Robert Plumb, John Crochrood, and Richard and Thomas Purcas, severally held this maner, of the honor of Castle-Hedingham.

From the Plumme family it passed, as the foregoing, to Symonds, Pepys, and Peter Muilman, Esq.

4. The Maner of Butlers.

The mansion-house stood behind Spains-Hall, in the fields, where the foundations are still visible; from which, it appears to have been a large edifice.

It is probable that it had its name from a family surnamed Butler [P]. And such a one there was, which held the lordship of Great Bardfeild in this county. In grants and deeds of the Earls of Clare, I frequently met with witnesses surnamed Pincerna or Boteler: which office of Butler under those Earls was then a considerable place. [See under Bulmer.]

This maner hath been long incorporated into Spains-hall; and brought, most probably, into the Spain family by a female heir of the Butlers. For some time it belonged to the De Veres, Earls of Oxford [Q]; and, of Edward the 17th Earl, was purchased, as Yeldham-hall, by

Robert Plumme.—His son, Robert Plumme, Esq. married two wives; and by the first,

William, 13 years, Charles, 10 months,) and Martha, aged 5 years, all died in the year 1713, and within the space of two months.—So sudden was his loss of so hopeful an issue!

William de Muschet held this, in 1253, under the Earl of Oxford: for it hath been all along holden of the honor of Castle-Hedingham.

William and Richard de Hispania were possessed of it in the reign of King Henry III. and in 1286, Cecily and Isabell, daughters of Michael de Ispania.

Takeley-grange, that died 21st July 1615 (z), he had two sons: Robert and John. The latter was seated at Ridgewell-hall, [where see an account of him.] Robert, the father, died 13th August 1625, seized in fee of the maner of Spains and Botelers (a). Robert, his eldest son, was living at Spains-hall in 1634. By his second wife, Honora, daughter of .... Woolrich, he had a daughter: and by his first wife, Frances, daughter of ... Gawsell, he had two sons and four daughters. From this family, Botelers passed, with Spains-hall, to Symonds, Pepys, and Peter Muilman, Esq.

5. The Maner of GRAPNELLS and OLD HALL.

Time hath so entirely swallowed this up, that no traces of it remain. But that here was such a maner, is plain, from an ancient deed; wherein Nicolas Hales, Rector of Great Staneway; John Barcamsted, Chaplain; and John Somer, did, in 1395, convey to William Doreward and Catharine his wife, all their maners of Grapnells and Old-hall, with appertenances, in Great and Little Gelham, Stambourne, and Toppesfeild. This deed is witnessed by Thomas Coggeshale, Clement Spice, Robert Rikedon, Tho. Toppesfeild, and Thomas Mackwilliam.

In the Inquisition, taken after the death of John Doreward, in 1480, I find 4 acres of arable, called Grapenell, Old-hall, Levendon, and Le Pole, joined together, and said to be holden of the honor of Clare (b).

From the Dorewards, it passed to the Oxford family; and is now incorporated into some of the adjoining estates.

The POOL,

A capital messuage in this parish, situated on the eastern bank of the river Colne, by the road side, is above a mile from the church.

It took its name from the ancientest possessors of it upon record, the noble family of De la Pole, some of whom were Dukes of Suffolk, and had estates at Gestingthorp and Hatfeild Peverell. Hugh de la Pole, of this place, was witness to a deed, dated the 24th of Edward I. 1296. In that family it continued, till John de la Pole, sometimes written John att Poole, passed it away, in King Edward the Third's reign, to

John Weld, [mentioned under Spains-hall.] In 1373. John Weld and Roger de Wolverston grandson, Edward Earl of Oxford, alienated it, with the other estates in this parish, to

Robert Plumb: from whom it came, by marriage, to Richard Symonds, Esq. And, as his posterity was seated and flourished here for about one hundred years, it will be proper to give some account of them.

The family is originally of Croft in Lancashire, where they continued in a direct line for about twenty generations, and at length terminated in females. From Richard, in the third generation, sprung the Symonds's, of Norfolk; and from John, in the eighth generation, sprung the Symonds's, of Cambridgeshire. Thomas Symonds, in the eleventh generation, married ..... daughter of Mr. Tolleshunt, of Tolleshunt Darcy. Thomas, in the fourteenth descent, married ... daughter of Robert Osbaldeston. John, in the seventeenth descent, by .... daughter of William Lerding, had two sons: William, of Croft; and Robert, who marrying .... daughter and heir of .... Congreve, of Stratton in Staffordshire, settled in that county; and from his descendents issued the Symonds's of Oxfordshire. .... John, in the twentieth generation, was of Newport; and, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Thomas Maynard, was father of ..... John; who, by Anne, daughter of Thomas Bendbow, of Shropshire, had his son and heir,

RICHARD SYMONDS, above-mentioned. He was a Cursitor in Chancery; and marrying, 9th January 1580, Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Plumb, of Yeldham Hall above-mentioned, had, in frank marriage with her, the Poole, where he settled. His wife was interred in this church, 24th January 1611; and he himself died 8th July 1627, and was also buried here [S]. Richard, then aged forty years, is set down in the Inquisition as his son and heir (d). But, according to the pedigree, he had also four other sons; viz. John; Thomas, who died without issue the 5th of June 1625; Samuel, and Edmund: and Richard is set down as the 5th. Of John, who is placed as the eldest in the pedigree, we shall give a particular account, after taking proper notice of the others.—3. Samuel, the third son, married Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Harlakenden, of Earl's-Colne. He was a Cursitor in Chancery; and had Olivers in Toppesfield; but retired to New England with his family. .... 4. Edmund, the 4th son, was also a Cursitor in Chancery. In right of his wife, Anne, only daughter of Joshua Draper, of Braintree, to whom he was married 2d February 1614, he had an estate at Black-

5. The Maner of GRAPNELLS and OLD HALL.

Time hath so entirely swallowed this up, that no traces of it remain. But that here was such a maner, is plain, from an ancient deed; wherein Nicolas Hales, Rector of Great Staneway; John Barcamsted, Chaplain; and John Somer, did, in 1395, convey to William Doreward and Catharine his wife, all their maners of Grapnells and Old-hall, with appertenances, in Great and Little Gelham, Stambourne, and Toppesfeild. This deed is witnessed by Thomas Coggeshale, Clement Spice, Robert Rikedon, Tho. Toppesfeild, and Thomas Mackwilliam.

In the Inquisition, taken after the death of John Doreward, in 1480, I find 4 acres of arable, called Grapenell, Old-hall, Levendon, and Le Pole, joined together, and said to be holden of the honor of Clare (b).

From the Dorewards, it passed to the Oxford family; and is now incorporated into some of the adjoining estates.

The POOL,

A capital messuage in this parish, situated on the eastern bank of the river Colne, by the road side, is above a mile from the church.

It took its name from the ancientest possessors of it upon record, the noble family of De la Pole, some of whom were Dukes of Suffolk, and had estates at Gestingthorp and Hatfeild Peverell. Hugh de la Pole, of this place, was witness to a deed, dated the 24th of Edward I. 1296. In that family it continued, till John de la Pole, sometimes written John att Poole, passed it away, in King Edward the Third's reign, to

John Weld, [mentioned under Spains-hall.] In 1373, John Weld and Roger de Wolverston granted to Geffrey Michell, of Great Gelham, all those lands and tenements, called Le Pole, which they had, by feoffment, from Sir Thomas Nanton, and belonged before to Thomas Saleman. By some intermediate conveyances, it came to

Sir Thomas Staunton [R]: then to .... Doreward (c). John Doreward, Esq. sold it to

John de Vere, Earl of Oxford: and his Norfolk; and from John, in the eighth generation, sprung the Symonds's, of Cambridgeshire. Thomas Symonds, in the eleventh generation, married ..... daughter of Mr. Tolleshunt, of Tolleshunt Darcy. Thomas, in the fourteenth descent, married ... daughter of Robert Osbaldeston. John, in the seventeenth descent, by .... daughter of William Lerding, had two sons: William, of Croft; and Robert, who marrying .... daughter and heir of .... Congreve, of Stratton in Staffordshire, settled in that county; and from his descendents issued the Symonds's of Oxfordshire. .... John, in the twentieth generation, was of Newport; and, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Thomas Maynard, was father of ..... John; who, by Anne, daughter of Thomas Bendbow, of Shropshire, had his son and heir,

RICHARD SYMONDS, above-mentioned. He was a Cursitor in Chancery; and marrying, 9th January 1580, Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Plumb, of Yeldham Hall above-mentioned, had, in frank marriage with her, the Poole, where he settled. His wife was interred in this church, 24th January 1611; and he himself died 8th July 1627, and was also buried here [S]. Richard, then aged forty years, is set down in the Inquisition as his son and heir (d). But, according to the pedigree, he had also four other sons; viz. John; Thomas, who died without issue the 5th of June 1625; Samuel, and Edmund: and Richard is set down as the 5th. Of John, who is placed as the eldest in the pedigree, we shall give a particular account, after taking proper notice of the others.—3. Samuel, the third son, married Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Harlakenden, of Earl's-Colne. He was a Cursitor in Chancery; and had Olivers in Toppesfield; but retired to New England with his family. .... 4. Edmund, the 4th son, was also a Cursitor in Chancery. In right of his wife, Anne, only daughter of Joshua Draper, of Braintree, to whom he was married 2d February 1614, he had an estate at Black-Notley, where he dwelt; and dying 9th December 1627, was buried in that church. He had three sons and one daughter. Richard, the eldest son, was a Cursitor in Chancery, and Collector of the Three Volumes in folio, preserved in the Herald's Office, containing the Arms, Epitaphs, and other Antiquities in this county; to which we so often refer in the course of this work. On the 25th of March 1643, he was committed to prison by [S] He is said in the Inquisition to have had Olivers, Dudmans, and Gunges in Toppesfeild; and the maner of Nicholls in Shalford: but no mention of the Pool.

Miles Corbet, for his loyalty to K. Charles I. but escaping, he went into the King's army, and served in his troop, under the command of the Lord Bernard Steuart, Earl of Litchfield, at the battles of Cropedy-bridge, Lestwithiel, Newbury second and third, Naseby, and relief of Chester, where that noble Lord was slain. After that, he was at Denbigh with Sir William Vaughan, and at other places.—Edward, the second son, baptized 20th December 1621, died at Oxford in 1645, being in arms for the King. . . John, the third son, was baptized 10th April 1627; and Anne 31st March 1631. 5. Richard, the fifth son of the first Richard Symonds settled here, was of Magdalen-College, Cambridge, and of Lincoln's-Inn. He purchased the maner of Fanfield, where he sometimes resided; and dying 26th September 1680, aged 83, was buried in this church, with a monument [T].

JOHN, the eldest son, above-mentioned, of Richard Symonds, who first settled at the Pool, and Elizabeth Plumb, married Anne, daughter of Tho. Elyott, of Godalming in Surrey, Esq. by whom he had 4 sons: Richard, John, Samuel, and Fitz-Symonds; and four daughters: Agnes, wife of Tho. Bacon, of London, merchant; Elizabeth, of Antony Wolmer, of Lincoln's-Inn, Esq. Thomasine and Dorothy, twins, born 16th August 1627. Thomasine was married to . . . . Pepys, Esq. . . . Richard, the eldest son, born 13th October 1616, being of Lincoln's-Inn, was in several battles with the Earl of Essex against the King; and slain at Naseby, 1645, fighting under the command of Sir Thomas Fairfax. . . . . John, the second son, born at Yeldham, 4th September 1618, became one of the Cursitors in Chancery, upon his father's resignation, in 1641. He was of Lincoln's-Inn, and near 40 years a Justice of Peace for this county. He had two wives, but issue by neither. The first was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Robert Quarles, of Romford, Knt. She was buried in this church, 18th December 1666. His second wife was Jane, daughter of Sir Robert Burgoyne, of Sutton in Bedfordshire, Knt. This worthy person died 19th February 1692-3, in the 74th year of his age, and was buried in the south chapel of this church [V]. By will, he left this and other his estates to his nephew,

John Pepys, Esq. of whose heirs it was purchased, in 1749, with the rest, by . . . . Peter Muilman, Esq. The house is mostly pulled down.

A house, near the church, was anciently used and appropriated for dressing a dinner for poor folks, when married; and had all utensils and furniture convenient for that purpose. It hath since been converted into a SCHOOL. John Symonds, Esq. had ordered in his will 200*l.* to be laid out in lands for the maintenance of a school-master here. But he himself, before his decease, bought a farm in Halsted, of about 16*l.* a year, called Kettles, and made it the endowment of this school.

A house, in the lane leading to Tilbury, was given for the habitation of the church-clerk.

Here are alms-houses for six aged poor men and women, maintained by the parish.

And there is to be provided, a sufficient quantity of pease-straw for the winter season, and rushes for the summer, to be strewed in the seats and stools in the church, as was used aforetime. The like custom is, or lately was, kept up at Great Waltham, and other places in this county.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, consists of a body and a south isle; which are tiled, as is also the chancel. On the south side, near the chancel, there is a chapel, leaded, belonging to the Poole, wherein several of the Symonds family lie interred with monuments. The church is a handsome stone building; when and by whom erected, is unknown; it is supposed to have been by contribution of the neighbouring nobility and gentry, because of the Coats of Arms still visible on the rail or partition between the church and chancel, particularly of the De Veres, Earls of Oxford. At the west end, there is a stately tower, embattled, containing 5 bells. Peter Muilman, Esq. hath adorned this church with a handsome altar-piece, painted glass, and velvet pulpit and communion cloth.

None of them to be chosen [illegible] three years after having served the office.—This Charter confirms, also, to the Corporation, all their Bounds and Limits, namely, Haylespett, Morysbroke, Lumborn, Billingbroke, Buherne, Cratenha, and Revank, with the waters and banks or shores within those bounds, as they had enjoyed them, from time immemorial: and that none should fish, or erect cranes and wharfs, from the Hethe to Revanks, without the license of the Bailiffs, &c. nor presume to sell or buy within the water, unless at the Hethe of this Burgh, upon pain of forfeiture.—All their ancient Customs, Liberties, Privileges, Franchises, Rights, granted to them at any time before, by any former Charters, are finally confirmed by this in the amplest and fullest manner.

Under this Charter the Corporation has acted ever since, it being their last Charter. In pursuance of it, they have two Bailiffs annually chosen, six Aldermen, eighteen capital Burgesses, and of other Burgesses, who have votes at elections, about 1000.

This Burgh hath sent Burgesses to Parliament ever since the year 1329, the third of King Edward III. but with some chasms, as appears by the List of them, inserted in the Introduction to this History, after the List of the Knights of the Shire.

This town was anciently divided into three Parishes. 1. Allsaints. 2. St. Peter's—these two have been long united together. 3. St. Mary's.

Parish is in the highest part of the town, and the church is the chief in this borough. It is a spacious edifice, consisting of a body and north and south aisles; the south one is called Darcy's Aisle, or Chapel. On the top of the tower is a spire, built in the form of an equilateral triangle, which is very uncommon. Here are five bells.

This church was given, by Robert Mantell, to Bileigh-Abbey, founded by him in Little Maldon, of which we shall presently give an account. The great tithes were afterwards appropriated to it, and a vicarage ordained, of which the Abbot and Convent continued patrons, till their suppression.

The smallness of the profits of this vicarage, and of the neighbouring one of St. Peter's, occasioned them to be united, in 1306, and they have remained so ever since.

Upon the suppression, King Henry VIII. granted this church and rectory, and the advowson of the vicarage, to John Gate, Esq. He, by license, dated 17th of September 1546, alienated them to Lands and tenements, in Maldon, were put in feoffment, by divers persons, to the intent that the Wardens of St. Catharine's Gild should find a Priest to sing mass in All-Saints church, and help to serve the cure. In the Certificate it is said, that this parish had then in it, by estimation, 200 of houseling people. At the suppression, the yearly value of it was 46*s.* King Edward VI. the 26th of September 1548, granted to John Welles, all the messuages, lands, meadows, and pastures belonging to this Gild or Fraternity (*).

Robert Darcy, of Danbury, Esq. founded three chantries in this church, in the reign of King Henry IV. and the south aisle, or chapel, is called Darcy's Aisle or Chapel, undoubtedly because it was built by him for the use of his chantry Priests. Several of that family were buried in this aisle, as appears by the epitaphs. [See a further account of the family under Danbury and St. Osith.

St. Peter's.

This parish stands in the heart of the town. The church was given, by R. Mantell, to Bileigh-Abbey, and united to All-Saints, as I have observed above.

Of the church, only the tower is now standing; the body of it being down, Dr. Thomas Plume erected, upon the scite of it, a handsome brick edifice, the lower part of which is the grammar-school, and the upper part a library, which he furnished with his own books. For a more particular account of this generous person's benefactions to this town, see below, under the article Charities and Benefactions.

Ralph Breeder may be called the first founder of the grammar-school, he having left 300*l.* for that use. Mrs. Anastasia Wentworth added thereto. See below, among the benefactions, and in the other volume, p. 134.

In this parish there was a gild, in honour of the Virgin Mary, founded by license of King Henry V. for a Priest to sing mass in the church, and to keep a school. In the Certificate of Chantries it is said, that the parish of St. Peter's was 'a very great parish, 'having in yt the number of 240 of house-'ling people.' The endowment of this Gild, was, a tenement called the Starr; nine tenements and messuages, and a gate-house;

The lordship and scite of this abbey, with its church-yard, and the lands set down in note [O], together with the rectories of St. Peter's and All-Saints in Maldon, and the advowsons of the vicarages, were granted, in 1540, to John Gate, Esq. and his heirs, to hold, in capite, by the twentieth part of a knight's-fee, and rent of 3*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.* He obtained license, the 17th of September 1549, to alienate them to

This estate was next in Thomas Francke, Esq. of the Rise, &c. in Hatfeild-Broad-Oak. [See in the other volume, p. 507]. He held the scite of this monastery, and the maner of Belight, and Belight-grange, and 5 messuages, one dove-house, 100 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, and 200 of pasture, in Maldon, &c. And dying, the 9th of February 1579, was succeeded by his son, Richard Francke, then 26 years old (l). He departed this life the 28th of October 1628, and his son and heir, Leventhorp Francke (m), afterwards knighted, sold this estate to

He was the second son of John Vernon, of Nottinghamshire, Esq. descended from Rich. Vernon, of the Peak in Derbyshire. At the time of his decease, 2d of August 1605, he held this estate; leaving, by Alice his wife, daughter of . . . Scriven, William, his son and heir, 30 years old (p). in Mundon, twenty pounds per annum, to the Bailiffs of Maldon, for the poor of the three parishes. viz. 8*l.* to All-Saints parish; to the other two, 6*l.* a-piece. Also, 30*l.* for reparation of the church of All-Saints; and 120*l.* for repairing the haven, channels, and bridges of Fullbridge and Heybridge, to be expended in three years. Likewise, 300*l.* to be laid out for an endowment of a grammar-school master; the said schoolmaster to be nominated by his feoffees, whilst they lived, and afterwards by the Bailiffs of this Corporation. He gave the maner of East-Newland, purchased of Abel Clarke, Esq. Finally, he gave 20*l.* to be lent to free-men, without interest, they giving security.

Thomas Cammock, of Maldon, Esq. gave Cromwell-Water to the town.

Mrs. Anastatia, widow of Henry Wentworth, Esq. and sole daughter and heir of William Hale, of this town, Gent. that died the 4th of June 1634, gave 23*l.* per annum to the free-school, out of a farm at Hatfield-Peverell. She also gave two houses, of about 9 or 10*l.* per annum, to this school.—Besides this, 3*l.* per annum was given, out of rents of houses in this town, to the said school.

But the greatest benefactor to this town was Dr. Thomas Plume.

"The farm of Iltney in Munden having been (as he had credibly heard) a Chantry-land given to Maldon (*), but alienated by King Henry VIII. he now restored, and gave for ever to the town of Maldon, for the uses following: 1. To keep in good repair the school and library-room for ever. 2dly. To maintain a weekly Lecture from Lady-day to Michaelmas for ever, allowing the several neighbouring Ministers of Dengy, or Rochford-hundred, that shall be chosen to preach it, ten shillings for their Sermon, and two shillings for his own and his friends dinner, if the Trustees order it, upon Wednesday or Saturday, as they shall agree, in the Upper Church at Maldon. But upon the first Wednesday or Saturday in August, he allows twenty shillings out of Iltney-lands, towards the dinner of them that shall there meet, and take the accounts of the tenants, let and set the farm, consider the repairs of the houses, &c.—Allowing the Sexton ten shillings for each of the two quarters for tolling the bell for the Lecture, to be paid 10*s.* upon Midsummer-day, and 10*s.* at Michaelmass. And likewise 10*s.* at each of the said quarter-days, to be divided among the most godly indigent poor of Maldon, that repair to this lecture, prayers and sermon most constantly. As to his LIBRARY, just mentioned above,

He gave to this Library all his Books and Pictures, (except his own Picture in Mr. Pond's house), together with his large map of the world; and desired all his manuscript papers, of his own hand, to be carefully preserved in the study of the said Library. He directed that the keeper of his Library should be a Scholar that knows Books, M. A. and in holy orders, and may be some Minister that has a neighbouring living, and can and shall reside in Maldon; or the School-master himself, or any other of good learning and life, that will be ingaged to attend every morning and afternoon (except Sundays) two hours in the Library-room, or in his house near to it, in all four hours per diem; that any Gentleman, or Scholar, who desires, may go into it, and make use of any book there, or borrow it, in case he leaves a vadimonium with the keeper for the restoring thereof fair and incorrupted within a short time, or else therewith to buy another of the same kind and goodness. He shall suffer no stranger to be there alone without a voucher for his honesty, and his own promise not to carry away or deface any book. The Library-keeper is to give 200*l.* bond at least not to imbezzell his books, nor to lend them out without sufficient pawn to his Trustees at Maldon, to buy the same again. The Governors of Sion-college London for the time being are to take account thereof, for which he left that college 20*s.* per annum out of Iltney estate for ever. And because new Books are daily printing, he wills that 20 shillings per annum be paid out of his Iltney estate yearly for ever, to buy any that shall be most desired by the Library-keeper.—His Salary is forty pounds a year, and a dwelling-house near the Library.

Two thousand pounds that he had in the East-India Company, he ordered to be imployed for making good his Charities as to the Work-house for the poor of Maldon, Munden, and neighbour parishes, and other Charities specified in his will.—Having bequeathed in it before 200*l.* and all the residue of his personal estate not disposed of, for purchasing and providing Tenements, and a Stock for setting the Poor of Maldon, and some of the Poor of Munden, to work. And what remained of his personal estate in the Exchequer, towards erecting a Work-house for the poor of Maldon

This munificent person was born in Maldon, and baptized in All-Saints church the 7th of August 1630, educated in Chelmsford school, and at Christ's College in Cambridge; afterwards Vicar of Greenwich, and Archdeacon of Rochester. WOODHAM.

Two parishes so called stand in the north-west corner of this hundred; between Maldon and the Hundred of Chelmsford; in which last hundred, there is another stiled Woodham-Ferrers, so near these as to have been once part of the same district. The name is from the two words, Wood; and ham, habitation or village; i. e. the Village in the Wood: of the same meaning as Waltham. The two Woodhams in this hundred are distinguished hy the addition of Walter and Mortimer, two noble families to which they anciently belonged.

3. WOODHAM-WALTER,

Took that name from its lords, the Fitz-Walter family.

Here is but one maner; the mansion-house of which, once the seat of the noble family of Fitz-Walter, stood about half a mile from the church.

Ralph Baignard was one of King William's attendants in his conquest of this kingdom; and so high in his favour, that he rewarded him with 25 lordships in this county, and many more elsewhere. [See in the other volume, p. 427]. Baynard's castle, in London, was his capital mansion, and the head of his Barony. He was succeeded by his son, Geffrey; and he by his son, *Wm. This Robert, surnamed Fitz-Richard, died in 1134; leaving, by Maud his wife, daughter of Simon de St. Liz, Earl of Huntindon, his son and heir, Walter Fitz-Robert, who married, first, Maud, eldest daughter of Richard de Lucy, with whom he had the lordship of Disc, or Diss, in Norfolk; secondly, Margaret de Bohun. [R] He was a man so extremely fat, and of such an uncommon bulk and weight, that there are very few, if any, such instances to be found in any country, or upon record in any books. At the age of 12 years and a half, he weighed 10 stones and 4 pounds horseman's weight, i. e. 144 pounds. He increased in bulk as he grew up, so that in Seven years more he weighed 336 pounds. He went on increasing, and probably in pretty near the same proportion: For the last time he was weighed, which was about thirteen months before he died, his neat weight was 41 stones and 10 pounds, or 584 pounds. At the time of his death, as he was manifestly grown bigger since the last weighing, if we take the same proportion by which he had increased for many years upon an average, viz. of about 2 stones a year, and only allow 4 pounds addition for last year, on account of his moving about but very little, this will bring him to 44 stones or 616 pounds neat weight.—As to his measure, he was 5 feet 9 inches and a half high. His body round the chest just under the arms measured 5 feet 6 inches, and round the belly 6 feet 11 inches. His arm in the middle of it was 2 feet 2 inches about, and his leg 2 feet 8 inches. After his death, seven men were buttoned in his westcoat without breaking a stitch, or straining a button. He died 10th November 1750, aged 29.

They had four sons: Freere, who died young; Christopher, baptized on the 8th of April 1651; Thomas; John; and two daughters: Susan and Anne [H]. On the 22d of April 1701, . . . Stephen Piper, Esq. He was the second son of John Piper, of Great Cornard in Suffolk, Gent. In 1686, he attended Roger Palmer, Earl of Castlemain, in his Embassy to Rome, in the station of his Master of the Horse; and afterwards was an Officer or Colonel in the Guards, under King William and Queen Anne: but resigning that post in 1704, he came and settled at Ashen-hall, and acted as Justice of the Peace, Treasurer of his county, &c. till his decease, which happened on the 16th of February 1721-2, in the 68th year of his age. Having no issue by his wife, Philadelphia, daughter of Sir Robert Parker, of Sussex, Bart. he left his estates to his nephew, John Piper, Esq. [I].

The Church and chancel are of one pace, both tiled; and the tower, built of stone and brick, and embattled, contains 3 bells.

This church of Esse was given, by Gilbert de Clare, to the priory of St. John Baptist, at Clare, [translated afterwards to Stoke], which he made a cell to the Abbey of Bec in Normandy. King Edward III. during his wars with France, seized it as part of the revenues of the Alien Priories, and presented to the rectory several times. After the conclusion of the peace, it was restored to the Monks, which were naturalized by King Richard II. 29th July 1395 [K]; and this whole foundation at Stoke converted, 16th January 1415, into a Collegiate church; consisting of a Dean, six secular Canons, and several other officers (u). In the said priory and college, did the advowson of this church continue, till the general suppression of religious houses, when it came to the Crown. King Edward VI. granted it, as we have seen, to his Præceptor, Sir John Cheke; who exchanged it again with Queen Mary. She annexed it, 15th April 1558, to the Duchy of Lancaster: since which time it hath continued in the Crown, in right of that Duchy.

30. REDGWELL,

Is written in records these other various ways:—Radewell, Radeswell, Redwell, Reddeswell, Redswell, Ridewell, Ridiswell, Rodeswell, Roddeswell, Ruddeswell. There is a fine well, or spring, rising at the chancel end of this church; and whether from that, and Rode, a cross, or from an ancient owner, called Redwall, or Redwald, a name not uncommon among the Saxons, the appellation of this place is derived, we cannot determine.

In Edward the Confessor's reign it belonged to Godwin, a freeman; but was given, by William the Conqueror, to Eustace Earl of Bologne, with many other fine lordships [L]: and, from being his, it came ever after to be holden of the honor of Bologne.

About the reign of King Henry II. it was in the family surnamed de Ansty, from the place of their residence, Ansty in Hertfordshire (w). In the 13th of King John, Hubert de Anestie, held two knight's-fees in Radwell, of the honor of Bologne, by the payment of 15*l.* a year into the Exchequer (x).—Nicolas, his son, left an only daughter and heir, named

Dionysia, who brought this and other estates, in marriage, to William de Montchensy, Baron of Swainscamp. [See above, p. 35, 138.] In 1244, King Henry III. granted them free-warren in their lands in Redeswell (y) [M]. He died in 1285, and she in 1303, leaving two children: William and Dionysia. William, the son, being one of the discontented Barons, opposed King John and King Henry III. to the utmost of his power. He was one of the chief commanders at the battle of Lewes, in which King Henry III. was taken prisoner; but being himself taken soon after, his estate was confiscated, and given to William de

In Edward the Confessor's reign it belonged to Godwin, a freeman; but was given, by William the Conqueror, to Eustace Earl of Bologne, with many other fine lordships [L]: and, from being his, it came ever after to be holden of the honor of Bologne.

About the reign of King Henry II. it was in the family surnamed de Ansty, from the place of their residence, Ansty in Hertfordshire (w). In the 13th of King John, Hubert de Anestie, held two knight's-fees in Radwell, of the honor of Bologne, by the payment of 15*l.* a year into the Exchequer (x).—Nicolas, his son, left an only daughter and heir, named

[See above, p. 35, 138.] In 1244, King Henry III. granted them free-warren in their lands in Redeswell (y)[M]. He died in 1285, and she in 1303, leaving two children: William and Dionysia. William, the son, being one of the discontented Barons, opposed King John and King Henry III. to the utmost of his power. He was one of the chief commanders at the battle of Lewes, in which King Henry III. was taken prisoner; but being himself taken soon after, his estate was confiscated, and given to William de

Dionysia, inherited his great possessions. She became the wife of Hugh de Vere, second son of Robert Earl of Oxford, a man of great consequence in his time; much employed by King Edward I. in civil and military affairs (a). They both died in the year 1313, without issue [N]; whereupon

Adomar de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, son of the aforesaid William, and Joane de Montchensy, succeeded them in their noble inheritance (b). He procured, in 1318, a weekly market in this place, on Tuesday, and a fair, yearly, on the eve and day of St. Laurence, and the day following, August 9, 10, and 11 (c). Though he was thrice married; namely, 1. to Beatrix, daughter of Ralph de Nele, Constable of France; 2. to .... daughter of the Earl of Bar.; 3. to Mary, daughter of Guy de Chastillon, Count of St. Paul, kinswoman of King Edward III. yet he died, 23d June 1324, without issue (d) [O]. His last wife had this maner for part of her dowry, and lived till 1376; having continued a widow 53 years (e). Nay, it is said (f), she was maid, wife, and widow, all in a day; her husband being unhappily slain at a tilting on their nuptials. She founded Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge. Upon her decease, this estate descended to

Elizabeth, who became the wife of Sir Edward Nevill, fourth son of Ralph Earl of Westmoreland, and in her right was Baron Bergavenny.—George, his son, succeeded him in 1476 (h); and had for successor, his son, George Neville, Lord Bergavenny. [See above, p. 35, 36, 138, 227.]

In 1721, John Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, and Hugh Ashton, Archdeacon of York, two of the executors of Margaret Countess of Richmond and Derby, foundress of St. John's College in Cambridge, purchased this maner Pannells le Hill.

Is a capital farm in this parish, on the top of a hill, not far from the church; so named from a family of that surname; some of which appear to have lived here from the year 1385 to 1613. John Pannell was at the charge of making one of the north windows of this church; and his name was painted on the glass. [The Pannel, or Paynell, family had also the maner of Bradfeild in Toppesfeild, where see some account of them.] On the 18th of January 1613, John Pannell, the elder, with Margaret his wife, and John their son and heir, put this messuage and estate into the hands of trustees, and levied a fine. Those trustees conveyed the premises, 31st October 1619, to Benjamin Fisher and Thomas Baron, and their heirs. And these last alienated them, 11th August 1625, to

Peter Elliston, and his heirs. The 22d of October 1661, Joseph Elliston sold this estate to

Dorothy Barrington, widow of Robert, younger son of Sir Francis Barrington, the first Baronet of that family, for her life; to descend to her son, Colonel John Barrington, and his heirs for ever. But the Colonel sold it, 7th February 1676, to

Charles Ballett, M. D. and the latter passed it, 3d November 1681, to

William Guyon, of Belchamp Walter, Gent. descended from Mr. Thomas Guyon, of Coggeshall, mentioned above, p. 165.—W. Guyon sold it again, 2d May 1696, to John Nevill, of this place, Esq. He was descended from Thomas, younger son of Richard Nevill Lord Latimer, who died in 1530 (i). This Thomas had, with Mary his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir Thomas Tey, the maner of Pigots in Ardley, where he died in 1540; as did his widow in 1544.—Thomas, their son, was father of John Nevill, of Halsted, Gent. His son Richard, of the same place, died in 1625. John, his younger son, was of Redgwell, and died 27th February 1687. By Jane, daughter of Nathan Wade, of Halsted, he had John Nevill, Esq. the purchaser of this estate. He married Sarah, youngest daughter of Joseph Fishpool, of Billerica, Gent. and had by her several children. George, the eldest son and heir, being of Lower Yeldham, took to wife Jane, daughter of William Guyon, of Halsted, Gent. by whom he had George Raymond Nevill, Esq. and a daughter.

This estate belongs now to Mr. John Richards: who hath also another farm in

Essex,

Is a farm in this parish, upon the confines of Stambourne. Ingelram de Blendet held it, about the year 1210, of the honor of Bologne, as half a knight's-fee (k). John de Blendet died in 1257, possessed, in the vill of Reddeswell, of 80 acres of arable, 4 acres of meadow, a garden, and 11*s*. 6*d*. rent of assize (l). Henry, his son, at the time of his decease, in 1265, held it of the King, as a knight's-fee; but it was then called 100 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, marsh land sufficient to keep 120 sheep, 13*s*. rent, and suit at the Court of Bologne.—John was his son (m).

A family surnamed De Essex held it afterwards (n), from which it took its name; being then called 60 acres of arable, 12 of pasture, &c.

One John Weld had it in 1377 (o).

Part of it, or another estate, seems to have belonged to an ancient family of note, that took their surname from this parish, and flourished here as early as the year 1275.—John de Reddeswell was one of the Barons of the Exchequer in 1327. Thomas de Reddeswell, who died in 1375, held, in Reddeswell, of Mary Countess of Pembroke, 80 acres of arable, 7 acres of meadow, and one acre of underwood: of the Prior of Stoke, 7 acres of arable: of Henry Engleys, 14 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, and one of pasture: of William Breton, 3 acres of meadow.—William was his son (p). Essex Farm belongs now to Jeremiah Brock, Esq.

Those two greedy hunters after concealed lands, William Tipper and Robert Dawe, got, in 1590, a grant, among other things, of an estate here, called 'The Maner of Reddeswell' (q) [R], which belonged to some religious house; probably to Stoke Priory. That estate goes still by the name of Dawes Maner, and lately belonged to Mr. Evans.

Other Estates in this Parish.

The Three Chimnies, a farm belonging to Queen's College in Cambridge.—Parmenters town stood formerly a mile nearer to Stambourn; and, in support of that tradition, foundations are discovered there to this day; certain signs of ancient buildings in that place.

Some time ago, Mr. Richard Piper ploughed up, in lands belonging to the College-lordship, several ancient British and Roman coins; and, among the rest, a fine gold one of Constantine. Most of them are in the custody of the Master and Fellows of St. John's College.

To a Gild here, called Jesus Gild, belonged a messuage, called Le Yeld-hall, and 8 acres of land, which King Edward VI. in 1549, granted to Ralph Agard and Tho. Smyth (r).

Andrew Wade, and another person, gave fifteen pounds to this place, to be lent out, and the interest for the use of the poor.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 76*l*. 2*s*.

The Church, dedicated to St. Laurence, consists of a body, leaded, and a chancel, tiled; both of one pace: a square tower, embattled, contains 5 bells.

This church was given by Dionysia, wife of William de Montchensy, above-mentioned, to her nunnery, at Waterbeach (s). It being removed to Denny, by Mary Countess of Pembroke, in 1348, the rectory was appropriated to the Abbess and Sisters of Denny; who became thenceforth patronesses of the vicarage, till their suppression; when it fell to the Crown. In 1539, King Henry VIII. granted both the rectory and advowson of the vicarage to Edward Elrington (t): who, by license, dated 28th February 1540, alienated them to Reginald Braybrook, Baynbryk, or Bainbridge, the 6th master of Catharine-hall in Cambridge. And he, by license, 15th November 1549, settled them both upon that house (u). They have leased the great tithes to the University of Cambridge, whose undertenant is Mr. John Parmenter.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, was undoubtedly built by some of the noble family of Grey, of Wilton, the patrons. It is quite ruinous, there being only some small remains of it near the hall yard. The inhabitants resort to Lachindon church, as being the nearest, and are there baptized and buried, and contribute to all parochial duties. However, this is still a rectory presentative.

There are not above six or seven houses in this parish, which is rated to the land-tax at

11. MUNDON,

Lies between Lalling and Maldon-river, or Black-water-bay, abutting north towards Northey-island.

The name is derived from the two Saxon words, Mund, security, defence, mound; and dun, a hill; here, probably, having been some kind of fortification.

This belonged to Goduin, a King's Thegn, in Edward the Confessor's reign. Eudo Dapifer held it at the time of the survey [E], and gave both maner and advowson of the church to St John's Abbey in Colchester, of his foundation (g) [F].

After the suppression of that Abbey, King Henry VIII. in 1539, granted this maner of Mondon, and the appropriate rectory or great tithes, to Thomas Lord Cromwell, Keeper of the Privy Seal, and his heirs (h).

Upon his attainder it reverted to the Crown; and Queen Mary I. the 15th of April 1558, annexed Munden-hall, with several other lordships, to the Dutchy of Lancaster (i).

Thomas Western, Esq. of Rivenhall, purchased it, and it hath descended to his heirs. [See in the other volume, p. 147].

Mundon-hall, the maner-house, stands a little way north from the church. It hath very large demesnes.

Eltney, or Iltney-farm, near the channel, was part of St. John's Abbey demesnes, in this parish (k). In 1556, Wm Harrys, Esq. held this messuage called Iltney, in Mondon, and divers lands, tenements, meadows, pastures, &c. of the Queen, as of her maner of Mondon.

Ralph Breeder had it in 1608 (l).

It belonged afterwards to Dr. Thos. Plume, who settled it upon his foundations at Maldon. [See under Maldon, p. 337].

The Lords Fitz-Walter had a moiety of a fee in Mundon, which John Oliver held in 1386, and James de Bures afterwards (m).

Robert Teye held, in 1426, one messuage, 80 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 6 of

But the unskilful transcriber taking the final n in Mundon for an u', and imagining it must be a contraction of uer, made of it that uncouth and unusual name Mundover.

Mercia [I]; who had also in this county, Gestingthorp, Lammarsh, Wethersfeild, Felsted, South-hall in Dunmow, and Great Badow, and Celdeford, or Shalford. Afterwards, it was holden by Queen Edeua, or Eadgith. And, at the time of the general survey, was divided amongst divers persons; namely, Alan, son of the Earl of Bretagne; Richard Fitz-Gislebert, ansestor to the Earls of Clare; and Otto, the goldsmith, farmed two hides and a half, part of it, of the King. [See above, p. 305.] What Alan then possessed, had been holden, in Edward the Confessor's reign, by three freemen; and comprehended what afterwards was called Spains-hall, Jekells, Woodhall, Belcumber-hall, &c. The share of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, holden by two sochmen, in Edward's reign, comprised Cornet-hall, Nortofts, and Sculpins; Brent-hall, Justices, and Cockfeilds. The same Richard had also Boitonhall in this parish; which, in the Confessor's time, had belonged to Colsege, a freeman.—Here is also Woburnes, alias Hou-hall, and Ashwell-hall. Of these several estates, we shall treat distinctly.

Spains-Hall,

Took its name from Hervey de Ispania, or Spain, who held, it under Count Alan, at the time of the general survey [K]. The mansion-house is about a mile north of the church.

Alan Fergent, second son of Eudo Earl of Bretagne, was one of those Chiefs who attended Duke William in his conquest of this kingdom, and was rewarded by him with several lordships; particularly with the earldom or honor of Richmond in Yorkshire (y): on which account, this lordship was holden of that honor, being the only one so held in this county. His two brothers, Alan the Black, and Stephen Earl of Penthievre, and Alan the Savage, son of the latter, were successively possessors of this estate. This last died in 1166. But, before his decease, he gave this lordship to Alberic de Vere [L], and his heirs, by the title of the service of William de Ispania, of three knight's-fees; and the service of William son of William of Giechtell, or Juichiel, of one knight's-fee; and the service of Richard Mascle (z).

As for the under-tenant, Hervey de Ispania, or Spain, the family hath been just mentioned above, p. 301, under Spains-hall in Great Yeldham, and will occur again under Willingale-Spain. They were originally of Spanish extraction, which was the reason of their name; and appear to have been seated here, or hereabouts, from the Conquest, down to the reign of King Edward II. Ralph de Hispania was witness to a grant of Adeliza de Vere to Colne-Priory (a). Richard had lands in this parish in 1263 (b). Gilbert is mentioned as father of William, and grandfather of Sir Richard; who had two sons: Richard; and John, Rector of Ging-Ralph: to which last he gave Old-Hall in 1312, by a deed, witnessed by William de Wanton, William Ralph, and John de Nortoft, Knights; Robert Jekell, and William de Finchefeld, known inhabitants of this place (c).

From the Spains [M] this estate early came, by marriage, or otherwise, into the Kempe family; of which we shall give the following exact account, from their ancient evidences. . . . John Kempe, Gent. of this place, in the reign of King Edward I. [N], married Alice Gunter; by whom he had Nicolas, his son and heir, that married Margery, or Margaret, daughter of Richard de Ispania. She was living in the year 1310. They had issue; John Kempe, Gent. He married . . . daughter of . . . Reymonde, son of John de Lincoln, and had with her lands in this parish, of considerable value, called Reymondys. Their son John was father of another John; who, by . . . . daughter of . . . . Armesbury, had Richard, living about the year 1371. He had two wives. 1. Catharine . . . . 2. Margaret, daughter of Robert Jekell, of London, mercer, that brought him, in marriage, about 1406, the maners of Jekells and Justices. Their son and heir, William Kempe, Esq. married Alice, daughter of . . . Milde, or Miles; and had by her, Robert, who dying 30th June 1524, was buried in Kempe's Chapel, adjoining to the chancel of this church. By Anne his wife, daughter of . . . . Apulderfeild, of Kent, he had seven sons and three daughters; but only the name of William, the eldest son, is recorded. He married Mary, daughter of John Colt, [whose other daughter, Jane, was wife of the great Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor]; and had by her, six sons: Robert, Arthur, Henry, and John; which three last died without issue; and George, seated at Cavendish in Suffolk. Also three daughters: Margery, wife of Geo. Cavendish, of Glemsford in Suffolk; Anne, wife of Thomas Wright, of Norwich; and Margaret, of Tho. Downes, remarried to. . . .Rushborough. The said William had to his second wife, Mary, holden, in Edward the Confessor's reign, by three freemen; and comprehended what afterwards was called Spains-hall, Jekells, Woodhall, Belcumber-hall, &c. The share of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, holden by two sochmen, in Edward's reign, comprised Cornet-hall, Nortofts, and Sculpins; Brent-hall, Justices, and Cockfeilds. The same Richard had also Boiton-hall in this parish; which, in the Confessor's time, had belonged to Colsege, a freeman.—Here is also Woburnes, alias Hou-hall, and Ashwell-hall. Of these several estates, we shall treat distinctly.

Spains-Hall,

Took its name from Hervey de Ispania, or Spain, who held, it under Count Alan, at the time of the general survey [K]. The mansion-house is about a mile north of the church.

Alan Fergent, second son of Eudo Earl of Bretagne, was one of those Chiefs who attended Duke William in his conquest of this kingdom, and was rewarded by him with several lordships; particularly with the earldom or honor of Richmond in Yorkshire (y): on which account, this lordship was holden of that honor, being the only one so held in this county. His two brothers, Alan the Black, and Stephen Earl of Penthievre, and Alan the Savage, son of the latter, were successively possessors of this estate. This last died in 1166. But, before his decease, he gave this lordship to Alberic de Vere [L], and his heirs, by the title of the service of William de Ispania, of three knight's-fees; and the service of William son of William of Giechfell, or Juichiel, of one knight's-fee; and the service of Richard Mascle (z).

As for the under-tenant, Hervey de Ispania, or Spain, the family hath been just mentioned above, p. 301, under Spains-hall in Great Yeldham, and will occur again under Willingale-Spain. They were originally of Spanish William Ralph, and John de Nortott, Knights; Robert Jekell, and William de Finchefeld, known inhabitants of this place (c).

From the Spains [M] this estate early came, by marriage, or otherwise, into the Kempe family; of which we shall give the following exact account, from their ancient evidences. . . . John Kempe, Gent. of this place, in the reign of King Edward I. [N], married Alice Gunter; by whom he had Nicolas, his son and heir, that married Margery, or Margaret, daughter of Richard de Ispania. She was living in the year 1310. They had issue; John Kempe, Gent. He married . . . daughter of . . . Reymonde, son of John de Lincoln, and had with her lands in this parish, of considerable value, called Reymondys. Their son John was father of another John; who, by . . . . daughter of . . . . Armesbury, had Richard, living about the year 1371. He had two wives. 1. Catharine . . . . 2. Margaret, daughter of Robert Jekell, of London, mercer, that brought him, in marriage, about 1406, the maners of Jekells and Justices. Their son and heir, William Kempe, Esq. married Alice, daughter of . . . Milde, or Miles; and had by her, Robert, who dying 30th June 1524, was buried in Kempe's Chapel, adjoining to the chancel of this church. By Anne his wife, daughter of . . . . Apulderfeild, of Kent, he had seven sons and three daughters; but only the name of William, the eldest son, is recorded. He married Mary, daughter of John Colt, [whose other daughter, Jane, was wife of the great Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor]; and had by her, six sons: Robert, Arthur, Henry, and John; which three last died without issue; and George, seated at Cavendish in Suffolk. Also three daughters: Margery, wife of Geo. Cavendish, of Glemsford in Suffolk; Anne, wife of Thomas Wright, of Norwich; and Margaret, of Tho. Downes, remarried to. . . .Rushborough. The said William had to his second wife, Mary,

BY

H. B. PLUMB,

PEELY, LUZERNE COUNTY, PA.

SECOND EDITION.

1898.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE REASON WHY!

Personal Explanation.

IN THE FIRST EDITION.

In 1849, when I was a youth of 19, living with my uncle in Honesdale, Pa., my uncle received a letter from a boy of my age in Tennessee, called Sylvester Plumb. He said he was the only son of a Sylvester Plumb, who had died when he was a child, and he only knew his name, and, as he had seen my uncle's name in the Scientific American, he wrote to him to ask him if he could tell him anything about his ancestry, who his father was and where he came from, etc. My uncle read the letter to me and said he would go and see his father and mother in Prompton, (four miles distant) the next Sunday and ask them about it. I determined to go, too. We went, and grandfather and grandmother, both born Plumb, then past seventy years old, said they were born in Middletown, Conn. They had an uncle, Reuben Plumb, there, who had a son Sylvester who went South about 1800, and had not been heard of afterward by them; that he was probably the grandfather of this Sylvester. My uncle wrote this down. I listened to all, and having lost my father by death when a child, and until the year before —1848 — never knew any of the name of Plumb, felt impelled to inquire further. I got paper and pencil, and grandfather and grandmother told me their grandfather's name was Waitstill John Plumb; that he lived in Middletown where they were born. They told me the names of all his sons and daughters, and their cousins, the children of these sons, and what became of them, so far as they knew. They told me the tradition of the family, which was, of course, more interesting than all the rest to a youngster like me then. I kept that paper and often came across it and read it over, and I found in the course of time that I was the only boy who had done such a thing as to gather up the family history and genealogy from an ancester as far back as a grandfather and write it down for preservation and preserve it forty years. Now, during these forty years it had been growing upon me that I wanted to know more about my progenitors, and in the fall of 1888 I determined to go to Middletown, Conn., and search the ancient records, and I went. I found altogether more than I expected at Middletown, and, for a consideration, the son of the town clerk furnished me a number of families from the church records of Milford, and this brought me far on toward the first Plumb in America. I went to New London and gleaned the clerk's office there also. I then had some thirty families of a date previous to 1800, and I came home well pleased. When I came to look at my acquisitions the whole thing seemed a perfect chaos. It was bewildering, but with the help of what I had learned from my grandfather and grandmother I was able to put together our own family well enough all the way back, but I had some 200 names or more, and only about half of them seemed to connect on my family anywhere. But by getting my own into tables in proper form and order I acquired skill, and I digested and analyzed all of them in the course of a month or two and tabulated them all, and then I was so pleased that I felt a great desire to confer my pleasant knowledge on others. I arranged the families in what I thought the proper order and then made some copies and wrote to such Plumbs as I could easily get the address of, and explained the matter and agreed to send a copy of the 15 pages I then had if he would agree to make or have made at least one copy and send to another Plumb, making the same stipulation as to copying, etc., with him, and he was to send me his own family genealogy as far as he knew it. Some did not care about it, but some were highly pleased. I thought in this way in the course of time all the Plumbs would be known. I made eight copies and sent off, among the rest, one to Senator Plumb, of Kansas. There he found his own grandfather, and back of him to his grandfather's great grandfather, and he was highly pleased, and asked if I could not go to Connecticut again and hunt them all the way back and find the connecting links between those now separated, and offered to pay any part of the expenses that I thought right. Well, I had a good deal of a desire myself to know more, and I finally told him I would go, to be gone about 20 days, and to spend only about $100, and that he might pay half of that; and at once he sent me a check for $50. That settled it, and I had to go. I went on the 20th of May, 1889, and got back on the 10th of June. I at once began to arrange and systematize the chaos, and there was such an amount of it that I saw I had a great deal of work to do before I could commence to make any copies. I reported my success to Senator Plumb, and he wrote me that he would see the printing paid for if I would do the work of preparing the manuscript and attend to the printing of it, and no other copying need be done. He would have it printed for distribution to get further information. I agreed to do it, and here it is. No literary merit is claimed for it, and I am not to blame for having done it. I am not especially anxious to do work for nothing, but the love of one's family is not, in my opinion, a bad trait. Senator Plumb, and the Hon. Ralph Plumb, of Illinois pay out their money for love of the family, and why should not I? I have done all the work and paid out nearly as much money as either of them, and if it is a foolish expenditure, I am foolish for wishing to know my progenitors. But, I do wish to know even more than I know now; but I don't feel able to go further than from the first Plumb in America, 1635, down to the children of men born previous to 1800. Ralph Plumb pays half the printing, Senator Plumb the other half.

Statement for Second Edition; Now I know. 1893. H. B. PLUMB.

Second Edition.

The English tables are numbered, but not indexed, from No. 1 to the last name on the tables.

The American Plumbs are numbered from No. 1, to the last in regular succession, or intended to be, the first being John Plum of Wethersfield, 1635, and of Branford, 1645. Over No. 1 will be his No. 32, on the English list. Then follows his eldest son Robert No. 2, and all his descendants; then Samuel No. 6, and his descendants; Then John Plumbe of Hartford 1660, and Saw London 1677, No. 505, with his English No. over it; then will come in succession all his son John's descendants; then Samuel's; then Joseph's; then Green's; then George's. After these will follow Benoni's; and after his they are all merely fragments of families. Those of German descent being known by the name of Plum, I put in so all persons of the name can trace their descent. All on the American Tables are indexed.

In order to trace a person's parentage back, find the name on the index, turn to his No. and look at his father's No. over the family, in heavy black figures, turn back to that No. on the general list, and see his father's No. in heavy black figures at the left of his name and so on back. Instance, Senator Plumb's father is David, his father Ichabod, his father Reuben, his father Waitstill John, his father Joseph, his father John, his father Robert, his father John No. 1, and his father on the English list Robert, his father Robert, and his father John Plume, the first whose family is tabulated. From him back I cannot name the fathers.

A plus mark [+] at the end of a name shows that more is shown of him further on, and in this way names can be traced forward. A very little study will show it all. The name at this mark will have a general number which will be found in the heavy black type standing to the left of the name of the father of the family, further on.

PREFACE.

Dates were not always on the record, and, in such cases, where it was obvious that the date was near a certain time the writer has put in a date in small figures here as his guess at it, and the word "say" to indicate his mere supposition. It may be asked, why not leave the space blank? The answer is that any one interested must, in his mind, assume a date anyhow; why, then should not the compiler of the work, whose study of the whole thing has made him more familiar with it than any other person can be, put a suggestion of a date in any such place? Dates were sometimes written in figures alone, as: 1-7, 1639, which is read "First of the seventh month, 1639;" but it still needs translation into our "New Style" of keeping time, and that is Sept. 1, 1639. March was the first month of the year in "Old Style," and March 25 was the 1st day of the year. Dates are frequently found where there are two figures at the end of the year, as: Mar. 17, 1747-8. This simply means that in Old Style March 17 was in 1747, but in New Style would be 1748. This method of dating may be found till 1752, when it was only kept in New style, and the months where it was used were from January 1 to March 24, inclusive; from March 25 they are both alike. From 1752 the new style was according to law, and the 1st of January was the first of the year. All should know that in these double figures the last one is the true one for our present style of counting time. The addition of the 11 days (now 12) need not be noted at all.

Where a husband or wife is in small print it indicates not a guess, but an inference. Persons of these names are inserted, but whether this child in this family of that name is the one is, to the writer, uncertain. If, in this respect (or in any other case) he has any one placed wrong, and no doubt he has, if any person who sees a copy of this work and knows the true name will write him and correct the mistake, and tell him how he or she knows it, he or she will confer a favor. These tables are printed now for the purpose of getting all the information possible for another revised, corrected and enlarged edition, knowing that this is necessarily imperfect. Some are born when they should be baptized. In all cases, if any correct dates are in possession of any one, or are procurable to make corrections, he wishes to have them sent to him as soon as possible, but, in all cases, at any time, to be sent when found, whether before or after any edition is printed. The words "from the records" mean that the writer has himself searched the original town and probate records, and copied the names and dates, but sometimes other persons' searches are included, so that they are not always wholly his own.

The sign "plus" — + — at the end of a name means that his family or children are given further on. The figure in the left hand column is the whole number from the beginning or first one known in America, and will be found afterwards attached to the name of the father of a family of children, if they were found anywhere. The date on the upper left hand corner of the page is the year the writer got the information on that page, or the names at least. Where the date of birth is not known, but the baptism is, the letter "b" is put in before the date to show that it is baptism, and not birth, as there were years between these dates sometimes, though, in general, it was only a few days between birth and baptism. Many were found—birth one day, baptism the next. My work will extend no further than to the children of men born previous to 1800.

HISTORICAL STATEMENT.

The Plumbs are Normans by descent, and can be traced back to Normandy to the year 1188, at least, and in England to 1272. John Plumb, the first known in America, came to Wethersfield with the best party of settlers from the neighborhood of Preston, Mass., Watertown, it is supposed. We are informed by history that there was a division in the church at Watertown, and in Newtown, and in Dorchester, all in Massachusetts, about some matter, and the church was divided. The minister of each of these places and his congregation left those and removed to Watertown, Newtown and Dorchester, in Connecticut, in 1635, and settled in three separate places on the Connecticut river, which they at first called by the names of the places they came from in Massachusetts—Watertown, Newtown and Dorchester. These were the first settlers in Connecticut, and numbered between thirty and forty men in each town.

In 1637 the names were changed—Watertown to Wethersfield, Newtown to Hartford, and Dorchester to Windsor. John Plumb was with those of Watertown Wethersfield. His name first appears on the Colonial records there, "1-7-1640," at a court held at Watertown that day, and among the proceedings was: "Whereas, there was tendered to us an inventory of the estate of Mr. [illegible], children which seemed to be somewhat uncertainly valued, viz., the eldest, thirtie meeds, &c., it is ordered that Mr. John Plum & Rich. Goldersleeve, together with the constable, shall survey the said inventory and perfect the same before the next sorte & then to deliver it into the sorte." From February 6, 1637, he was a member of the sons till 1642. The General Court was the Assembly of the colony of Connecticut. At a court held at Hartford, March 8, 1637, "Mr. Plum" being a member of the court, the business before it was the adopting of some means to buy corn from the Indians, as the inhabitants were in a starving condition. They agreed to pay from four to six shillings a bushel for it. "Mr. Plum" was appointed to receive the corn for Wethersfield. He held various offices, such as making the boundaries of towns, laying out roads, determining the lines between towns, seeing to the improving of the lands of the several plantations, attending court as a deputy. He was one of the men in Capt. Mason's little army during the Pequod war in 1637, and received a grant of land for his service. In 1643 he was nominated for election as "Assistant," but was beaten by Mr. Swaine. In the spring of 1644 he was appointed to attend to the clearance of vessels at Wethersfield, Edward Stebbing at Hartford, and Walter Tyler at Windsor. In the fall of 1644 he sold all his land and houses in Wethersfield and removed to Branford. The records of Wethersfield have been destroyed by fire some time in the past, and only a small part recorded of these early settlers exists. It is not likely any of his children were born in America, and no record of any exists except that his son Samuel, lived in Branford with him when he died. He is found in Branford in 1645, as the "Keeper of the Town's Books." He died there in 1658. His wife, "Mrs. Plumb," administered on his estate August 4, 1658, and with "her son Samuel" filed the inventory. Samuel, his son, with others, in 1666, bought lands in Newark, N. J., and Samuel sold out to them in Branford and removed to Newark, N. J.

In 1641, "Mr Plum, Jr.," in Wethersfield, was appointed to serve on the jury. This is supposed to have been a son of John and to have been named John, or he would not have been called Mr. Plum, Jr. He is not known anywhere else. He must have been over 21, and could have been born previous to 1620, at least. He was the John Plumb mentioned in the Winthrop papers as seeing a remarkable meteor in October, 1645, where he says in his letter "I being then rowing in my bote to Connecte, passinge from "Seabrook," at the mouth of the Connecticut river, where his letter was dated. He was then about 24 to 30 years old.

John Plumbe, of New London, served in the war against King Philip, the son of Massasoit, in 1675 to '76. He may have been a son of John, Jr., but he was too young to be John, Jr., himself. He received land for his services, and some of it was probably located in Preston after 1686, as Lemon was perhaps in Voluntown, after 1708. This is the John Plumb that married a Green, and lived in New London after, if not before the King Philip war, and is probably the John Plumbe, mentioned by Gardiner Saltonstall to Winthrop, when he says, January 2, 1641-2: "At the anniversary feast at Master Plumbe's," and August 6, 1639, "at the anniversary feast at Master Plumbe's," Saltonstall says: "John Plumb tells me that chest glass is not so good as crib glass.—Winthrop Papers. These Plumbs of New London were mariners, and followed the sea, and also shipbuilding. His son George was wrecked on Plum Island and drowned.

A John Plumb owned a lot in 1697 in Newark, N. J., but left it and it was given to another person, and he is not known there after 1697. He may be the previous of Wethersfield of 1641, brother to Samuel. He was probably a ship master, and never made his home at Newark. The New York land was bought of the Indians by the settlers in 1666. I would much like to know whether this John ever married and had children. He may be the father of the New London John that married a Green. There was a John Plum in Dorchester, Mass., in 1680, who seems to have been a poor person, to whom a pair of shoes was given, but it may have been because he had been a soldier in the King Philip war in 1676. There were two John Plums in that war, and a John Plum was killed by the Indians, among Capt. Lathrop's men, at Muddy Brook, September 18, 1675, and a John Plumb died in Queen's two expeditions: Massachusetts in 1690, aged 47. Who were parents of all these, all of Massachusetts?

There was a John Plumbe in Hartford, in 1-0-4, who was the son of George Plumbe, of Inworth, county Essex, England. The writer found him on the record there in 1665, in a deed to his wife, Elizabeth, for property equal to property he had previously received from her, and a deed of his is recorded there as late as 1674. He was acquainted, by letter of attorney in England, in January, 1-8-4, to collect debts of persons in Charlestown, Mass., a place near Dorchester. This would rather indicate that he was acquainted there, and he may be the father of Wantag and Samuel Plum, of Dorchester. Father think he is John, of Dorchester, now part of Boston, Mass.; had a daughter, Wasting, born "1-29-1657," and a son, Samuel Plum, born 24-11-1659, found by myself, on the record there. The public family records had been destroyed by fire in 1857, and only the book beginning in 1636 was saved. This had these names in it. There may have been older children than these recorded on the books that had been burnt. This is not the John, of Wethersfield, as that John went there in 1635, died there till 1641, and then removed to Branford, Conn., and died there in 1658, nine years before Waiting Plum was born. It might have been his son John, the surveyor, of 1641. A Samuel Plum was born in Dorchester, December 12, 1684, son of Sherman Hall, probably a son of Samuel, of 1659, and not put on record till after his mother's second marriage.

In town, a sloop, belonging to a Plumb, was captured by the French near Martha's Vineyard, and a week afterward, another sloop of Plumb's was captured by the Dutch this time—near Martha's Vineyard, also called Martin's Vineyard, Mass.

There were other Plumbs in Massachusetts besides the John of Dorchester, and, if all the towns' records were searched, they would probably be found, though it is certain all families did not have their children's births recorded on the public records. The old records would start from the earliest in America, say 1620-1, and all should be searched from the beginning in each town shown to 1800. All the great towns might to be searched, especially Dedham, Braintree, Hingham and others, where soldiers or militia were gathered for the War with King Philip.

Dates were sometimes written in figures alone, as: 1-7- 1676, which is read "First of the seventh month, 1676," but it still needs translation into our "New Style" of keeping time, and that is Sept. 1, 1676. March was the first month of the year in "Old Style," and March 25 was the first day of the year. Dates are frequently found where there are two figures at the end of the year, as: Mar. 17, 1747 8. This simply means that in Old Style March 17 was in 1747, but in New Style would be 1748. This method of dating may be found till 1752, when it was only kept in New Style, and the months where it was used were from January 1 to March 24, inclusive; from March 25 they are both alike. From 1752 the new style was according to law, and the 1st of January was the first of the year. All should know that in these double figures the last one is the true one for our present style of counting time. The addition of the 11 days need not be noted at all.

By Act of Parliament in Great Britain in 1751, eleven days in September, 1752, were to be retrenched, and the third day of September was reckoned the fourteenth, and by the same act the first day of January was to be the first day of the year.

The indexes are to numbers standing opposite to the names, and not to the pages.

The words "from the records" mean that the writer has himself searched the original town and probate records, and copied the names and dates, but sometimes other persons' searches are included, so that they are not always wholly his own.

The sign "plus" (+) at the end of a name means that his family or children are given further on. The figure in the left hand column is the whole number from the beginning or first one known in America, and will be found afterwards attached to the name of the father of a family of children, if they were found anywhere. The date on the upper left hand corner of the pages is the year the writer got the information on that page, or the nearest at least. Where the date of birth is not known, but the baptism is, the letter "b" is put in before the date to show that it is baptism, and not birth, as there were years between these dates sometimes, though in general, it was only a few days between birth and baptism. Many were found—birth one day, baptism the next. My work will extend no further than to the children of men born previous to 1800 or in 1800. Some mistakes will be found, but mistakes are unavoidable in any human production. If I was a perfect being there would be no mistake in this book.

HISTORICAL STATEMENT.

The Plumbs were Normans and can be traced back to Normandy to the year 1180, at least, and in England to 1240. John Plum, the first known in America, came to Wethersfield, from England in 1635. We are informed by history that there was a dispute in the church at Watertown, and in Newtown, and in Dorchester, all in Massachusetts, about some matter, and the church was divided. The minister in each of these places and his congregation left there and removed to Watertown, Newtown and Dorchester, in Connecticut, in 1635, and settled in three separate places on the Connecticut river, which they at first called by the names of the places they came from in Massachusetts—Watertown, Newtown and Dorchester. These were the first settlers in Connecticut, and numbered between thirty and forty men in each town.

In 1637 the names were changed—Watertown to Wethersfield, Newtown to Hartford, and Dorchester to Windsor. John Plum came from England in 1635 and settled with those of Watertown (Wethersfield.) His name first appears on the Colonial records there "1-7-1636," at a court held at Watertown that day, and among the proceedings was: "Whereas, there was tendered to us an inventory of the estate of Mr. Jo. Old's," (Oldham) which seemed to be somewhat uncertainly valued, wee, therefore, think meete to, &c. so it is ordered that Mr. Jo. Plum & Rich. Goldersleeve, together with the constable, shall survey the saide inventory and perfect the same before the next courte & then to deliver it into the courte." From February 9, 1637, he was a member of the court till 1642. The General Court was the Assembly of the colony of Connecticut. At a court held at Hartford, March 8, 1636, "Mr. Plum" being a member of the court: the business before it was the shipping of some means to buy corn from the Indians, as the inhabitants were in a starving condition. They agreed to pay from four to six shillings a bushel to it. "Mr. Plum" was appointed to receive the corn for Wethersfield. He held various offices, such as marking the boundaries of towns, laying out roads, determining the links between towns, owing to improving of the lands of the several plantations, attending court as a deputy. He was one of the men in Capt. Mason's little army during the Pequot war in 1637, and received a grant of land for his service. As he was a ship owner, I think he may have owned the ship that carried the 77 men of Capt. Mason's Army around from the mouth of the Connecticut river to the Narragansett, from which they marched over land west, to attack the Pequots at Pequot Hill, Groton now. In 1643 he was nominated for election as "Assistant" but was beaten by Mr. Swaine. In the spring of 1644 5 he was appointed to attend to the clearance of vessels at Wethersfield, Edward Stebbing at Hartford, and Walter Tyler at Windsor. In the fall of 1644 he sold all his land and houses in Wethersfield and removed to Branford. The records of Wethersfield have been destroyed by fire some time in the past, and only a small land record of those early settlers exists. Only one of his children was born in America and no record of any exists, except that his son, Samuel, lived in Branford with him when he died. He is found in Branford in 1645, as the "Keeper of the Town's Book." He died there in 1648. His wife, "Mrs. Plume," administered on his estate August 1, 1648, and with "her son Samuel" filed the inventory. Samuel, his son, with others, in 1666, bought lands in Newark, N. J., and Samuel sold out in 1668 to Brandford and removed to Newark, N. J.

In 1641, "Mr. Plum, Jr.," in Wethersfield, was appointed to serve on the jury. This is supposed to have been a son of John and to have been named John, or he would not have been called "Mr. Plum, Jr.," but, as in those times very few men indeed were given the title of "Mr.," it may be that his father is the one meant, and Jr. only meant Junor. But his father was that same year a member of the Court. He is not known anywhere else.

A John Plum owned a lot in 1667 in Newark, N. J., but left it, and it was given to another person, and he is not known there after 1667. He may be the juryman of Wethersfield of 1641, brother of Robert and Samuel. He was probably a shipmaster, and never made his home at Newark. The Newark land was bought of the Indians by the settlers in 1666. I would much like to know whether this John ever married and had children.

Robert Plume was one of the Proprietors, and first settlers in Milford, Conn., in 1639, and had probably been portioned off by his father at that time, as he was not found having any interest in his father's estate; neither was John.

There was a John Plumbe in Hartford, in 1662-1, who was the son of George Plumbe of Ipswith, Coupe Cases, England. The writer found him on the record there in 1665, and a deed of his wife, Elizabeth, for property equal to property he had previously received from her; and a deed of his is recorded there as late as 1675. He was appointed, by letter of attorney in England, in January, 1660-1, to collect debts of persons in Charlestown, Mass. A grant of land was made by the Assembly to him on his petition in Sept., 1674. He probably removed to New London in 1677, though he had some cases in court at Hartford late in 1677.

John Plumbe, of New London, served in the war against King Philip, the son of Massasoit, in 1675 to '76. He received land for his services, and some of it was probably located in Preston after 1680, and some was perhaps in Voluntown, after 1708. This is the John Plumbe that married a Geere, and lived in New London, after, if not before, the King Philip war, and is probably the John Plumbe mentioned by Gordon Saltonstall to Winthrop, when he says, January 7, 1691-2: "At the anniversary feast at Master Plumle's, and August 6, 1696, "at the anniversary feast at Master Plumle's" "John Plumb tells me that chest glass is not so good as crib glass."—Winthrop Papers. These Plumbs of New London were mariners, and followed the sea, and also ship building. His son George was wrecked on Plumb Island and drowned.

It was probably John Plumb's ship that was captured by the Dutch in July 1665. Martha's Vineyard, Mass., and plundered and then let go.

Among the Winthrop papers are letters from Robert Plumer, of Milford, [illegible] not the dates.

There was a John Plum in Dorchester, Mass., in 1680, who seems to have been a poor person, to whom a pair of shoes was given, but it may have been [illegible] been a soldier in the King Philip war in 1676. There were two John Plums in the war, and a John Plum was killed by the Indians, among Capt. Lathrop's men, at Muddy Brook, September 18, 1675. He was the son of John of Dorches-

A Statement of 1891.

In 1891 Senator Plumb, of Kansas, wished me to go to New England again the third time, and gather up all the remaining Plumbs I could find, and the connecting links in the families we already had that needed joining, and he would see the expenses paid. With the aid of the Hon. Ralph Plumb, of Illinois, and the Hon C. Judson, of Honesdale, Pa., I was furnished with $225.00, and August 1, 1891, I acted on my last tour for these searches, and was engaged in the search about six weeks.

I searched Watertown, Mass., Boston was thoroughly searched, and, with the assistance of C. E. Jenney, Esq., a lawyer, I think I have finally settled the matter of the family of John Plum, of Dorchester, (now part of Boston,) and am satisfied there was no male descendants of his of the third generation. He removed to Rehoboth in 1706, when very old, his wife Mary having died the same year. In the record of soldiers in the Revolutionary War, in the Massachusetts Archives in the Secretary of State's Office, Boston, there was a Sherman Plumb, private and a John Plumb, Lieut but I could find nothing of afterwards. Jared Plumb, of Westfield I found there, and I had Westfield searched for me.

I searched the records of Charlestown, Cambridge, Roxbury, Braintree, Dedham, Hingham; and had Taunton, Rehoboth, and Freetown, Mass., searched for me. I went to Nantucket and searched; and to Rhode Island, and searched Newport, and had Little Compton searched for me.

Then I returned to Conn. and searched New London the third time, and searched Preston, and Norrah, and Lebanon, and the second time to Milford, and Branford, and New Haven, and Hartford, and Middletown; and searched North Lyme and Lyme, Windham, Stonington, Saybrook, Deep River, Norwich, Groton, Stamford, Stratford, Wethersfield, Windsor, Simsbury, Wallingford, Derby, Meriden, Guilford, Norfolk, Farmington and Fairfield. I had Washington and Canaan and a number of others searched for me a number of times, such as Litchfield, Norfolk and New Haven and Milford. The searches, I think, have been pretty thoroughly made in Conn. and Mass.

I searched New York City Surrogate and Land records; and on Long Island I searched Huntington, Jamaica, Hempstead, North Hempstead, Newtown and Oyster Bay, ancient towns settled by New England people. No places in New Jersey were searched, but by correspondence I got some families from private registers.

In Milford, Conn., by the help of N. G. Pond, Esq., an antiquarian of very great experience—an expert—before and after my coming there this time, we found the tombstone of Joseph Plumb and determined the date and age which shows him to have been the husband of Elizabeth Bailey, and of Thankful Gaylord; and that he must have died in Milford and not in Farmington. We deciphered the date and age of Samuel Plumbe, and by the land records found his wife must have been Mehetable Hinde. We found his brother—Joseph Senior's—wife was Susanna Newton, and their son. Joseph 2d's wife, was Rebecca Thomas.

At Branford we found the most important record of all, that John Plum, of Wethersfield and Branford was the father of Robert 1st, of Milford. The record stated that Samuel Plum branded a horse with the town brand, Jan 13, 1658-9, for his "cosen" Robert Plum. The only Robert Plum living in 1658-9 was the son of the 1st Robert of Milford, and was then only 10 years old; at that time in America the children of one's brothers and sisters were called one's cousins.

At Hartford discoveries made by a lady searcher, employed by A. G. Plumb, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., and my own searches for the age of John Plumb of Hartford, and show that he was afterwards the John Plumbe of New London and that his wife's name was Elizabeth "Green" almost to a certainty, as he was too young for the husband of any daughter of Guy and Justice Bainbridge of Banbury. No family of Timothy has been found, but the English records show him to have been a brother of John of Hartford. One record seemed to show he was of Windsor, but I found no trace of him there when I searched it.

Norfolk has only some land records. On these Amariah and his wife, Sarah Aspinwall was found, and their son Amariah (Jr.) But correspondence and a late publication called "Connecticut men in the Revolutionary War," has shown me three other sons of Amariah. (Senior.)

In Middletown, Conn., Bailey, the youngest son of Joseph Plumb and Elizabeth (Bailey,) of Milford, was found; married Abigail Bacon, and had two sons, Bailey and Joseph, and this last Joseph had a son Bailey, and several other children whom I found by correspondence.

In New York city I found the will of Samuel Plumbe, of Huntington, Long Island, who was the son of Green Plumbe and Mary Hempstead, of New London, and is the father of Justus Plumb, of Stratford, Conn.

There was nothing on the records of Nantucket, but a very old man in Nantucket, nearly 90 years, has through his daughter given me the name of a Samuel Plumb there, who died at sea, young, leaving one child, a son, named Samuel also, who died at sea, young, without leaving children. The widow of the last Samuel lived to be very old and died recently in Nantucket. Wm. R. Easton, my informant, thought they came from Long Island.

Through the late Senator Plumb I got extracts from the petitions for pension, in the Pension Office Washington, for the service of Plumbs in the Revolutionary War, and through this means by correspondence I found several families.

By correspondence I found a number of Plum families of German descent, and as they bear the name of Plum, I think they ought to appear here, and I have all I could get, which is but few. I believe they mostly belong to the Dunkard Baptist persuasion, a very honest, industrious, economical, and saving people, and good citizens.

A. G. Plumb, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., did all the work of correspondence and paid the expenses of getting the English records. By these we have the will of George Plume, of Inworth, Co. Essex, the father of John and Timothy, of Hartford; and we find the father and three predecessors of John, of Wethersfield, Conn., and the children of John with dates, and many other families in wills and other ways going back to 1180 A. D.; and many coats of arms of Plumbs, one of which is reproduced in outline, in ink, without colors, in this work.

The New England Plumbs all came from the County Essex, England, but there was an Englishman who came over in 1821 to Pennsylvania, who afterwards went west, his descendants now reside in Dubuque, Ia., and San Francisco, California. He was from Chester County, of the Lancaster County family, who write the name Plumbe. They still reside in Lancaster and York County, in England; but these must appear here, as the father was born in time and these are American Plumbs.

The Plumbs appear to be of pure Norman blood, of the Norman race in England, a race which made England respectable and respected from the beginning of their rule there. This would go to show, that, after the English Normans, the Norwegians are the Yankee's nearest European cousins.

THE ENGLISH RECORDS.

The English records were procured by A. G. Plumb, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, at a heavy expense.

The first of the name is found on the "Great Roll of Normandy," in 1180, during the reign of Henry II, of England; and the next 1195, during the famous Richard's reign. All on the first page of my book I could not tabulate, as I could not follow them from father to son, etc.

The first table begins with the Plume known to be the progenitor of the first American Plumb; the one found at Wethersfield, one of the original settlers of that town (as it was also one of the first three towns settled in Connecticut.) Then the English Church parish registers are followed all the way down with such help as we get from wills and Chancery Inquisitions, and the "Visitation of Essex" in 1634, which served to point out relationships and places of residence and some dates and approximate dates, and some names of sons, born before the register begins [and who were of course baptized somewhere else, or else the registers were lost.]

These tables are all of the County Essex family, and I have written the name as it was found on the record in all cases, the Essex family nearly always wrote the name with only one m with an e at the end—Plume—with a little dash over the m nearly always. There are 13 variations of the name. I begin the English tables with No 1, but these numbers are not continued in the American. The American begin with No. 1 also.

The Essex family began their residence in Essex several generations before the one my tables begin with, but all the registers begin after the connection of the English Church with the Roman Church was served by Act of Parliament in 1534. No register was found older than 1538.

Morant in his history of Essex says the first Plumb he finds there was Robert, who was tenant under the great Earl of Oxford, John DeVere, thirteenth Earl, in the time of Henry VIII. John DeVere died in 1513. Henry VIII's Reign began 1509. This estate was called Great Yeldham, or Yeldham Magna. Morant says Robert the son and heir of the first Robert bought this estate of Edward DeVere the seventeenth Earl of Oxford, for his second son, Thomas Plume, and I have an abstract of the will of Robert the father of Thomas Plume where he wills it to him. His eldest son, Robert, has Spaynes and Butler's Manors, and Edmund the third son is given Hawkdon Hall in Suffolk. This Robert's will is dated 1611-12, and although a very old man, he could not have been born much earlier than 1530, so that instead of Robert the first being his father, he was probably his grandfather, or great grandfather, and I find his father to have been John Plume, who dwelt at Coppersfield at the time of his death, 1586. The "Visitation" of Essex also calls him John. There are no births nor deaths on these registers, only baptisms and burials. (Marriage dates are given.) I use them as if they were birth and death dates, in giving the age.

We have not been able to find the register of the family of John Plumbe, of Hartford and New London, but I have an abstract of the will of George Plume of Inworth, County Essex, England. George's name is written with two m's in the body of the will, but the signature at the end is written Plume, with only one m. I am quite sure he is of the same Essex family as John of Wethersfield, but the connection has not been found. He names his two sons John and Timothy and mentions their being oversea. I found both of them at Hartford, Connecticut, and John afterwards at New London.

The origin of the name of Plume, Plumme, Plumbe and Plumb, and its other variations is unknown; but it can be said that few families indeed, as early as 1180, A. D., had surnames, family names. It must have been a distinguished family previous to 1180 and furnished soldiers to William the Conquerer, in 1066, most likely.

By historians the Plumbs are said to have been originally of Norfolk, Eng., but the first one named is in Herts, in 1240, at Apsedon. But they may very well have been originally seated in Norfolk when they first came from Normandy and settled in England. In 1274 they are found in Herts, Norfolk, Cambridge and Somerset, and in 1385 in Essex, and 1395 in Northampton.

A Statement of 1891.

In 1891 Senator Plumb, of Kansas, wished me to go to New England again the third time, and gather up all the remaining Plumbs I could find, and the connecting links in the families we already had that needed joining, and he would see the expenses paid. With the aid of the Hon. Ralph Plumb, of Illinois, and the Hon. C. Jadwin, of Honesdale, Pa., I was furnished with $225.00, and August 1, 1891, I started on my last tour for these searches, and was engaged in the search about six weeks.

I searched Watertown, Mass., Boston was thoroughly searched, and, with the assistance of C. F. Jenney, Esq., a lawyer, I think I have finally settled the matter of the family of John Plumb, of Dorchester, (now part of Boston,) and am satisfied there was no male descendants of his of the third generation. He removed to Rehoboth in 1706, when very old. His wife Mary having died the same year. In the record of Soldiers in the Revolutionary War, in the Massachusetts Archives in the Secretary of State's Office, Boston, there was a Sherman Plumb, private, and a John Plumb, Lieut. (but I could find nothing of either). Jared Plumb, of Westfield I found there, and I had Westfield searched for me.

I searched the records of Charlestown, Cambridge, Roxbury, Braintree, Dedham, Hingham; found had Taunton, Rehoboth, and Freetown, Mass., searched for me. I went to Nantucket and searched; and to Rhode Island, and searched Newport, and had Little Compton searched for me.

Then I returned to Conn and searched New London the third time, and searched Preston, and Norwich, and Lebanon, and the second time Milford, and Branford, and New Haven and Hartford, and Middletown; and searched North Lyme and Lyme, Windham, Stonington, Saybrook, Deep River, Norwich, Groton, Stamford, Stratford, Wethersfield, Windsor, Simsbury, Wallingford, Derby, Meriden, Guilford, Newton, Farmington and Fairfield. I had Washington and Canaan and a number of others searched for me a number of times, such as Litchfield, Norfolk and New Haven and Milford. The searches, I think, have been pretty thoroughly made in Conn and Mass.

I searched New York City Surrogate and Land records; and on Long Island I searched Huntington, Islipton, Hempstead, North Hempstead, Newtown and Oyster Bay, ancient towns settled by New England people. No places in New Jersey were searched, but by correspondence I got some families from private registers.

In Milford, Conn., by the help of N. G. Pond, Esq., an antiquarian of very great experience—an expert—before and after my coming there this time, we found the tombstone of Joseph Plumb and determined the date and age which shows him to have been the husband of Elizabeth Bailey, and of Thankful Gaylord; and that he must have died in Milford and not in Farmington. We deciphered the date and age of Samuel Plumbe, and by the land records found his wife must have been Mehetable Hinde. We found his brother—Joseph Senior's—wife was Susanna Newton, and their son, Joseph 2d's wife, was Rebecca Thomas.

At Branford we found the most important record of all; that John Plum, of Wethersfield and Branford was the father of Robert 1st, of Milford. The record stated that Samuel Plum branded a horse with the town brand, Jan. 13, 1658-9, for his "cosen" Robert Plum. The only Robert Plum living in 1658-9 was the son of the 1st Robert of Milford, and was then only 10 years old; at that time in America the children of one's brothers and sisters were called one's cousins.

At Hartford discoveries made by a lady searcher, employed by A. G. Plumb, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., and my own searches fix the age of John Plumb of Hartford, and show that he was afterwards the John Plumbe of New London and that his wife's name was Elizabeth "Green" almost to a certainty, as he was too young for the husband of any daughter of Guy and Justice Bainbridge in Banbury. No family of Timothy has been found, but the English records show him to have been a brother of John of Hartford. One record seemed to show he was of Windsor, but I found no trace of him there when I searched it.

Norfolk has only some land records. On these Amariah and his wife, Sarah Aspinwall was found, and their son Amariah (Jr.) But correspondence and a late publication called "Connecticut men in the Revolutionary War," has shown me three other sons of Amariah. (Senior.)

In Middletown, Conn., Bailey, the youngest son of Joseph Plumb and Elizabeth (Bailey,) of Milford, was found; married Abigail Bacon, and had two sons, Bailey and Joseph, and this last Joseph had a son Bailey, and several other children whom I found by correspondence.

In New York city I found the will of Samuel Plumbe, of Huntington, Long Island, who was the son of Green Plumbe and Mary Hempstead, of New London, and is the father of Justus Plumb, of Stratford, Conn.

There was nothing on the records of Nantucket, but a very old man in Nantucket nearly 90 years, has through his daughter given me the name of a (female) Plumb there, who died at sea, young, leaving one child, a son, named Samuel also, who died at sea, young, without leaving children. The widow of the last Samuel lived to be very old and died recently in Nantucket. Wm. R. Easton, my informant, thought they came from Long Island.

Through the late Senator Plumb I got extracts from the petitions for pensions in the Pension Office Washington, for the service of Plumbs in the Revolutionary War, and through this means by correspondence I found several families.

By correspondence I found a number of Plum families of German descent, and as they bear the name of Plum, I think they might to appear here, and I have all I could get, which is but few. I believe they mostly belong to the Dunkard Baptist persuasion, a very honest, industrious, economical, and saving people, and good citizens.

A. G. Plumb, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., did all the work of correspondence, and paid the expenses of getting the English records. By these we have the will of George Plumpe, of Isworth, Co. Essex, the father of John and Timothy, of Hartford; and we find the father and three predecessors of John, of Wethersfield, Conn., and the children of John with dates, and many other families in wills and other ways going back to 1480 A. D.; and many coats of arms of Plumbe, one of which is reproduced in outline, in ink, without colors, in this work.

The New England Plumbs all came from the County Essex, England, but there was an Englishman who came over in 1821 to Pennsylvania, who afterwards went west, his descendants now reside in Dubuque, Ia., and San Francisco, California. He was from Chester County, of the Lancaster County family, who write the name Plumbe. They still reside in Lancaster and York County, in England; but these must appear here, as the father was born in time and these are American Plumbs.

The Plumbs appear to be of pure Norman blood, of the Norman race in England; a race which made England respectable and respected from the beginning of their rule there. This would go to show, that, after the English Normans, the Norwegians are the Yankee's nearest European cousins.

H. B. PLUMB.

THE ENGLISH RECORDS.

The English records were procured by A. G. Plumb, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, at a heavy expense.

The first of the name is found on the "Great Roll of Normandy," in 1180, during the reign of Henry II. of England; and the next 16 years during the famous Richard's reign. All on the first page of my book I could not tabulate, as I could not follow them from father to son, etc.

The first table begin with the Plume known to be the progenitor of the first American Plumb; the one found at Wethersfield, one of the original settlers of that town as it was also one of the first three towns settled in Connecticut. Then the English Church parish registers are followed all the way down with such help as we get from wills and Chancery Inquisitions, and the "Visitation of Essex" in 1634, which served to point out relationships and places of residence and some dates and approximate dates, and some names of sons, born before the register began (and who were of course baptized somewhere else, or else the registers were lost.)

These tables are all of the County Essex family, and I have written the name as it was found on the record in all cases, the Essex family nearly always wrote the name with only one m, with an e at the end—Plume—with a little dash over the m nearly always. There are 17 variations of the name. I begin the English tables with No. 1, but these numbers are not continued in the American. The American begin with No. 1 also.

The Essex family began their residence in Essex several generations before the one my tables begin with, but all the registers begin after the connection of the English Church with the Roman Church was served by Act of Parliament in 1534. No register was found older than 1538.

Morant in his history of Essex says the first Plumb he finds there was Robert, who was tenant under the great Earl of Oxford, John DeVere, thirteenth Earl, in the time of Henry VIII. John DeVere died in 1513. Henry VIII's Reign began 1509. This estate was called Great Yeldham, or Yeldham Magna. Morant says Robert the son and heir of the first Robert bought this estate of Edward DeVere the seventeenth Earl of Oxford, for his second son, Thomas Plume, and I have an abstract of the will of Robert the father of Thomas Plume where he wills it to him. His eldest son, Robert, has Spaynes and Butler's Manors, and Edmond the third son is given Hawkdon Hall in Suffolk. This Robert's will is dated 1611-12, and although a very old man, he could not have been born much earlier than 1530, so that instead of Robert the first being his father, he was probably his grandfather, or great grandfather, and I find his father to have been John Plume, who dwelt at Teppesfield at the time of his death, 1586. The "Visitation" of Essex also calls him John. There are no births nor deaths on these registers, only baptisms and burials. (Marriage dates are given.) I use them as if they were birth and death dates, in giving the age.

We have not been able to find the register of the family of John Plumbe, of Hartford and New London, but I have an abstract of the will of George Plume of Isworth, County Essex, England. George's name is written with two m's in the body of the will, but the signature at the end is written Plume, with only one m. I am quite sure he is of the same Essex family as John of Wethersfield, but the connection has not been found. He names his two sons John and Timothy and mentions their being over sea. I found both of them at Hartford, Connecticut, and John afterwards at New London.

The origin of the name of Plume, Plumme, Plumbe and Plumb, and its other variations is unknown; but it can be said that few families indeed, as early as 1180, A. D., had surnames, family names. It must have been a distinguished family previous to 1180 and furnished soldiers to William the Conqueter, in 1066, most likely.

By historians the Plumbs are said to have been originally of Norfolk, Eng., but the first one named is in Herts, in 1240, at Aspeden. But they may very well have been originally seated in Norfolk when they first came from Normandy and settled in England. In 1274 they are found in Herts, Norfolk, Cambridge and Somerset, and in 1385 in Essex, and 1305 in Northampton.

COATS OF ARMS.

The Coats of Arms described here are only a few of the whole number belonging to the Plumb family in all its branches. The one believed to be the most ancient has a crest "out of a ducal coronet a plume of ostrich feathers." The crest was allusive, and alluded to the name of the grantee—Plume. This one in particular is called "Plume-England." There were at least four others belonging to the Essex families later, but all within the seventeenth century. Several have the grey hound for a crest; and several have other hounds—the otter hound, the talbot, and one a wolf.

The arms of all are very much alike and all are evidently only slight variations of the same original. The difference was in the colors and crests.

Coats of arms were grants from the Kings, the "fountain of honor," and could not be inherited by an American. The English people were the inventors of the English language and they applied the title of "Gentleman" to one possessing a coat of arms, and one not possessing a coat of arms could be no higher in honor or dignity than a "yeoman", in other words not a gentleman. In our country we use the word, but with a very different meaning. I do not know whether the word has changed its meaning in England or not, but I think not. It is usually abbreviated to "gent."

The first American Plumb's father possessed a coat of arms and was a "gent," but his grandfather and great grandfather were not, but died yeomen; and as the American was a younger son, the arms descended to his brother, and afterwards to his brother's son, who all died "gents."

Some Connecticut History.

This is not the place to write a history, but it seems as if no harm can be done by telling some of the reasons why the New England families are so far distributed over the country. In the beginning of course it was only in New England. They received some immigrants from abroad and in their own towns new generations were coming on and they must spread in order to find or make farms for themselves. Their government was only their town government at first and it was all their own. There was no precedent to go by, and they had to learn by experience, and of course there was more or less friction. This helped to drive them off to settle new towns and here again the same thing was likely to occur. Thus was Connecticut settled principally by people from Massachusetts in the close neighborhood of Boston. Boston and the few towns surrounding and adjoining it was settled in 1630. Connecticut was settled from these towns principally, some new immigrants just arrived joined them and this was in 1635. The settlers from Mass. mostly went over land drove their animals of all kinds with them and were several weeks in making the journey of over a hundred miles the way they had to go to get there. They could carry but little food along and yet must live or die.

They settle Wethersfield about 30 miles above the mouth of the Connecticut river, on the west side of the river, and Hartford about 5 miles further up the river, and Windsor about 7 miles still farther up, and Saybrook at the river's mouth.

The whites had been invited to settle there by the Indians. These Indians seem to have been held in subjection by a tribe (living east of New London after there was a New London) called Pequots, and were fearfully oppressed by them, and were at the same time in constant danger from inroads of the Mohawks, west of them, in New York.

The Pequots it appears, had not been consulted by the white people about settling there or if they had, the whites paid no regard to the Pequots claim of dominion. Anyway in the spring of 1637 the Pequots began to murder the white people in their fields where it was absolutely necessary for them to work to raise food for themselves and little ones, for there was no business carried on then but farming and such trades as were necessary for a farming community. They had to go to War with the Pequots, and they had to conquer them or die, for the Indians gave no quarter. The Indians had about 2000 fighting men, about as well armed as the whites, and the whites could muster only 77 men for the war, as I am informed by Richard A. Wheeler, of Stonington, Conn., an Antiquarian and Historian. They had some 700 or 800 Indians as Allies with them, but they were so much afraid of their oppressors that they cowered in the bushes and woods till the whites surprised the Pequots (not yet recovered from a night's drunken spree), and got them on the run, then their Indians could kill and take scalps.

Connecticut could now be held by the whites by right of conquest, but they bought the land for every town from the Indians in its vicinity, for they were all free now from the Pequots. So four years after the settlement of Wethersfield and the other three towns, Milford was purchased and settled in 1639, and one of the settlers was Robert Plume just come of age the year before. In 1644 Branford was settled, and Robert's father and brother Samuel were among them, Samuel not yet of age.

The young generation growing up would be without land. Then from the various towns young men from 30 to 40 in number, mostly just married, would buy a piece of ground from the Indians in a place chosen by them from 5 to 10 miles square, have it surveyed, plotted and numbered, and then the purchasers divided them out by "lot," that is by chance, all having an equal chance to get the best locations, and no one had a right to grumble. Then the building of log huts began, and the same round was run in the town when a new generation came up.

When the land in New England had thus been parcelled out, the new generations had to go west and build up new States with new institutions, and more or less of the early New England "experience" have been incorporated in the later state, town and county governments.

There has been but one Indian War in New England since the Pequot War, and that was the King Philip War; but that was almost wholly in Massachusetts and Plymouth old Colony, in 1675-6. But the Indians have all died off. They seemed to be "wild men," made to live on flesh, and when the vicinity of the whites drove off or killed the wild animals, the Indians could not live on the food of civilized men, and gradually died out. I do not know how this is but this seems to be the case. "Fire Water" certainly has not done it all. It seems an unpleasant thought to lose a race of men, but it is difficult to see how it is to be prevented.

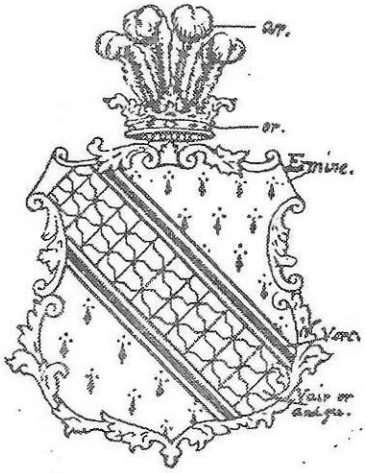
The Plumb Genealogy Completed.

After four years' steady work, personally searching records in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island in New England, and New York city, and seven towns in Long Island, N. Y., that were settled in the early times by New England people, and by correspondence with Plumbs in all parts of the United States, the work is now finally completed.

I think it is the most full and complete of any work of the kind ever done in this country, for the time covered by it, viz: in America, from 1635 down to the children of men who were born previous to or in the year 1860, and in England I have five generations in regular line from father to son from about 1500 or 1505 (for the date of birth of the first known parent could not be found) down to the family of the first one that came to America in 1635, and to the second one that came to America and left descendents in 1680, and back of all these records, Plumbs are found, mostly through their wills, through all the centuries to 1180 A. D., in the Great Rolls of Normandy, thus showing our Norman ancestry in the time of Henry II, the great grandson of William the Conqueror. There are ten pages of the English Plumbs, including short notes of the wills for first page.

I must suppose that all men wish to know their ancestors, especially if their ancestors were of a class that were honorable and deserving, and I have gone back far enough to show that ours were of the class called "gentlemen" in England. And my searches have led me to believe that pretty much all the early settlers in New England were of that class, the landless younger sons and descendents of younger sons of the gentry of England. Very few indeed of the lower orders ever came here even as servants, for the settlers were nearly always too poor to bring servants with them.

I cannot explain here the difference between a hall, a mansion, a house and a cottage, but in England, in the ancient times at least, the names were significant.



PLUMB AND PLUME ARMS.

Ermine, a bend vair or and gules cottised vert.
Crest. Eng. Out of a ducal coronet or a plume of ostrich feathers argent.

Our first American Plumb's father possessed a coat of arms, but I was unable to get it and so I take the one I suppose to be the first granted coat of arms and crest to a Plumb. And this may not be strictly correct, it may be "argent" instead of "ermine." I saw it described in both ways.

There are seven engravings, five portraits, Senator P. B. Plumb, of Kansas; Ralph Plumb, ex M. C. of Illinois; A. G. Plumb, of Iowa; H. H. Plumb, of Pa.; and C. C. Jadwin, ex M. C. of Pa. These are the persons who paid the most of the expenses of this genealogy. Then there are the coat of arms, and the map or plot of ancient Milford, with the name of the owner of each lot, and the ancient palisade around the village to keep off the Indians in case of hostilities.

Seeing what the Plumbs are, I must suppose all the Plumbs will want to know it, and must have this book in every household.

With the assistance of several Plumbs, especially the late Senator Plumb of Kansas, and his widow, the most of the expenses of the work have been paid, so that it is now procurable by Plumbs at probably less than one-fourth what it would otherwise have cost. In fact it would not otherwise have been compiled at all.

Very nearly all the disjoined families of the first edition have been joined on to the others by the discovery of the missing links, and the chain is now complete, and anyone can trace his ancestry back without difficulty in this book to the first one in this country, and three generations back of him in England in the one case and one generation in the other. John Plum of Dorchester, the only other known early English immigrant left no male descendent of the third generation.

There are a number of families of the descendents of German immigrants of the last century, and as they are called Plum, it seemed to me they ought to be in this book, that every Plum of old stock might be able to trace his family back to its origin in this country. These were mostly if not all Dunkard Baptists, as they probably are to-day.

I have also a complete list of the Plumbs that served in the Revolutionary War, so that any Plumb that desires to join the patriotic societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, or the Sons of the Revolution, will find his ancestors in this list of names if he served in that war. There may be some of the Newark family that were not found, as I am quite sure I have not found all the Plumbs and Plumees of that branch of the family. As it is, I have forty names of Plumbs that served in the Revolutionary War.

ANCIENT PLUMBS. ENGLAND.

1180. Robertus Plumme—On Great Roll of Normandy.

John in his will names Robert, Thomas, and mentions the children of John, deceased, his son, and mentions his four daughters without naming them. The will is dated Sept. 29, 1586. Then we have the will of Robert ("the elder") dated January 9, 1611-12, wherein he gives to his children and his 2nd wife's children, and to his sisters, Alice Easterford and Margaret Edgeley's children naming them, and then "To Thomas Plume my eldest brother his son £ 5, and to the children of John Plume which was his eldest son, £ 10. His children are all named in the Visitation in 1634 except those that died in infancy, and their wives and husbands, except Margaret Raye and Mary Wilbore, whose husbands' family names are mentioned in his will in 1611-12. The dates in small figures are not given in the register but are assumed by me. The children of Robert, Thomas and Edmund on the register point to near the date of Robert's marriage, and thus I am enabled to assume a date not far out of place. This Robert owned much land, in Great Yeldham, Little Yeldham, Toppesfield, Walter Belcharnp, Bulmer, Castle Hedingham, Hedingham Sible, and Halsted in Co. Essex, and Clare and other parishes in Suffolk. He gave Spaynes and Butlers manors, and much other land to Robert his eldest son, and he gave Yeldham manor to Thomas, and Hawkedon Hall in Suffolk to Edmund, and he gave land to his 4 married daughters, and to his brothers' and sisters' children he gave money.

I do not know where he was born or the date of birth or marriage, but his children were born in Great Yeldham parish, where Robert resided in Yeldham Hall, I therefore think they were brothers, and he is named by his father in his will in 1586. He died in "Mary Hall" in Waller Belchamp parish. His will is on record, dated June 3, 1611, in which he mentions his sons Robert and Thomas and daughter Margaret, and his "children's children" without naming them. William had died the year before. It looks as if there may have been a death of the 1st wife after Agnes and a 2d marriage and then Thomas.

He was born before the register begins in 1560, as was his sister Margaret; but they are both named in the Visitation of Essex, in 1634, with the other children that grew up, and in the father Robert's will the family name of Margaret's husband "Raye" is given. His son Robert—was the eldest son and heir, and his brother John (who is my progenitor, the John of Wethersfield and Branford Connecticut) received nothing but a small estate with Ridgewell Hall, in Essex, and is named there in 1634 by the Visitation of Essex. Robert's son, Robert's age is found in the Chancery Inquisition on his estate soon after his death in 1628, when his son and heir Robert is declared to be 40 years old and more, and when his mother Grace died in 1615, he was 28 years old, and more. This shows that he—the son—was born in 1587. Robert, the father was seized in fee of the manors of Spaynes and Butlers when he died. As he was not named on the register of Great Yeldham (neither was his sister Margaret) I think they were born before the register begins in 1560. Thomas and Mary were not baptized.

	Say 1620	Robert Plume	Apl. 20, 1658		Son of Robert Plume and Grace Cracklone, born it is supposed in Great Yeldham, though his baptism is not on the register as all his brothers and sisters are, except 2 that seem to have died at birth or before baptism, though they are on the burial register, and are in mind. Robert received pretty much all his father's estate by will and deeds, and all his mother's by descent as the eldest son, and this displeased his brother John and he came to America in 1635. He—John—had Ridgewell Hall, leases, by gift of his father, and there his children were born. At the Inquest on in Chancery on his father's estate in 1628, the court say or the jury say "the said Robert died, 14th August last past, (1628), Robert Plume is his son and next heir and was aged at the time of his father's death 40 years." At the same time the same escheator and same jury say that Grace his mother died 21st July, 1615, and that "Robert Plume, Gent., is the son and heir of the said Grace and at the time of her death was 28 years and more." So then Robert must have been born at least as early as 1587, but he must have been born away from Great Yeldham. His son Robert must have removed from Great Yeldham, as no family of his is found baptized there. He was buried there. This Robert was summoned before the Council of Charles I, on May 16, 1637. The King was governing England then without a parliament, and this was one of the ways of raising money. He may have confiscated the Plume estate, and that would be a reason why they are not found there any more except to be buried. The son was also of Lincoln's Inn.

9, 1617					Son of Robert Plume and Grace Cracklone, born in Spaynes Hall, Great Yeldham parish, resided after marriage in Ridgewell Hall, where he is reported by the Visitation of Essex in 1634. In 1635 he is found in Wethersfield, Connecticut, U. S. He died in Branford, Conn., in July, 1648. The only children known that survived him were Robert, Samuel and Dorcas; and as no Dorcas is found on the register it is to be assumed that she was born later than 1634, the last date he was known to be living at Ridgewell Hall, according to the Visitation of Essex, in 1634. So she must have been born in Wethersfield, Connecticut, U. S. A. He is numbered one (1) on the American lists.

9, 1617			July 18, 1635	18— 2— 19	Son of Thomas Plume and Mary Hammond, born in Yeldham Hall and lived and died there. Morant in the history of Essex says this Samuel's son Samuel was "Of Oxford University, and of Lincoln's Inn, London," but as he died in 1635, at the age of 18 years, Morant is mistaken in the Samuel. Thomas inherited the estate when his father died. Morant says Thomas the son was a linen draper in London, who married 1st Elizabeth Pardieton, and 2d Catharine Bolton, and had Nathaniel born March 2, 1651-2, and was a lawyer of good repute; but Morant is mistaken. The register of Great Yeldham says Nathaniel was the son of Samuel Plume, baptized March 7, 1651-2. I find Thomas had 2 wives Elizabeth ——, and Anne ——, so I place Elizabeth and Catharine as the wives of Samuel, the son of Edmond Plume and Elizabeth Hearne or Heron.

	155	155 George Plume	Say 1607	Say 1632	Grace ——	June 1670		Of Inworth, Co. Essex. From his will and the probate.
		1st Grace ——			George Plume	after 1667		I don't know whose son this is. He makes his will July 25, 1667, and names his wife Grace, and his sons John and Timothy, but no other children. He cuts off John with a shilling and gives all his goods to his wife and Timothy, and directs his executor, Edward Barret the elder, his cousin, to send Timothy his share, as his executor "shall see a most convenient time and passage upon the sea," and after his wife dies her part is to be sent to Timothy. When the will was proved July 18, 1670, it was on the oath of Sarah Plume the widow. We have been unable to find the register of this family or his father, so we cannot say who they are, but as George is a very unusual name I feel quite sure he is the descendant of John of Tenling, and probably a grandson of George son of John. The will of this George shows him to be the father of John Plumbe of Hartford and New London, Conn., and also father of Timothy of Hartford and Wethersfield, Conn. John's age, birth year, is found by an affidavit he made in a case in Hartford in 1666, wherein he said he was then about 32 years old. John was in Hartford as early as 1660.

THE PLUMB FAMILY.

Of Inworth, Co. Essex. From his will and the probate.

I don't know whose son this is. He makes his will July 25, 1667, and names his wife Grace, and his sons John and Timothy, but no other children. He cuts off John with a shilling and gives all his goods to his wife and Timothy, and directs his executor, Edward Barret the elder, his cousin, to send Timothy his share, as his executor "shall see a most convenient time and passage upon the sea," and after his wife dies her part is to be sent to Timothy. When the will was proved July 18, 1670, it was on the oath of Sarah Plume the widow. We have been unable to find the register of this family or his father, so we cannot say who they are, but as George is a very unusual name I feel quite sure he is the descendant of John of Tenling, and probably a grandson of George son of John. The will of this George shows him to be the father of John Plumbe of Hartford and New London, Conn., and also father of Timothy of Hartford and Wethersfield, Conn. John's age, birth year, is found by an affidavit he made in a case in Hartford in 1666, wherein he said he was then about 32 years old. John was in Hartford as early as 1660.

Of Groton, Co. Suffolk. From the Register.

From the will of John Plumbe of Boxford, Co. Suffolk, who appears to be this son, dated April 15, 1622, he names his brother Steven, and has several sisters not named; he names the children of Steven and gives them land at Groton, names his own daughter Elizabeth and her husband Lawrence Lomax; his niece Anne Kimball; his sister's husbands Joh Grymwade and Joseph Gale, and his uncle Miles Marks, who must have been his mother's brother.

Of Groton, Co. Suffolk. From the Register.

Son of William and Agnes it seems, from John's will. He must have been born in some other parish, and probably had many brothers and sisters elder than himself and younger than Agnes, as many as 4 or 5. In his will John says: To my brother Steven, land in Groton, remainder to his son John; to Wm, another son of Steven, land in Groton; to my uncle Miles Marks; to my two brothers in law, Joh Grymwade and Joseph Gale, and niece Anne Kemball, money; all his other kinds to his daughter Elizabeth and her husband Lawrence Lomax, with remainder to their sons, John Lomax and Lawrence Lomax.

As I have no register of the whole family of William, and none of John his son, I make no table of them after Agnes born 1570. A partial one or the filling out of two might be made from the will of this John of 1567.

After a search of some two years in England, we have found the parish register of the family of John Plume, who was afterward the emigrant to Wethersfield, Connecticut. The register was found at Ridgewell parish. He resided in and probably owned Ridgewell Hall, by the gift of his father at the time of his marriage, and he was living there in 1634, as reported by the King's Herald's at the Visitation of Essex Co., in 1634. All his children were born there except Dorcas, who must have been born in Wethersfield as her name was not on the register.

It is well known that John Plum was among the first settlers and proprietors of Wethersfield, Conn., in 1638, and now it seems altogether likely that he sold his little property in Ridgewell, Co. Essex, Eng., early in 1635 and bought, if he had not previously owned, a ship and immigrated to Wethersfield in his own vessel, as he was from the first a ship owner there, and traded up and down the river with the Indians. It is also probable that it was his ship that was used in 1637 to carry the 77 men down the river and around to Narragansett Bay from which the march was made to Pequot Hill —now in Groton—to surprise the Indians. The ship returned after landing the men at Narragansett, to the mouth of the Connecticut river in full view of the Pequots. The Pequots supposed the men had given up the war and gone home, and so they themselves had a drunken spree that night and were taken by surprise by the English attack in the morning just at day-break. The Pequots were totally defeated and the remnant driven west and either killed or captured in the Fairfield Swamp. This pursuit of the Indians showed the land to the whites and 1639 Milford was settled and Robert Plume, who proves to be the eldest instead of the second son, was one of the settlers, and there he married, lived and died.

John, the second son, I have not found, but I seemed to have glimpses or indications of him in various directions and was ready to assert there was such a son, but now the register shows him.

Samuel, the 5th child, was found in Branford, Conn., when the father died, married and lived there till 1667-8, but his wife's name remains unknown.

Dorcas Plum was married in Branford to John Lyman.

Children of Dorcas.

1 Elizabeth, born Nov. 6, 1655, in Branford, Conn.
2 Sarah, born April 11, 1658, in Northampton, Mass.
3 John, born Aug. 1, 1660, in Northampton, Mass.
4 Moses, born Feb. 20, 1662-3 in Northampton, Mass.
5 Dorothy, born June 3, 1665, in Northampton, Mass.
6 Mary, born June 2, 1667, in Northampton, Mass.
7 Experience, born Jan. 8, 1669-70, in Northampton, Mass.
8 Joseph, born Feb. 17, 1670-1, in Northampton, Mass.
9 Benjamin, born Aug. 10, 1674, in Northampton, Mass.
10 Caleb, born Sept. 2, 1678, in Northampton, Mass.

Nothing is known of any of the other children of John Plume and Dorothy ———.

The State Penitentiary now stands on the spot where the dwelling house of John Plume stood in 1644, in Wethersfield, Conn. He owned another house in Wethersfield. At the first town meeting in Totoket, (Branford, Conn.,) he was elected town clerk and held the office till his death. The first town meeting was Dec. 15, 1645.

Mrs. Banbury's or Bainbridge's will reads:

"The last will of Justice Banbury. First I commit my soul to the Lord Jesus Christ, my Redeemer; for that little that I have for dispose of, I give to my daughter Plumbe my feather bed; to Elizabeth Plumbe my silk cap; to my daughter Butlar my cleath gowne and my wattered———; and to Hannah Butlar my silk whood; and fower payer of shoes, two payer to my daughter Plumbe, and two payers to my daughter Butlar's children, and each of them a payer of stockings, and to Deborah Green my bed-sted and all that belongs to it excepting my bed, and my trunk and my box and all that is in them, my warming pan, a chamber pot and an iron skillet, and my stuff gowne and my chaire, my smoothing iron, my tongs and fire shovel and the —— candlestick, and for the five pounds that Joseph Green gave me I give twenty shillings of it to Mr. John Whiting, and the rest of it shall be to pay for my honorable burial." Nov. 30, 1672."

Witness { "Gregory Winterton.
"Jane O. Winterton, her mark."

Hartford, Conn. "Exhibited in Court March 6, 1672-3."

Mrs. Banbury is said to have had 4 daughters, this shows 3 of them, one married a Green, one a Plumbe and one a Butler.

I think it is not unlikely that John, senior, gave his ship to John, jr., when he removed to Branford, and John, jr., being a mariner is not found settled anywhere.

Nothing is known to a certainty of "John Plum, Jr.," but it may be well to say that he, from the indications, probably married somewhere and had children. A John Plum had a lot in Newark, in 1667, or before, (as the land was bought of the Indians in 1666) as in 1667. John Plum is mentioned in a distribution of lots in the town, as having owned a lot—"the seventh to John Plum, now William Camp's." He was not afterwards known there, and what became of him is not known. I think this John Plum, Jr., is the son-in-law of Mrs. Justice Banbury, widow of Guy Banbury.

The numbers 32, 87 and 88 on this page refer to the Nos on the English records.

Of Milford. From the church records and other records by N. G. Pond and H. B. Plumb.

Son of John, Sr., and grandson of Robert 1st of Milford, date of marriage not known. He died in 1716. His estate was administered as to its unadministered part in 1730 by Samuel Plumb, of Derby, and he was also guardian of Rachel his sister in 1734 and before.

Rachel, the widow, died 1728, and gave by will, property to John, Samuel, Jemima and Rachel, and to her grandson, Samuel Adams, son of Jemima.

John's the son's grandfather John, Sr., gave him several parcels of land, including a dwelling house on May 7, 1723. (20 days before he got married.) John's mother was his guardian, Sept. 10, 1716.

Samuel lived in Derby in 1730, but he bought land there in 1728, when he is described as of Milford. He still resided there in 1744.

Jemima had a son by Adams, sometimes called Samuel Plumb. He chose a guardian Nov. 14, 1744, after his mother's death. He was born before 1728.

Seth was married and lived in New Haven till 1749. On Jan. 18, 1750-1, he bought land in Farmington, and he was there in 1756.

Benjamin's adm'r was appointed in the New Haven Probate Court April 29, 1747. Elizabeth Camp was daughter of Enos Camp.

Of Milford and Farmington. From the church and public records.

Son of John Plumb, Sr., and Elizabeth Norton, born in Milford and outlived all his brothers. There is a deed of John, Sr., dated 1719 to him, wherein Mr. "John Plumb, Senior," gives for "love and affection" to his "only surviving son Joseph", some lots of land and limits them to him and his eldest son "according to the laws of England and not of this Government" and makes them "entailed forever." His birth and baptism are not given. There was no minister at the Milford church from 1682 till Nov. 1685, and no record was kept of births then. He was appointed Adm'r of John, Sr.'s estate April 10, 1728. He was called Joseph, Sr., in 1720. He and his wife joined the church June 8, 1718. On Feb. 7, 1743, Charles was appointed "guardian of Bailey Plumb, minor son of Joseph Plumb, late of Milford deceased," by the Probate Court of New Haven, bond £200. Lowis and Thankful were born in Wallingford and recorded there. Gamaliel and Susanna, twins, were recorded on the church records at Milford when baptised there, and all of these together with Amariah, Sibila and Simeon, except Susanna, named in a deed to them at Farmington as the "heirs of Joseph Plumb, deceased," dated Oct. 29, 1745. In another deed dated Oct. 1, 1741, Joseph Plumb buys land in Farmington and is described as of Milford. It is not known where Amariah, Sibila and Simeon were born. Susanna was probably dead when the deed of 1745 was made as she was not named in it as one of "the heirs of Joseph Plumb, deceased of Farmington." Executor was granted letters June 9, 1742.

He died in Milford, it is believed, as he is buried there and his tombstone has been found. It is inscribed "Joseph Plum died May 27, 1742, aged 58 years." His widow was his executrix and in the Inventory she names all her children and gives their ages. He gives all his property to his 2d wife's children and says all his children by his former wife have been fully provided for. It seems he married his 2d wife Thankful Gaylord in Wallingford; the date is not known but was probably in 1727.

Joseph's widow, Thankful, within a year married Hezekiah Rue, and Thankful's children chose Samuel, Joseph and David Gaylord, their uncles, guardians as fast as they became old enough.

		Keziah Allen		May 27, 1723	John Plume, Jr.			Son of John and Rachel. His will dated April 1, 1763, and administered the same year, gives all his estate to his wife, Keziah, and to his daughters, Keziah, Freelove and Eunice. This is strange, as he had a son, John, that certainly grew up and married and had children in Milford. It can only be accounted for by the probability that the estate in land given to him by his grandfather, John, Sr., dated 1723, all descended to his son, John, by virtue of his grandfather's deed, limiting it to his oldest son, and making it unalienable, descended to him whether his father would or not, in spite of his father. He was probably born in 1701 or 1702. His other sons may have been dead.

Son of Joseph Plumb and Elizabeth Bailey, born in Milford about 1715, [illegible] Wallingford, one child born there, removed to Middletown where his home was in very great age, traditions says 95 to 100, but when very old he visited around among his children and grandchildren quite frequently even going so far as Chester, Mass., where two of his sons lived.—It is thought he died during such a visit in Norwich, Conn.

Wait lived and died in Middletown.

John married and removed to Albany, or that region, N. Y., after his son John was born. His wife's name is not known, nor date of marriage.

Reuben married, lived and died in Middletown.

Charles married and removed to Chester, Mass., afterwards to Aurora, Ohio. This is the Charles Plum that served as a marine on the man of war Oliver Cromwell in the Revolutionary War. He was a ship carpenter by trade in Middletown.

Jacob married and removed to Chester, and afterwards to Pennsylvania, and died in Kingston, Luzerne Co., Pa. He was a ship master in his younger days. The date of his marriage is unknown. He was called Captain Plumb, and he commanded a privateer during the Revolutionary War. He then lived in Middletown, Conn.

Of Middletown, Conn. From the records.

Son of Joseph Plumb and Elizabeth Bailey, born in Milford, Conn., and after his father died his brother Charles was made his guardian in 1743, removed to Middletown, married John Bacon's daughter, who for love and affection to his son-in-law
Bailey Plumb and his wife Abigail, his daughter, gives them some land in 1756.
When he died, Bacon administered his estate, and was made guardian of the children, Bailey and Joseph. I conclude there were four or five years difference in the ages of the two boys. I have not found whether the son Bailey ever married and had children or not. These are the only children of Bailey and Abigail I could find. The widow married Ebenezer Hough.
According to my researches this Joseph, the son, served in Capt. Shepard's Company in the Revolutionary War.

Of Norfolk, Conn. From the records. H. B. Plumb.

Son of Joseph Plumb and his 2d wife Thankful Gaylord, born probably in Milford and removed with his father's family to Farmington, in 1741, and after his father's death he chose in 1749 Joseph Gaylord, his uncle, as guardian. He married and removed with his wife's father Aaron Aspenwall, and his own uncles or cousins Samuel and Timothy Gaylord, to Norfolk, Conn., where they were among the organizers of the town in 1758. He marched on the first call for "minute-men" at the "Lexington Alarm"; was at the Siege of St. John, in Canada, and was dangerously wounded, and was discharged as disabled for life. He recovered and enlisted again for 3 years in 1777, and died in the service. His wife Sarah administered his estate July 1778. There was no record of his family to be found, but his sons Amariah, Jr., and Joseph served in the same Company, (Capt. Watson and Capt. Allen) with him in the Revolution. Amariah, Jr., was honorably discharged March 10, 1780 and is found in Norfolk afterwards till 1783-4 on the land records, but no family or wife of his was found. Nothing further is known of him.
Joseph was not found on any record of Norfolk; he is only found on the the Army records, and on the application of Deborah Bentley, his wife, for a pension in 1852.
Caleb I place here, as from the statement of his descendants, his mother was Aspenwell. His great grandson says his grandfather told him Caleb had a brother Amariah as well as Joseph and Abijah.
Joseph and Justus Gaylord, of Norfolk, cousins of Amariah Plumb, Sr., emigrated to Wyoming Valley in 1769. The Gaylords were not part Plumb, but the family of Plumbs were part Gaylord.

They are named in the order given here and Joshua is made executor, and among the bequests is:— ½ share of a right in the Susquehanna purchase, valued at £11, 5s., 0d.

Joshua was executor of his father's estate but is not known further.

Samuel resided in Hudson, N. Y.

David's birth is derived from his age at death. Died in Wisconsin, and a grandson writes us, "his tombstone says he died in 1857, aged 87." From this date 1770 I arrange all the rest at 2 years difference.

All the names of husbands and wives of these children I get from Miss Susie Nichols of Hudson, N. Y., except the name of David's wife.

Jared went to the Western Reserve about 1847.

VI		87 Jacob Plumb	Mar. 27, 1751	Say 1771	Prudence Powers	1822	71—	Of Middletown. From the records and private sources.
		Prudence Powers	Aug. 24, 1748		Jacob Plumb			Son of Waitstill John, was born in Middletown, married there, removed to Chester, Mass., about 1791. His children were all born in Middletown, but there is no record of his children's births. The only record of them is from private sources, as also their husbands and wives. Jacob was a ship master in his younger days, and sailed as Capt. of a Privateer during the Revolutionary War, and afterwards was a cabinet-maker in Middletown, Conn., and in Chester, Mass., died in Kingston, Luz. Co., Pa.
		Children.						Prudence had been married before and Wm. Sizer was a second husband. Her first husband was killed at St. Clair's defeat in Ohio, in 1791.
	171	1 Esther Plumb	Say 1772		John Sizer			Jacob Plumb was born in Middletown, lived with his father in Chester, married his cousin there, lived in Mt. Pleasant, Pittston, Wyoming, Pa., and died in Prompton, Wayne Co., Pa.

		Chloe ———			Joseph Plumb			Son of Bailey Plumb and Abigail Bacon, born, married and had one son in Middletown, removed to Otsego Co., N. Y., where he died. It is very likely all his children were born in Conn., somewhere, before he went to N. Y.
		Children.						The oldest child is on record, but Alanson's birth and death I get from his son Guy, the birth of the others I do not know, but I was told all were born before 1800, and that Alanson was the youngest child.
	175	1 Bailey Plumb +	June 1, 1778		Mary Perkins	1848	70—	I believe this Joseph is the one that served in the Revolutionary War in Capt. Shepard's Co., in Col. Belden's Regiment, 6th Conn. Militia. Capt. Shepard was of Middletown, and Abraham Plum was also of Middletown and served in the same Regt. with Joseph.

		1st ——— ———			Joseph Plumb			Son of Amariah Plumb and Sarah Aspenwall, of Norfolk. I can find no other place for him, and he has a son named Amariah. Two grandsons, now very old men who never saw him, say, one that his name was Alva, that he married a second wife in Chenango Co., N. Y., named Deborah Bentley and went to Canada to Little York; the other does not remember his name. The pension office has an application for pension in 1852 by Deborah Likens, the "former widow of Joseph Plumb," and she says she was Deborah Bentley, when she married Joseph Plumb, in Chenango Co., N. Y., June 22, 1798. She says he was from Litchfield or Fairfield Co., Conn., and served in the Army of the U. S., a good portion of the Revolutionary War, "and died in the Township of Pickering in the Province of Canada." Joseph Plumb served in the 9th Company, 4th Regiment, with Amariah, who I believe was his father, and he afterwards served in Capt. Allen's Company, along with Amariah, and in other Regiments. The son Amariah's wife was a sister of Deborah Bentley. She died and he remarried, but his second wife's name is unknown.

Caleb's place in the list has never been given me. He may have been the eldest. Joseph Anderson lives in Stockbridge, Wis. 1892. His wife was five years younger then he, she died Dec. 1890, aged 77. Wm. W. lives in Centralia, Lewis Co., Wash. Walter D. lived in Sturgis, Mich., and died there. Henry, his son lives there. 1891. Rumsey A. went to the lumber regions in Wis., and never was heard of after. He left two sons, John and Alexander. He lived in Milwaukee, Wis., at the time he left. Alva died unmarried. Elihu B.'s place of residence is unknown. Joseph A. thinks his grandfather's name was Alva, but he never saw him, and I am quite sure he is mistaken. He knows his grandfather served in the Revolutionary War.

		Abigail ——			Parismandus Plumb			Son of Caleb Plumb and Elinor Welch; born probably in N. Y. state, removed to Delaware Co., O., with his father, and to Michigan, where they built a mill. In the War of 1812 the brothers Parysmandus, Agamemnon and Merlin enlisted with Gen. Hull. They were scouting at Hull's surrender and they returned home. Indians followed and the family and others fled and reached Lake Erie, bought a boat and escaped across the Lake to Cleveland. He married in O., had three sons that are remembered, but his daughters are not.

Bryan.
Nov. 1802					I have the children of Joel and Lois from three different persons, neither of them claiming correctness but as the best they can do. I believe in deaths or marriages or dates I have taken something from each. As this one seemed to have more of certain dates than either of the others, I have adopted it for the children's succession; one has Melissa first and another Charles, but with the dates of births as here, nearly.

BIRTH.	MARRIAGE.	TO WHOM MARRIED.	DEATH.	AGE.	REMARKS.
Jan. 4, 1625-6	Say 1649	—— —— / Samuel Plum	Jan. 22, 1703	78— 0—18	Of Branford. From the records by H. B. Plumb, 1889-91. Son of John Plum and Dorothy ——, of Wethersfield and Branford; born in Eng., married in Branford. An inventory of his father's estate was filed in Court at New Haven, Aug. 1, 1648, by "Mrs. Plume and her son Samuel." Her name is not given, and the name of Samuel's wife is not known. John, the father, was made "keeper of the town's book" in 1645, the earliest date on record, Dec. 15. The record says Totoket (Branford) was settled in 1644, by a church congregation from Wethersfield, and John Plum was one of them. On July 7, 1646, there were 35 of them, and land was divided among them each year, and John Plum received lots each year, each time, the last for him being April 4, 1648, he dying in July of the same year, 1648. There is a statement in the book that does not seem to be a record, that the Reverend —— —— came from Wethersfield in 1644 with his whole congregation and settled at Branford, and in 1668 he and his whole "flock" removed to Newark, N. J.

					On June 23, 1668, Samuel Plum sold all the remaining land he owned in Branford —7 lots—and removed to Newark. His children to the number of seven, I found on the record at Branford. Sarah, the last child, was born in Newark. She and her husband are mentioned in her father's will. Her age is not given, but her husband was born in 1674, and is presumed to be as old or older than she.
					The town of Newark was bought in 1666 by settlers from Milford, New Haven, Branford and Guilford, and lots divided as early as 1667, or even before, and a lot was allotted to a John Plum, but he left, and it was given to another in 1667.
					Was he Samuel's brother, John? Was he the second child of John, No. 1, on the American tables, as Samuel was the fifth child?

Say 1677					Samuel is mentioned in his father's will where he bequeaths property to Joseph and Dorothy, children of "my son Samuel." This is all that is known of this son.
					Joseph is not known further.
					Elizabeth Plum, born Jan. 18, 1650, married John Ogden. In his will 1701, John Ogden names his wife Elizabeth and daughter Jemima.

His children, born in Newark, are only known by being named in his will and other wills with their husbands and wives, but no dates of birth or death are given, only date of wills.

This son John Plumbe and wife joined the church in 1693. This is the son who lived, married and died in New London. His marriage, but not his birth is on record. I get all these names of John Plumbe and Elizabeth Green's children from Miss Caulkins' History of New London, and from a paper left by Mrs. Miles' father, Frederick Plumb, as to the wife Green. John was appointed Probate Judge, which he held at the time of his death. Green, lived, married and died in New London, though Miss Caulkins says both he and John went to Milford but returned. His birth is not on record.

Samuel. I assume to be the Milford Samuel, married Mehitable Hine or Hinde.

Joseph I assume to be the Milford Joseph, married Susanna Newton, and was called Senior 1711 to 14.

George married, lived in Stonington, and died on Plumb Island. He was a mariner. His baptism is from Miss Caulkins' History. Descendants of his call him an Englishman, and say he was drowned in a shipwreck on Plumb Island, N. Y.

John Plume, Jr., the son of John of Wethersfield would have been the proper age for one of Mrs Banbury's daughters.

In Hartford, March 1, 1666-7, John Plumbe made over to his wife Elizabeth, to remain to her and her heirs for ever, a cow, a span of horses, and all his movable goods, "in consideration of estate he hath received which once belonged to her." She was fined for selling liquor to Indians, March 3, 1669-70, and she sold liquor to Indians again, April 21, 1671, and her husband, John, was heavily fined. I have a tracing of his signature to a Petition to the Assembly at Hartford for land in 1674 and another tracing of his signature to a bond in New London in 1681, which shows them to be one and the same man. He was a resident of Hartford in 1660, as he was made attorney in fact, to collect debts in Charlestown, Mass., for creditors in England, and was named as son of George Plumbe, of Inworth, Co. Essex, Eng. He was a bearer of dispatches from New London to the Gov. at Hartford in Jan. 1675-6, during the King Philip War. He was granted land along with others or his children were, for services in the King Philip War, and the land was located mostly in Voluntown and Preston.

George Plume's Will. (Essex) Commissary Court, London, England.

"The 25th July, 1667, I George Plomme, of Inworth, in Co. Essex, bay weaver."

"I give to my loving wife, Grace Plumme, two white bay blankets."

"To my son, John Plumme, one shilling in money."

REMARKS.

Of New London. From Caulkins' History of N. L. and from the records by H. B. P.

Son of George Plume, of Inworth, Co. Essex, Eng. George Plume's will dated July 25, 1667, mentions John and Timothy and cuts off John with a shilling, gives two-thirds of his property to Timothy and directs his executors to send it to him at the most convenient time when he can find "passage upon the sea." Will proved at Kelveden, July 18, 1670. He had a wife, Grace, when he made his will, but left a widow, Sarah, when he died. In a deposition made by John in Hartford, Conn., July 11, 1666, he says he is about 32 years old. His wife was Elizabeth, but her family name is not shown, but from such evidence as I have I believe she was Elizabeth Green, daughter of Samuel Green and Jane Bainbridge or Banbury. A paper belonging to Mrs Frederick Miles, left by her father Frederick Plumb, a descendant, says she was Green, but he did not know her first name, and I found one of her sons named Green Plumbe. I find John Plumbe from 1663 on record for a long time at Hartford, but from 1678 the records show him at New London. I only find him on the New London records as selling a brigantine in 1683, and buying a Negro woman, Jenny Already, in 1685. I take his family from Miss Caulkin's history of New London, but I believe he had a daughter Elizabeth older than John. Miss Caulkins says Samuel and Joseph removed to Milford—I find them there—and George removed to Stonington—I find him there. She says he died in 1696. I found "Mrs Plumbe" joined the church in 1691, her son John and his wife join the church in 1693. The baptism of the three last named children is from Miss Caulkins. He was a ship owner and master and owned the Ketch Hartford.

Timothy, his brother, I found owning land in Wethersfield in 1671, and houses in Hartford, 1668-74, and is "rated" in Wethersfield in 1694, but no family of his was found.

This John is the one that writes the "Winthrop Letter," in Oct. 1665, and that has the "Anniversary Feasts" of ship masters, mentioned in Saltonstall letters to Winthrop, in 1691-6, and who tells of the large Meteor seen by him in Oct. 1665, "while rowing in my bote to Groton." In 1674 in a petition to the Assembly at Hartford for land he says he has a large family of children most of whom are boys, so it is probable we do not know all his family by four or more. They would all be older than Green.

A Plumbe married a daughter of Guy and Justice Banbury or Bainbridge, but I do not know what Plumbe it was, nor what daughter it was. Samuel Green married Jane Banbury or Bainbridge. He was born in England in 1615. His children by Jane (his first wife) were:—

Elizabeth Green, born April 16, 1640. { I think this Elizabeth is the wife of John Plumbe of Hartford and New London. H. B. P.

Sarah Green, born Oct 7, 1642.
Lydia Green born Mar. 23, 1644.
Lydia Green, born Apl. 13, 1646.
Samuel Green, born Mar. 6, 1647-8.
Joseph Green, born Nov. 7, 1649.
Deborah Green, born Mar. 19, 1654-5.

I think Justice Banbury's daughters were all too old to be the wife of John Plumbe, of Hartford, as they were the sisters of Jane, the mother of the above children of Samuel Green. Mrs. Banbury in 1672 in her will gives the first item "to my daughter Plumbe," and the second item to "Elizabeth Plumbe"; evidently not her daughter, but probably her granddaughter the wife of John Plumbe; the last item she gives to Deborah Green; probably the sister of "Elizabeth Plumbe," so I think.

He was born probably about 1666. John Plumb was a judge in the county court in 1710, and after, as a decision of his in a Groton School case is on record in June 1712. He died about Nov. 1732 as his will was proved Dec. 4, 1732. He makes his wife, Elizabeth and his son, John, Jr., Executors. Truman and Monrow are named as his daughters' husbands. He and his wife joined the church in 1693. The "Mrs. Plumbe" who joined in 1691 must be his mother. This is probably the John Plumb mentioned in the Winthrop letters 1691-6.

John was named as executor with his mother, Elizabeth, but he refused to serve, but his mother died the next year and then he was executor for her and served, and in 1752 he was appointed executor by the will of his aunt, the widow of Green Plumbe. 		Peter Plumbe . . .			Son of John Plumbe and Elizabeth Hempstead. On Feb. 21, 1748/9 an inventory of his estate was filed, administration or executor's letters granted. In 1751 in the distribution of the estate the children are named in the order here shown. No dates of birth are given. Peter joined the church in 1727, and as no wife is mentioned there, it is supposed he was not married, but he may have been for several years. These dates are pencil guesses, and don't seem to come up to the requirement. Some of the children, perhaps one-half, may have died and these dates do not fit. In 1732, Peter Plumbe and others associated themselves in a stock company for the purpose of trade by sea.

		John Plumbe . . .			Son of John and Hannah; born, married, lived and died in New London. All these names of his children are mentioned on the probate records in his will, probated May 21, 1775. He gives a certain amount of property to his wife, Elizabeth, for her support and for the support of his son John, and gives to his "son in-law, Joshua Plumbe, of Middletown," and directs him to take care of his son John if the mother should die before John. John seems to have been weak minded. (Was he the John Plumbe struck by lightning?) Then he gives to his daughters, Hannah Stow and Elizabeth Harris, and then to his son Nathaniel. The name of Mary I get from the paper left by the father of Mrs. Frederick Miles, and from Joshua and Mary's tombstone.

					Nathaniel is named last in the will. To be the husband of Esther and father of John, born Jan. 11, 1761, he should be the oldest child and born in 1742 and married at 18 years of age, and he was the father of that John.

On the settlement of the estate Elisha, the son, seemed to own an undivided interest in the land much larger than his father. Peter received a double portion of his father's land by will, and Green a single one. March 8, 1797, Elisha bought Peter's estate, 4 acres 135 rods, subject to the widow's dower, for $47.30, sold by John Backus. Peter served in the Revolutionary War, and his son Peter served on the Gun Boat Delaware, in the War of 1812 to 15, and died in Phila., Pa.

		John Plumbe
Say 1782					Son of Nathaniel and Esther, born in New London, lived and owned land in Lyme, Conn., in 1782 sold land in Lyme left to him he says, by his grandmother, Esther Manwarring that had been given to her by her brother John Christopher. His granddaughter, Mrs. Rumsby, thinks his wife was Betsey Plumbe, his cousin. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, Mrs. Rumsby says. I do not find his name on the Connecticut lists. After the War he studied medicine and practiced as a physician. The date of his birth is from the town records of New London, by H. B. Plumb.

Sarah Prime	Dec. 31, 1768	73— 10— 14	Son of John Plumbe and Elizabeth Green, born in Hartford, probably, and as a child of 7 or 8 years, he went to New London with his father, removed to Milford, where he married, lived and died. Miss Caulkins says he was the son of John. His will is dated May 22, 1728, and in it he wills a half a lot of land in New London, and says the other half belongs to the children of Joseph Plumb of Milford, deceased. Will proved June 12, 1728. He names all his children except the first Samuel and Hannah. Jonathan is to have the home lot when his mother dies. Samuel and Mehetable sold land a number of times which was evidently hers and each time it was bounded on one or the other or on two sides by some one of the Hindes showing, that they were brothers of hers, but they are not called so by name, still I am satisfied she was a Hine. His tombstone inscription says he died May 19, 1728, but it was probably May 29. His first two children have birth dates and baptism dates. His age was on the tombstone very indistinct, but I believe it was 58. Joseph and Ezra removed to Litchfield; Joseph about 1738 and Ezra about 1735. Ebenezer removed before marriage to Guilford, about 1730. Jonathan was alive in 1740 and sold land. Nothing more known of him. Samuel chooses his brother Joseph in 1739, as his guardian. Samuel's wife was Sarah, her family name not known. All the children except Joseph, Mehetable and the last Samuel, have only dates of baptism given, and some of the dates would be impossible as birth dates, but Samuel's death is known and his age given on his death record is 84, he might have been born in 1710 or 11, probably 1710.

Apl. 27, 1720	Mar. 29, 1739	Ezra Plumb			Ezra was a son of Samuel and Mehetable of Milford; removed to Litchfield in 1733, or, as it is said, 13 years after Litchfield was organized a town, which was 1719. He and his brother Joseph went there and died in Litchfield. Ezra returned to Milford only to sell his land, while Joseph seems to have still lived in Milford two years or so before finally going to Litchfield to reside.
May 9, 1742	Feb. 3, 1762	Jacob Harrison			Ebenezer, the son, was born in Litchfield, died there. An Ebenezer Plumbe served in the Revolutionary War and received a pension, and lived in Middlesex Co., Conn., in 1832; if the Ebenezer in this family died in 1829, he cannot be the soldier pensioned.

1715		Samuel Plumb	May 28, 1781	66—	Son of Samuel Plumbe and Mehetable Hinde. He was under age at his father's death and chose Joseph, his brother, as his guardian. His birth or baptism is not on the record of his father's children, but he is named in his father's will, and the year of his birth is only found from the inscription or private record, where date of his death and his age at the time is given. His brothers before him, except Joseph, have only the date of baptism, and they may have been many months or years old at the time, though it was generally done soon after birth. I have computed ages from baptisms as if they had been birth dates. I have not found his son Samuel anywhere else. Mehetable Plumb and Duncan Weir's son, was the grandfather of L. C Weir, Manager of the Adams Express Co.'s Western Department, at Cincinati, O. He helped me greatly in finding the Plumbs in the West.

), Sr.	Say 1671	Say 1700	Susanna Newton	Mar. 1714	—	Of Milford. From the probate records, by H. B. Plumb.
'ton	July 1673		Joseph Plumb, Sr.			I cannot account for this Joseph, called senior, in 1711, unless he is the son of John Plumbe and Elizabeth Green, of New London. Miss Caulkins' (Hist. N. L.) says Samuel and Joseph removed to Milford. This would be about 1692 or 3, when this Joseph would be about 20 or 21, and Samuel older, say 22 or 23. The exact date of his birth is unknown. His widow took letters of administration on his estate, April 8, 1714, and in the distribution, the names and ages of his children are given in years. I believe him to be the son of John Plumbe and Elizabeth Green, of New London, and so number him. Susanna was the daughter of Capt. Samuel Newton. Ann and Noah deeded land to Joseph, their brother, in 1731, and removed, it is supposed. The second wife of Noah is called by the family Abigail Curtis, but she had no children. They are all from Abiah Platt. Mr. Pond, of Milford, says his wife was Abiah Platt, (now proved by a recorded will) daughter of Joseph Platt. That is the first wife. Samuel Plumbe, No. 507, in his will, 1728, says the heirs of this Joseph own half of a lot of land in New London, and he, Samuel, owns the other half, which he bequeaths.

nas			Joseph Plumb			Son of Joseph, Sr., and Susanna. He and Rebecca joined the church in May, 1738. He was the 2d Joseph in age in Milford, in 1738. This is the one that made a will to his grandchildren, the children of Isaac, except that he gives nothing to David, and made Susanna and her husband, Ebenezer Martin, the executors. Inventory in 1790, will dated, February 4, 1789. Ann Gibson was the daughter of David and Abigail (Brinsmade) Gibson, born in 1732. Susanna and Ebenezer Martin lived in Hillsdale, N. Y., in 1781. The Hall Genealogy gives the death and age of Rebecca Plumb, the daughter of Joseph, 2d. Rev. H. E. Hayden, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

tt		Say 1736	Noah Plumb	After 1756		Son of Joseph Plumb, Sr., and Susanna Newton, of Milford. Removed to Stratford. His will was proved Feb. 5, 1776. This is taken from a history of Stratford, and as historians have but little time to search for genealogies it is doubtful as to its perfect reliability. It is only adopted by me because I could find nothing of it on record and would have to take this or nothing. Lived in Stratford as early as May 6, 1747, as he and wife belonged to the church there. Mr. Pond says his wife was Abiah Platt, daughter of Joseph Platt. The history says the second was Abigail Curtis. Joseph Platt mentions his daughter, Abiah, in his will, wife of Noah Plumb, of Stratford. I think Joseph is the soldier in Major Skinner's Regiment in the Revolution. Descendants of David reside in the neighborhood of Birmingham, Conn., 1892.

ardson	b. 1679 Sept. 10, 1690	Dec. 2, 1708 Dec. 2, 1708	Prudence Richardson George Plumbe	After 1719	40–	Of Stonington. From the records, by H. B. Plumb. Son of John Plumbe and Elizabeth Green, of New London; removed to Stonington before marriage; married, lived, and died while residing there. He was a ship-owner and ship-master sailing to the West Indies, and also traded along our coast. He was once fined in Barbadoes, Dec. 17, 1715, for coming there from New London without his clearance papers signed by the collector. There was no "collector of the port" of New London at that time, which was certified by the Governor of Connecticut to the Governor, Col. Lowther, of Barbadoes. George and his wife joined the church March 12, 1710. Shipwrecked and killed, according to a descendant, on Plumb Island, N. Y. He was a sea captain or "ship-master." His descendants of this day call him an Englishman. He is alive in 1719, as on April 23, 1719, the Governor and Council order him to take certain measures at his sloop where they had the small-pox on board.

There was a record of the transfer of an ear-mark of his to James, May 2, 1792. That of Samuel to James would seem to show that Samuel, the father, had just left, and that James, and Nathaniel, (to whom an ear-mark was transferred the same month,) were there living still, probably as farmers, in 1792. Aug. 14, 1746	Say 1770	Lucy Layton	About . 1820		Of Stonington, Conn., and Vt. From private persons' recollections.
		Samuel Plumb			Son of Samuel Plumb and Grace Babcock, born in Stonington, married there, and all his children were born there. His birth is in the Stonington records, but all the rest is the recollections of his family by old persons who knew them all with their wives and husbands, but only the date of Grace's birth and marriage and children and death has been kept in a family register. Under these conditions there of course are mistakes, but this is the best that I can do. He and his family removed to Vt., where he died, and where the most of his family, married, lived and died.

Minor		Dec. 24, 1752	Dec. 5, 1773	Joseph Plumb						Son of Samuel Plumbe and Grace Babcock; born in Stonington, Conn., married and removed to Vt., then to Westfield, N. Y., and died in Vt. Deborah and Susannah both died in Rutland, Vt., but I understood he died in Castleton, Vt. He was a Soldier in the Revolutionary War, was in Fort Griswold, opposite New London, when it was captured by the English in 1781, but crept out and escaped the massacre of the prisoners that surrendered. This was the "raid" of the traitor Arnold, Sept. 6, 1781.

THE PLUMB FAMILY. 91

	Say 1625	Say 1650	Mary ——	After 1707		Of Dorchester, Mass. From the records by H. B. Plumb, and C. F. Jenney, of Boston.
			John Plum	Apl. 18, 1706		It is not known whose son this is. He appears in Dorchester on the church records as early as 17—12—1654, which is Feb. 17, 1654-5. Waiting and Samuel are on the birth records, the others are all on the records of town proceedings, or court, or land records, and all are known to be his children, except Ebenezer. Mr. Ebenezer's daughter, Sarah's birth is on the Boston records, as is his death, that is Ebenezer's. John Plum was appointed administrator, of his son John's estate, April 18, 1676, and I assume that son to be the John Plum, killed by the Indians, when they destroyed Capt. Lathrop and his men at "Bloody Brook," Sept. 18, 1675. Thomas Chub married Mercy, and lived at Beverly, Mass. Thomas Plum was rated for taxes in 1683, but was under age in 1681-2, as he was an apprentice, and his father brought a suit for him in court. Mary was bound out to service with "Praisecver Turner," May 12, 1672, at Northampton. Turner was killed by the Indians there in 1675. After his wife's death John Plum removed to Rehoboth, Mass. 1707, and was admitted to full membership in the church there, so says the church record in Dorchester. I can find no other John Plum but this one—the father—to be the soldier in Capts. Johnson, Jacob, and Holbrook's Company, 1675 and 1676-7 in the "King Philip War." He must have been 50 years old or more then. He was with Capt. Johnson in the assault on the Indian Narragansett Fort, 19th Dec., 1675, when Capt. Johnson was killed in the assault at the entrance to the Fort. Nothing is known further of this family. He owned a lot of 30 acres of land in Dorchester near the Dedham Mills, which was granted to him by the Town, the 6th of the 1st-month, 1665. I found no children of Thomas. I think this family runs out here.

	Dec. 23, 1687
			Susanna Hall			Of Dorchester, Mass. From the records.
			—— ——			This may be the son of Samuel, born 1659-60, but I do not know. The record says Samuel Plum, son of Susanna Hall, was born Dec. 16, 1689. The probate records say Katharine Williams "spinster," was appointed administrator of the estate of her "brother, Samuel Plumb," on "Sept. 17, 1724." "Soldier." Now should I say she (Susanna) married 1st —— Plum, 2d Williams. I do not know what the record means. I know of no issue of this Samuel.

b	Say 1761	Mar. 13, 1786	Chloe Allen	1804	38—	Of Milford, Mass. From Mrs. Julia Ann L. Plumb, widow of Samuel.
	June 11, 1766	Mar. 13, 1786	Samuel Plumb			I do not know whose son this is. He would come in about the right place for a grandson of Samuel Plumbe and Anne, of Huntington, L. I., N. Y., through their son Samuel, but I have found nothing of this son Samuel, except, the mention of him in his father's will, nor have I found any descendant of Timothy or Stephen, who are also named in the will. It is said when he came of age he came to Milford, Mass., from Long Island, N. Y., and married in Milford, but died in Medway, Mass. He would be about the age of Samuel, of Derby, born about 1765, but I have nothing to connect him with the Derby Samuel. He could only be a grandson of the Huntington Samuel, but I have no evidence of it. Samuel, the son, died, leaving a wife, Julia Ann L. Plumb, who is still alive, (born Nov. 23, 1813,) living in Boston, Mass., Brown's Court, Charlestown District, 1892. She can give me no account of this family back of these, nor of Allen's children.

					Served in the Revolutionary War and is named as a pensioner in East Haddam in 1840, then aged 74; so must have been born in 1766. He was pretty young for a soldier in even the last year of the war, 1782-2, only 17, but he could serve. I do not find his parentage or birth anywhere. There had been a family of Plumb's living there and one of them named George, born in 1762, had been in the Army and drew a pension, but he died in 1838, so his birth and pension and death were different from the above George's. 	[illegible]	Mehitable —— Samuel Plumb	June . 1728		Of Milford. From the records, church and others. Whose son this is is not certainly known. Miss Caulkins's History of New London says: John Plumbe and —— Green, his wife, came there to live in 1679, and children were born and baptized—Mercy in 1677, George in 1679, and Sarah in 1682; that he had children older than these—John, Samuel, Joseph and Green; that Samuel and Joseph went to Milford to live. Counting back the births from Mercy would fetch Samuel about the right age for this Samuel. On his death in 1728 his son Joseph, the executor, found property of his father's in New London, which was appraised by John and Peter Plumbe, of New London. He was a shipwright by trade. I am satisfied he is the son of John of New London. Joseph, son of Samuel, removed to Litchfield about 1733. Ebenezer removed to Guilford about 1730, where he married. Ezra removed to Litchfield about 1733. Of Jonathan I have no further account.

Joseph died in Litchfield, but it is not certain when he went there to live, as in selling his land in Milford he is not called of Litchfield till 1735. He was a weaver by trade. He had no son as far as known, and his wife's given name is the only one known. This name Sarah has caused some confusion, as another Joseph, not more than 20 years younger, also had a wife named Sarah, and both bought or sold land in Milford about the same time, or part of the same time, and there is no family town record of the family of either of them.

Aug. 5, 1739	Bef 1767	Mary Skeels Ebenezer Plumb	Apl. 17, 1821	81— 8— 12	Of Stockbridge, Mass. From private records by Hon. Ralph Plumb, Ills. Son of Ebenezer and Patience, of Guilford, Conn., born in Guilford, removed to Richmond, Berkshire Co., Mass., married and again removed, this time to Stockbridge, where he was admitted to the church by letter from Richmond, Sept. 27, 1795, where he remained till his death. His children's births, except two, are not known, and so, as usual, are guessed at, as well as his marriage, reckoning always at two years for each child, unless there is good reason for varying from that rule. What became of Ebenezer, Calvin, Joab and William? These names of children I take as given, whether they come in regular rotation as born I do not know, but if they do they are not far in birth from the guesses made, as in so large a family two years between births very nearly always fit.

These children were probably all born in Richmond, though the tradition says he lived there only a short time, but the date of admission to the Stockbridge church by letter from Richmond seems to tell a different story.

New England Hist. & Gen. Register, vol. 47, p. 346-347

Eleazar Aspinwall lived long in and about Brookline, on Capt. Sharp's farm. He made bricks. After he married he went to the government farm at W allingford, and in a stone house about halfway between Hartford and New Haven he made his home. He was in Canbridge 18 Dec 1701, in Roxbury 14 Apr 1712, and in 1720 moved to Farmington, Conn., and died there

Peter Aspenwall, Toxteth, Warrington. Lancs., to Dorchester, The New England Hist and Gen. Register vol. 105, p. 94 gives proof of Connection, Peter Aspinwall as son of Thomas Aspinwall, not Edward Aspinwall as is sometimes thought/

The Genealogist, London, vol. 33, p. 27, also discusses and vol. 33. p. 244-245 gives ancestry of Thomas Aspinwall

From back of p. 13.

In the New Eng. Hist. & Gen/ Reg., vol. 105, p. 94-95

where Thomas Aspinwall is listing his debts and gifts he says
"to my children by my wife MARY .....Which was my mother-in-law's gift, XLli by old Gyles, his gift" Looks like his wife is Mary. ...Could she be Mary Gyles?????
